THE IMPORTANCE OF "THE UNIVERSAL PENMAN" IN RELATION TO MODERN CALLIGRAPHY

LATE in the seventeenth century English calligraphy became important and influential on the course of writing styles for the first time. To be sure, Alcuin of York helped to establish the Caroline minuscule as a nearly universal script in the early ninth century. But the minuscule was not an English hand. William Caxton, who introduced printing into England in 1476-7, used a local, rather crabbed hand (sometimes said to be his own) on which to base his over-admired type. Esther Inglis, most gifted of sixteenth century calligraphers working in England, was really a French woman. So we come, without reason for pause, to the galaxy of English writing masters of the late seventeenth century: men like Cocker, Ayres, More, Smith, Seddon, and Snell, who inspired an even larger group of professional scribes in the first quarter of the eighteenth century. From 1680 to 1740 hardly a year passed without an important copy book appearing. And all of this activity and interest was caused by just two things: the rising importance of English commercial enterprise, and the development, under these writing masters, of a round, even, flowing hand for business correspondence, which proved to be a well-nigh perfect technique when used by well trained clerks. It was legible, neat in appearance, and, above all, swifter in execution than any of the hands practised at that time elsewhere in Europe. Thus one is not surprised to find that even such practical men of affairs as Samuel Pepys became interested in good writing, and collected copy books and specimens of the period.

In 1733 an enterprising engraver and calligrapher, George Bickham, decided it was time to make a compendium of contemporary English work. The importance of the English writing masters was then patent to everyone. And yet, without considerable means and great trouble, a representative collection of their different hands as adapted to various purposes could not be gathered together. Therefore, he began his monumental work, "The Universal Penman", which is the subject of this present, much needed facsimile. This he issued to subscribers in a series of parts. Fifty-two of them appeared altogether—not one a week, as was the practise in later, more efficient times, but over a period of eight years. The astonishing fact is that this work today remains the only reasonably complete representation of English writing styles of a given period!

After the parts of "The Universal Penman" had been sent to subscribers, those who desired to keep them permanently customarily had them bound up. Naturally, since they were for use more than for aesthetic enjoyment, many parts had been lost. Moreover, Bickham himself seems to have made a considerable number of substitutions. The result is that whether so-called "complete" copies were bound up from the plates which the subscribers brought in, or were made up at Bickham's place of business, or in his house, they varied widely as to the number, the order, and even the identity of the plates. Ambrose Heal, the leading bibliographer of English writing masters, specifies that 212 plates, numbered consecutively, are comprised in a perfect copy. We may, therefore, take this figure as the standard of perfection, but must realize that only a few copies will meet it, and that even these will undoubtedly contain certain variations in bibliographical details. The present facsimile is that of an ideally perfect copy.

Bickham was not thinking about such minutiae during the eight years of his work. He was a professional engraver, who turned his hand to all the types of work that came to him. Twenty-five penmen would appear to have contributed specimens for him to engrave. Among these were the best masters of the day: Austin, Bland, Brooks (both William and Gabriel), Chambers, Champion, Clark, Morris, and Vaux. But also amongst them we find three men of his own name, with varying initials, whom we may suspect to have perhaps been sometimes identical with himself. We know that his son(?), George Bickham, Jr., was only a professional engraver and not a writing master. Nor does George Bickham (Senior) remember to sign or date all of his plates. His address varies frequently. Thus we suppose that, like most artists, George Bickham was simply habitually careless!

The "Universal Penman" is a rare book today in anything like complete state and in good condition. It is folio size, easily broken with usage. It is of a kind which collectors have not happened to take up in their somewhat haphazard search for beauty and curiosity. So copies were either worn out by hard usage, torn up by the thoughtless, or left to be ruined by dampness and by neglect. This process was furthered by the fact that the art of writing, about one hundred years ago, began to fall into very low estate. When the typewriter came, it submerged what little calligraphic interest remained; for even account books and legal documents could then be more legibly typed than written by long hand. Naturally this same development has had a wide effect on handwriting in general. One cannot say that the average man's hand today is properly legible. It is too hurried, too undisciplined. It is certainly completely without consideration for beauty and grace.

But in spite of current bad habits, and apparent public apathy, there is an awakening perceptible. Many professional artists and some intelligent critics and teachers are already aware of it. This movement may have had its origin in the Morris revival, but it can be more clearly traced to the lectures of Edward Johnson and Graily Hewitt in England and Germany, about 1905-6. In this country it can be credited to William A. Dwiggins as much as to anyone. For decades now he has very subtly, and convincingly, proved by his designs, first for commercial advertising, and later for magazine covers, book jackets and title pages, the effectiveness and decorative quality of good lettering. Following his lead, other artists have begun to redesign every sort of label, sign, advertisement and poster—not perfectly, of course, but with increasing respect for traditional writing hands, particularly the greatest school of all, the Italian humanistic school of the sixteenth century. One has only to look back at placards of the late nineteenth century to see what enormous strides have already been made. But one should also look at American paper currency and postage stamps to see what remains to be done still.

Today, photo-mechanical reproductive processes give us an opportunity, without precedent since the Middle Ages, to develop fine writing hands for effective use, as well as for their beauty. As printers and publishers are alike beginning to realize, they furnish an increasingly easy means of printing texts as well as titles without having to set up, or to use, type. One can simply reproduce the author's (or designer's) writing hand. This offers much greater latitude in the arrangement of pages, and particularly in fitting diagrams or illustrations in with text. Indeed, one has all the freedom that the scribe and illuminator had at the end of the Middle Ages! Books may be just as gay with color and as harmonious in style. Finally, it has been definitely proved that the human eye reacts more favorably to the slight unevenness of writing than to mechanically perfect type. The adjustment to reading a cursive hand as easily as formal letters is a very slight one. There may even prove to be less fatigue to the eye.

Altogether, there are many reasons why every intelligent person should take a renewed interest in good handwriting. The range is infinitely greater than in types, and much more individuality is possible. The publisher of this facsimile of "The Universal Penman", therefore, deserves to be thanked and congratulated. For he has made readily available a book which the student and the professional letterer must possess. As for the intelligent amateur, he may well find in it seed for thought and emulation, as well as sincere aesthetic pleasure.

To my much Honoured, and Very worthy Subscribers.

Gentlemen and Ladies,

Tho' it must be Acknowledged that there is already extant a large Variety of Copy-Books, and several of them executed by very Able and Eminent Penmen; Yet, I think, I may venture to assert without Vanity, that None of them are so Copious, so Universally Useful, or Adorn'd, in so fine & beautiful a Manner, as the following Composition.

This being the Last Essay, in all probability, that I shall make of so extensive a Nature, I shall use my utmost Art and Industry to make it the best, and most complete. And I presume No One will doubt of my Veracity in this particular, that considers the Terms of my Proposal, and that my Encouragement wholly depends on the Merit of the Performance.

As therefore 'tis my own Interest to Study to excel, I doubt not but you will continue, as you have begun, to support so expensive an Undertaking, and permit me to usher it into the World, under Your Patronage and Protection. And if I am but so happy as to succeed in so laborious an Attempt, and answer the Expectations of my Friends, I shall despise the idle Cavils of a few envious Critics, who are ever ready to censure what they never can be able to amend.

That you may all long continue to promote and encourage This, and every other Useful Art, in which the Interest and Glory of your Country is any ways concerned, and become Shining Examples of Virtue and good Manners, is the Sincere Wish of

Gentlemen and Ladies,

A Poem, On the Universal Penman: By Mr. John Bancks.

Whether the Memphian Priests, or Hebrew Sages,
First painted Language on the leafy Page:-
The vast Invention doubtless came from Heaven.
And with it half Humanity was given. —

Hail happy Art! to Science near ally'd;
The Scholar's Treasury, and the Merchant's Guide.
Learning, thro' thee, descends to distant Times;
And Commerce travels o'er remotest Climes.
Thou chain'st Events which Ages widely part,
Convey'st the Lover's Wish, reliv'st the laboring Heart.

But Use alone was what they first pursued;
The Characters were few; their Figures rude;
Succeeding Masters heighten'd up th' Intent;
Gave the free Stroke, and added Ornament. —

Last rose th' Engraver's imitating Skill,
That traced them off, and multiply'd at will.
Both Arts in Britain now unrival'd dwell:
Till the last excellent, we ever most excel. —

Hail happy Artists! for each other born,
Whose Works, united, mutually adorn.
Till Bickham's Age such Penmen had not been;
Till theirs, like his no Hand was ever seen.
With Rules so just, Examples so refined;
So aptly chose, and various in their kind.
They leave no Room to emulate their Art;
For since a Plan thus finish'd in each Part,
No future Age shall give, no former gave:
What They alone could write, No only could engrave.

To the
Writers of the Universal Penman.

Gentlemen—

As every Art is more or less Valuable in proportion to its extensive Usefulness, so the Art of Writing claims our highest Esteem, it being One of the greatest Blessings Man can Enjoy. Every Attempt therefore to improve and bring it nearer to perfection, as 'tis a publick Good, is doubtless intitled to a publick Encouragement.

And, as I have been favour'd with your friendly Assistance in Compleating my Universal Penman, I question not but it will meet with the desired Success, and answer in every particular the Expectations of the Curious.

The whole having met with the Approbation of the best Judges, I take this Opportunity to pay You my grateful Acknowledgments for Assisting me therein; and shall always Esteem it as a particular Favour confer'd on

INTRODUCTION.

The Use of the Pen is of so great Importance to Mankind in general, and so indispensably necessary for the Man of Business, that I think it needless to make any Apology for the Publication of this Work.

However, since something may be expected, by way of Preface, to a Book so Useful and Entertaining, I shall take the Liberty to transcribe <sup>e</sup> Thoughts of a very ingenious Author on this Occasion, which I imagine will not only be instructive, but also very applicable to my present Undertaking.

WRITING is the first Step, and Essential in furnishing out the Man of Business. And this Qualification is more excellent, as 'tis more useful in Business, and beautiful to the Eye, & may not improperly be consider'd in two Respects, as it proceeds from the Eye and the Hand. From the one, we have Size and Proportion; From the other, Boldness and Freedom. For as the Exactness of the Eye fixes the Heights and Distances, so the Motion of the Joints, and Position of the Hand, determine the black and fine Strokes, and give the same Inclination and Likeness in the Standing & Turn of the Letters.

But, in Order to write well, there must be just Rules given, and much Practice to put 'em in Execution. Plain, Strong, and neat Writing, as it best answers the Design for Use and Beauty, so it has most obtain'd among Men of Business. A full, free, open Letter, struck at once, as it discovers more of Nature, so it gives a Masterly Beauty to the Writing; to which may be added such ornamental Turns

Turns of the Pen, as seem rather design'd to fill up Vacancies on the Paper, than studiously compos'd to adorn the Piece. In Flourishing the Fancy would be so Luxuriant, was it not corrected by the Judgment, as almost to destroy the End of Writing, as Airs in Musick, when too often repeated, or too long or too variously performed, disorder the Harmony of a just Composure.

But, as above, if Usefulness and Beauty are the Excellencies of Writing, that which will, with the greatest Facility, contribute to these, is the best Method of Teaching. Supposing, therefore, the Make and Proportion of the Letters and Joinings to be once well fixed and understood, and then if the Learner is us'd to copy the great Variety of Examples which are here produc'd, his Hand will grow confirm'd in an Aptitude and Readiness, which will insensibly arrive at Perfection and Dispatch, and give in Writing what we admire in fine Gentlemen; an Easiness of Gesture, and disengag'd Air, which is imperceptibly caught from frequently conversing with the Polite and Well-bred.

DRAWING is another necessary Qualification, and therefore I have attempted to make the Decorations of this Work fit for the imitation of those, whose Genius prompts them to the Study of that Art.

But as Writing is the most Useful Accomplishment of two, I have given a larger Number of Specimens for that purpose; Exhibited in Precepts Divine and Moral, with many Examples in Trade and Business.

And as the Whole is compleated, through y<sup>e</sup> friendly Assistance of several Eminent Penmen, and Engrav'd with the greatest Care and Exactness; I make no doubt but it will meet with a favourable Reception from the Publick; & that I my Self shall be excus'd for attempting so Universal a Performance.

G.Bickham.

READING and WRITING.

By the Arts of Reading and Writing, we can sit at Home and acquaint our selves with what is done in all the distant Parts of the World, & find what our Fathers did long ago in the first Ages of Mankind.

The Art of Letters does, as it were, revive all the past Ages of Men and sets them at once upon the Stage; and brings all the Nations from afar, and gives them, as it were, a general Interview; so that the most distant Ages of Mankind may converse together, and grow into Acquaintance.

Among all the Inventions of Mankind none is more Admirable, necessary, useful or convenient than Writing, by which a Man is enabled to delineate his very Conceptions, communicate his Mind without Speaking, and correspond with his Friend at ten thousand Miles distance, and all by the Contrivance of twenty four Letters. Vizt. Aa b c &c

J. Geo. Buckham.

Esq;

If anything could excite me to think well of my own judgement in the Art of Penmanship, it would be your desiring me to Assist you in the Writing some part of yo. New Copy Book.

As your Design is both laudable & Useful, I willingly embraced the Opportunity of serving You, and have therefore sent you a Page on the Art of Writing, & as you Approve of that I shall be ready to do you further Service —

That a Work of this Nature hath been long wanted admits of no Exception, and yo. Abilities to execute it are too well known to need any Recommendation. What you have Engraved for my late celebrated Master, M<sup>r</sup> Charles Snell, & several other eminent Penmen are sufficient Testimonies.

Nothing, in my Opinion, can be more Advantageous to the Publick than the Work you are at present engaged in, and that your Labour may meet with Encouragement equal to your Merit is the Hearty Desire of

Sir,

London

Your very humble Servt

On the Art of Writing.

Hail mistick Art! which Men like Angels taught,
 To speak to Eyes, and paint unbody'd Thought!
 Tho' Deaf, and Dumb; blest Skill, reliev'd by Thee,
 We make one Sense perform the Task of Three.
 We see, we hear, we touch the Head and Heart,
 And take, or give, what each but yields in part.
 With the hard Laws of Distance we dispence,
 And without Sound, apart, commune in Sense;
 View, tho' confind, nay, rule this Earthly Ball,
 And travel o'er the wide expanded All.—
 Dead Letters, thus with Living Notions fraught,
 Prove to the Soul the Telescopes of Thought;—
 To Mortal Life a deathless Witness give;—
 And bid all Deeds and Titles last, and live.—
 In scanty Life, Eternity we taste;—
 View the First Ages, and inform the Last.—
 Arts, History, Laws, we purchase with a Look,
 And keep, like Fate, all Nature in a Book.

Josephus Champion Script.

EDUCATION.

A human Soul without Education is like Marble in the Quarry, which shews none of its inherent Beauties till the skill of the Polisher fetches out the Colours, and discovers the ornamental Clouds that run thro' the body of it. Education draws out to view every latent Virtue n<sup>o</sup> without such Helps would never be able to make their Appearance.

We rise above one another in y<sup>e</sup> Esteem of y<sup>e</sup> World by different degrees of Perfection proportion'd to the Want or Advantage of a liberal Education.

William Leekin scrip.

Education.

Children, like tender Oziers, take the Bon,
 And as they first are fashion'd always grow,
 For what we learn in Youth, to that alone
 In Age we are by second Nature prone.

All Youth set right at first, with Ease go on,
 And each new task is with new pleasure done,
 But if neglected till they grow in Years,
 And each fond Mother, her dear Darling spares,
 Error becomes habitual, and you'll find
 'Tis then hard Labour to reform the Mind.

Youth like the soften'd Wax with ease will take Those Images that first Impressions make,
 If those are fair their Lives will all be bright,
 If foul they'll cloud it all with Shades of night.

Willington Clark scrip:

Education is y Learned Alchymist that purges away our Dross & sublimes our Dispositions. That reads us Lectures of Use upon every turning and winding of our Actions, informs us in our general and particular Duties, Teaches us to worship Heaven, to honour our Parents, to reverence our Elders, to subject our selves to the Laws, to obey our Governor, to love our Friends, to cherish our Wives, be affectionate to our Children, and not injurious to any.

Command of Hand.

Sure in its Flight, tho' swift as Angels Wings; —
 The Pen commands; & the bold Figure springs: —
 While the slow Pencil's discontinu'd Pace, —
 Repeats the Stroke, but cannot reach the Grace. —

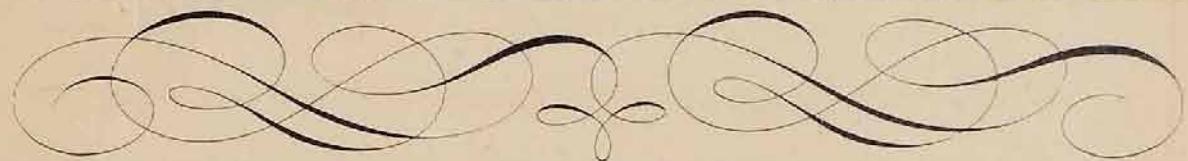

How justly Bold, when in some Master's Hand, —
 The Pen at once joins Freedom with Command! —
 With Softness strong, with Ornaments not vain; —
 Loose with Proportion, and with Neatness plain; —
 Not swelld, yet full, compleat in evry Part, —
 And Artful most, when not affecting Art. —

O'er Virgin-Paper when the Hand we trace, —
 How new, how free, how perfect evry Grace! —
 So smooth, so fine, the nimble strokes we view, —
 Like Trips of Fairies o'er the Morning-Dew. —

VIRTUE.

As Virtue in general is of an amiable and lovely Nature, there are some particular kinds of it which are more so than others, and these are such as dispose us to do good to Mankind. Temperance and Abstinence, Faith & Devotion, are in themselves perhaps as laudable as any other Virtues, but those w<sup>ch</sup> make a Man popular & belov'd, are Justice, Charity, Manservice, and in short, all y<sup>e</sup> good qualities y<sup>e</sup> render us beneficial to each other.

The two great ornaments of Virtue, which shew her in the most advantagious View, and make her altogether lovely, are Chearfulness and Good Nature. These generally go together, as a Man cannot be agreeable to others who is not easy within himself. These are both very requisite in a virtuous mind, to keep out Melancholy from the many serious Thoughts it is engag'd in, and to hinder its natural hatred of Vice from swivring into Severity and Censuriousness.

W. Clark scrpt.

Virtue.

With glittering Beams & native Glory bright,
 Virtue, nor Darkness dreads, nor covets Light;
 But from her settled Orb looks calmly down,
 On Life or Death, a Prison or a Crown.

Virtue's the chiefest Beauty of the Mind,
 The noblest Ornament of Human-kind;
 Virtue's our Safeguard, & our guiding Star,
 That stirs up Reason, when our Senses err.

True Sons of Virtue, mean Repulse disdain,
 Nor does their shining Honour ever stain;
 Their glorious Minds are so securely great,
 They neither swell, nor sink at turns of Fate.

W<sup>m</sup> Leckey Scrip.

Virtue.

*Virtue is the Friend of Life, the Soul of Health,
The poor man's Comfort, & the rich man's Wealth.*

Virtue & Friendship above all things, purchase to men Love and Good-will.

*Virtue has Secret Charms which all Men love,
And those that do not choose her, yet approve.*

Virtue and Arts are attained by frequent Practice & Perseverance.

By Virtuous Use thy Life and Manners frame, Manly and Simply pure, and free from Blame.

ADVICE.

*Learn to contemn all praise betimes;
For flattery's the nurse of Crimes.*

*Seek you to train your favorite Boy?
Each Caution, ev'ry Care employ.
And ere you venture to confide,
Let his Preceptor's heart be try'd;
Weigh well his manners, life, & Scope,
On these depends thy future hope.*

*With early Virtue plant thy breast,
The specious Arts of Vice detest.*

RELIGION.

Moral Virtues themselves without Religion are but cold, lifeless & insipid. 'Tis that which opens the Mind to great Conceptions, fills it with the most sublime Ideas, and warms the Soul more than sensual Pleasures.

Glory of God, Man's Good, are the fixed Poles
On which the Sphere of true Religion rolls.

Religion better qualifies all sorts of Men, and makes them in publick Affairs the more serviceable; Governors apter to rule wth Conscience, and Inferiors for Conscience sake more willing to obey.

W. CLARK SCRIPSIT,

Religion.

Hail! gentle PIETY! unmingle Joy! —
 Whose fulness satisfies, but ne'er can cloy! —
 Spread thy soft Wings o'er my devoted breast,
 And settle there an everlasting Guest! —

Let homage be to pure Religion paid, —
 Seek her Protection, and implore her aid, —
 That she may keep thy Soul from harm secure,
 And turn thy Footsteps from the Harlot's door.
 Who with curst Charms lures the unwary in, —
 And feathes with Flattery their souls to Sin. —

Religion.

The commands of Heaven in the observance of which Religion principally consists, are very plain & obvious to the meanest Understanding; and are nothing else but Exhortations to Love, and directions for social Happiness.

Great is the steadiness of Soul and Thought,
By Reason bred, and by Religion taught:
Which like a Rock amidst y<sup>e</sup> stormy Waves,
Unmov'd remains, and all Afflictions braves.

Divine worship is that which distinguishes us from the Brutal part of the creation, more than that ray of the Divinity our reason it self: For they frequently discover some affinity to the one, but in no one Action whatsoever betray the least resemblance to the other.

Wisdom, and Beauty.

There is nothing which gives one so pleasing a Prospect of human Nature, as the Contemplation of Wisdom and Beauty. The latter is peculiar to that Sex which is therefore called Fair; & when both meet in the same Person the Character is lovely and desirable.

Beauty, like Ice, our Footing does betray:
Who can tread sure on the smooth slipp'ry Way?
Pleas'd with the Passage we slide swiftly on,
And see the Dangers which we cannot shun.

Wisdom is glorious and never fadeth away, yet she is easily seen of them that love her, and found of such as seek her: For she goeth about seeking such as are worthy of her, sheweth her self favourably unto them in the Way, and meeteth them in every Thought.

You have so well improv'd your Self Abroad in the Athenian Schools, & so familiariz'd the Roman Student with the Grecian Tutors, that their Learning is, by your Means, become Naturaliz'd at Rome: whatever the Athenians had Monopoliz'd you have made Common to the Romans, who are beholden to your laborious Translations, that they can now Read the Musick of Pythagoras, the Astronomy of Ptolemy, the Arithmetick of Nicomachus, the Geometry of Euclid, the Divinity of Plato, the Logick of Aristotle, and the Mechanicks of Archimedes in the Latin Tongue: All which you have adorn'd with so much beauty of Language, & illustrated with so great propriety of Expression, that even the Original Authors, did they equally understand both Idioms, would prefer your Work to their own.

Learning.

How pleasant, and how sweet it is, to see —
 Riches and Grandeur mixt with Decency! —
 But much more Sweet, thy labring Steps to guide
 To Virtue's heights, with Wisdom well supplyd,
 And all the Magazines of Learning fortifyd.

A little Learning is a dangerous Thing,
 Drink deep, or taste not the Pierian Spring.
 There shallow Draughts intoxicate y Brain,
 And drinking largish sober us again.

Fir'd with the Charms fair Science does impart,
 In fearless Youth we tempt the Heights of Art,
 While from the bounded Level of our Mind,
 Short Views we take, nor see the Lengths behind,
 But more advanc'd behold with strange Surprize,
 New, distant Scenes of endless Science rise.

LEARNING.

The Design of Learning, is either to render a Man an agreeable Companion to himself, and teach him to support Solitude with Pleasure; or, if he is not born to an Estate, to supply that Defect, and furnish him with the Means of getting one.

*Look cautious round, your Genius nicely know,
And mark how far its utmost Stretch will go.*

Nobility, Riches, State, and, Supremacy can procure us a customary Respect, & make us the Idols of an unthinking Crowd; but Knowledge and Learning alone recommends us to the Love of those in a superior Class, who admire more the Merits of our Understanding, than the Advantages of our Birth & Fortune.

Aristotle says, that to become an able Man in any profession, three things are necessary; that is to say, Nature, Study, and Practice.

He most improves who Studies with Delight,
And learns sound Morals whilst he learns to write.

 Of Health, of Wealth, of Honour, and of Arts.
 Such as court Fame must not their senses please,
 Her Chariot lags when drawn by Sloth and Ease.

Industry

 And Teaches Labour, gathering all She can,
 Then brings it to increase her Heap at home,

Industry

So true to Industry, and so zealous for Employment have wise Men been in all Ages, that they have look'd upon Idleness and Inactivity as Crimes of a heinous Nature, and those who have search'd into Human Nature observe, that nothing so much shews the Nobleness of Soul, as 't is. Felicity consists in Action.

Industry is needful in every condition of Life, we cannot without it act in any State decently or usefully either to the benefit or satisfaction of others, or to our own. Advantage or Comfort, it is requisite for procuring Ease, Sweet and Satisfaction to the Mind, attended with a good Conscience, sweetens our Enjoyments, and seasons our Attainments, is a Guard to Innocence and a Bar to Temptations.

W. Clark scripsit.

Idleness.

If we look back into the Old World, we shall find that all its Vigour was owing to Exercise, Sprightliness, and Activity: Luxury & Idleness, first debilitated & impaired the strength of Nature.

The first Physicians by Debauch were made,
Excess began and Sloth sustains the Trade.
By Chase our Long-liv'd Fathers earn'd their Food,
Toil strung the Nerves and purif'd the Blood.

Action keeps the Soul in constant Health, but Idleness corrupts, and rusts the Mind; for a Man of great Abilities may by Negligence & Idleness become so mean & despicable, as to be an Incumbrance to Society, and a Burthen to himself.

Honesty.

An Honest Mind, safely alone,
 May travel thro' the burning Zone;
 Or thro' the deepest Scythian Snows,
 Or where the fam'd Hydaspes flows.

Honesty, could it be discerned by our naked
 Eye, would, in the Opinion of Plato, win us to an Inexpressible Love of Wisdom.

Convince the World that you're devout, & true,
 Be just in all you Say, and all you Do;
 Whatever be your Birth, you're sure to be
 A Peer of the first Magnitude to Me.

HONESTY.

An honest Man's Dealings are square and above-board; he discovers the Faults of what he would sell; restores the over-seen Gain of a false Reckoning; and esteems a Bribe venomous, tho' it comes gilded over with the Colour of Gratuity.

*Short is the Date in which ill Acts prevail,
But Honesty's a Rock can never fail.*

The Cheeks of an honest Man are never stain'd with the Blushes of Recantation, nor does his Tongue falter to make good a Lie, with the secret Glosses of a double or reserv'd Sense. His fair Conditions are without Dissembling, and he loves Actions above words, hates falsehood more than Death, is a faithful Client of Truth and no Man's Enemy.

John Day scriv.

Discretion.

Discretion does not only shew it self in Words, but in all the Circumstances of Action, and is like an Under-Agent of Providence to guide and direct us in the ordinary Concerns of Life.

If we look into particular Communities & Divisions of Men, we may observe that it is the Discreet Man not the Witty, nor the Learned, nor the Brave who guides
the Conversation, and gives Measures to the Society.

There are many shining Qualities in the Minds of Men, but there is none so useful as Discretion; it is this indeed which gives a Value to all the rest, which sets them at Work in their proper Times and Places, & turns them to the Advantage of the Person who is possessed of them.

Gabriel Brooks, scripsit.

Falshood.

---

Whatever Convenience may be thought to be in Falshood and Dissimulation, it is soon over; but the Inconvenience of it is perpetual, because it brings a Man under an everlasting Jealousy and Suspicion; so that he is not believ'd when he speaks Truth, nor trusted when, perhaps, he means Honestly.

---

*Let Justice o'er thy Word and Deed preside;
And Falshood shun as a Deceitful Guide.*

An Untruth in Discourse is a Disagreement between the Speech and the Mind of the Speaker. When one thing is Declared and another Meant, words are no Image of the Thoughts; it makes the Marks of Speech insignificant, and the Meaning of one Man unintelligible to another; this is a breach of the Article of Commerce, and an Invasion upon the Rights of Society.—

MODESTY.

A just and reasonable Modesty does not only recommend Eloquence, but sets off every great Talent which a Man can be possessed of. It heightens all the Virtues in it, it accompanies like the Shades on Paintings, it raises and rounds every Figure, and makes the Colours more beautiful tho' not so glaring as they would be without it.

*Immodest Words admit of no defence,
For want of Decency is want of Sense.*

*Modesty is not only an Ornament, but also a Guard to Virtue. It is a kind of quick and delicate feeling in the Soul, which makes her shrink and withdraw her self from every thing that has Danger in it. It is such an acquisit Sensitive-

*In modest Actions there are certain Rules,
Which to transgress confirms us Knaves or Fools.*

Good-Nature.

 Who can be harsh that sees another kind?
 Mildness and Temper have a Force divine,
 To make ev'n Passion with their Nature join.

 Good-Nature binds more easy, yet more strong
 The willing Heart, and only holds it long.

*Good-Nature and good Sense must ever join;
To err is Human, to forgive, Divine.*

Good-Sense and Good-Nature are never separated, tho' the ignorant World has thought otherwise; Good-Nature, by which I mean Beneficence and Candor, is the Product of right Reason, which of necessity will give allowance to the Faults of others, by considering that there is nothing perfect in Mankind.

Envy, and Detraction.

Envie will Merit as its shade pursue; But like a shadow proves the substance true. For envy'd Wit, like Solothrop's, makes known The opposing Body's grossness, not its own.

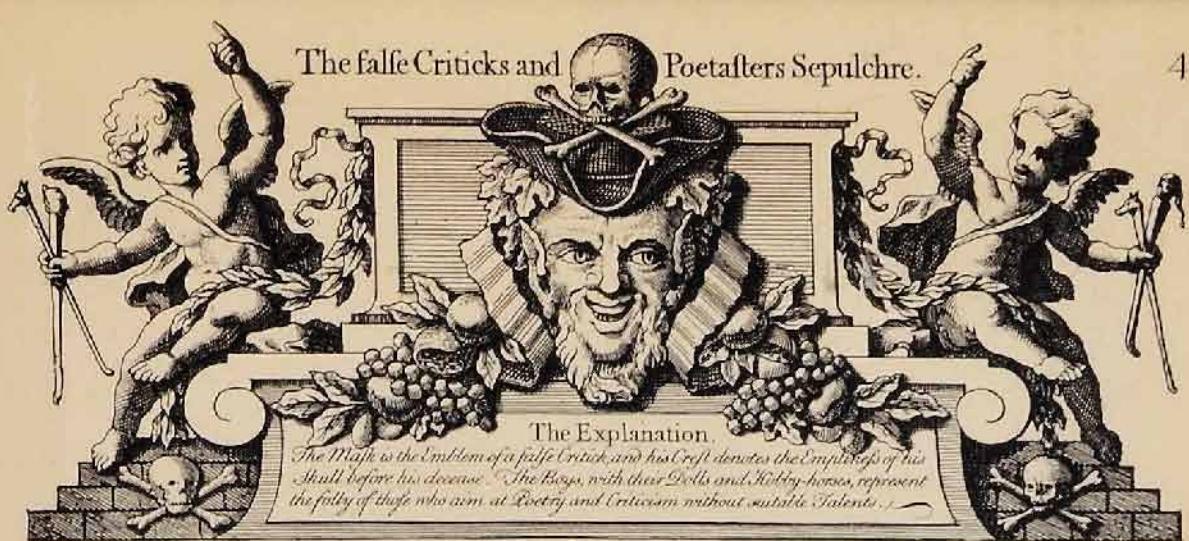

Keep no Company with a Man who is given to Detraction, to hear him patiently, and shew a Countenance of Encouragement is to partake of his Guilt, and prompt him to a Continueance in that Vice, which all good Men should shun him for.

There is a Lust in Man no Charm can tame, Of loudly publishing his Neighbour's shame; On Eagles Wings Immortal Standalos fly, While Virtuous Actions are but born and die.

Criticism.

One great Mark, by which you may discover a Critick who has neither Taste nor Learning, is this, that he seldom ventures to praise any Passage in an Author which has not been before received and applauded by the Publick; and that his Criticism turns wholly upon little Faults and Errors. This part of a Critick is so very easie to succeed in, that we finde every ordinary Reader, upon y<sup>e</sup> publishing of a new Poem, has Wit & Ill-natur enough to turn several Passages of it into Ridicule, and very often in y<sup>e</sup> right Place.

Errors, like Straws, upon the Surface flow; ~
He who would search for Pearls must dive below.

A true Critick ought to dwell rather upon Excellencies than Imperfections, to discover the concealed Beauties of a Writer, and communicate to the World such things as are worth their Observation. The most exquisite Words and finest Strokes of an Author are those which very often appear the most doubtful and exceptionable, to a Man who wants a Relish for polite Learning; and they are these, w<sup>ch</sup> a sour undistinguishing Critick generally attacks with y<sup>e</sup> greatest violence.

Criticism.

In Poets, as true Genius is but rare,
True Taste as seldom is the Criticks share;
Both must alike from Heavn derive their Light,
These born to judge, as well as those to write.

Let such teach others, who themselves excel,
And censure freely, who have written well.
Authors are partial to their Wit, tis true,
But are not Criticks to their Judgment too?

A perfect Judge will read each Work of Wit,
With the same Spirit that its Author Writ;
Survey the Whole, nor seek slight Faults to find,
Where Nature moves, & Rapture warms y' Mind.

CRITICKS.

A famous Critick, says he, having gathered together all the Faults of an Eminent Poet, made a present of them to Apollo, who received them very graciously, and resolved to make the Author a suitable Return for the Trouble he had been at in collecting them. In order to this, he set before him a Sack of Wheat, as it had been just threshed out of the Sheaf. He then bid him pick out the Chaff from among the Corn, & lay it aside by it self. The Critick applied himself to the Task with great Industry and Pleasure, and after having made the due Separation, was presented by Apollo with the Chaff for his Pains.

WIT, and HUMOUR.

Marble, or Brass, devouring Time may waste,
But Wit, as long as circling Time shall last,
That ever lives, nor can to Death submit;
No Tomb he needs, whose Monument is Wit.

Wit, like Beauty, triumphs o'er the Heart,
When more of Nature's seen, and less of Art.

True Humour must always lie under the Check of Reason, and it requires the Direction of the nicest Judgment, by so much if more as it indulges it self in the most boundless Freedoms. In short, it must consist in a Pleasantry deriv'd from Nature, in Vicinity and Mirth without Affection, bounded by Truth, and supported by good Sense.

Man is the merriest Species of the Creation, all above and below him are serious. He sees things in a different Light from other Beings, & finds his Mirth rising from Objects that perhaps cause something like Pity or Displeasure in higher Natures. Laughter is indeed a very good Counterpoise to the Spleen, and seems but reasonable that we should be capable of receiving Joy from what is no real Good to us, since we can receive Grief from what is no real Evil. April 11.

---

Laughter while it lasts, slackens & unbrates the Mind, weakens the Faculties, and causes a kind of Remissness and Dispolution in all the Powers of the Soul: & thus far it may be look'd upon as a Weakness in the Composition of human nature. But if we consider the frequent Reliefs that we receive from it, & how often it breaks off gloom which is apt to depress the Mind, and damp our Spirits with transient unexpected gleams of Joy, one would take care not to grow too wise for so great a Pleasure of life.

Decency.

The Comeliness of Person and Decency of Behaviour add infinite Weight, what is pronounced by any one. Tis the want of this that often makes the Rebukes and Advice of old rigid Persons of no Effect, and leave a Displeasure in the Minds of those they are directed to. But Youth and Beauty, if accompanied with a graceful and becoming Severity, is of mighty force to raise even in the most Profligate a sense of Shame. In Hellot the Devil is never describd ashamed but once & that at the Rebuke of a Beauteous Angel.

Friendship

All other things desirable in Life are good as appropriated to some particular. — Money serves our Uses, Riches procure us Respect, Honours gain us Applause, Pleasures contribute to our Enjoyment of the World, Health secures us against Pain, and gives us the true use of our Limbs. Friendship contains in it a number of Conveniences; it is of Service in all Exigencies and Circumstances of Life, is to be excluded from no Place, or Occasion, can never be Unseasonable, never Troublesome.

Tell me, ye knowing and discerning Few, — Who by a secret Sympathy can share
 Where I may find a Friend who's firm & true, — My Joy, my Grief, my Misery, my Care;
 Who dares stand by me, when in deep distress, — He must be prudent, faithful, just & Wise;
 And then his Love & Friendship most express'd, — Who can to such a pitch of Friendship rise.

A Faithful Friend is a strong Defence; and he that hath found such an one, hath found a Treasure. Nothing doth countervail a Faithful Friend, and his excellency is unvaluable. A Faithful Friend is the Medicine of Life, and they that Fear the Lord shall find him. Whoso feareth the Lord shall direct his Friendship aright; for as he is, so shall his Neighbour (that is his Friend) be also.

By way of ADVICE.

INTRODUCTION.

Before Marriage we cannot be too inquisitive and discerning in the Faults of the Person beloved, nor after it too dim-sighted and superficial. However perfect and accomplished the Person appears to you at a distance, you will find many Blemishes and Imperfections in their Humour, upon a more intimate Acquaintance, which you never discovered or perhaps suspected. — Here therefore Discretion and Good-nature are to shew their Strength; the first will hinder your Thoughts from dwelling on what is disagreeable, the other will raise in you all the tenderness of Compassion and Humanity, and by degrees soften those very Imperfections into Beauties. —

To set Marriage in its proper light, we ought to consider it as a State of Grace, and the first Ordinance of God to Mankind; as a Business of the greatest Importance in Life, and a Change of Condition, we cannot make with too much Reverence and Deliberation. Septem<sup>r</sup>. 1735.

Hail wedded Love, mysterious Law, true Source
 Of Human Offspring, sole Proprietary
 In Paradise, of all things common else! —
 By Thee adulterous Lust was drivn from Man
 Among the bestial Herds to range; By Thee,
 Founded in Reason, loyal, just, and pure,
 Relations dear, and all the Charities —
 Of Father, Son, and Brother, first were known.
 Perpetual Fountain of domestick Sweets! —
 Here Love his golden Shafts employs, here lights
 His constant Lamp, and waves his purple Wings.

The Art of growing Rich consists very-much in Thrift. All Men are not equally-qualified for getting Money, but it is in the Power of every one alike to practise this Virtue.-

Wisdom of King Solomon in getting Great Riches.

King Solomon made a Navy of Ships on the Shore of the Red Sea, in the Land of Edom. And Hiram sent in the Navy his Servants, Ship Men that had Knowledge of the Sea, with the Servants of Solomon. And they came to Ophir, and fetch'd from thence Gold four hundred and twenty Talents, and brought it to King Solomon. Now the Weight of Gold that came to Solomon in one Year, was six hundred three score and six Talents of Gold. Besides that he had of the Merchant Men, and of the Traffick of the Spice Merchants, and of all the Kings of Arabia, and of the Governors of the Country. And all King Solomon's drinking Vessels were of Gold, and all the Vessels of the House of the Forest of Lebanon were of pure Gold, none were of Silver; it was nothing accounted of in the days of Solomon. For the King had at Sea a Navy of Tharshish, with the Navy of Hiram; once in three Years came the Navy of Tharshish, bringing Gold, and Silver, Ivory, and Apes, and Peacocks. So King Solomon exceeded all the Kings of the Earth for Riches, and for Wisdom. 1 Kings Chap. IX. Ver. 26, &c.

Frugality; Most Commonly Practised In Old Age.

Old Persons are apt to dread a Misfortune more than others; they have observ'd how Prodigality is punish'd, and Poverty neglected. They are sensible their Strength decays, and their Infirmities increase; and where Labour is impracticable, and Recovery dispair'd, Parsimony has not only a better Colour, but is very commendable, and therefore ought to be carefully Practised.

Ambition

Ambition raises a secret Tumult in the Soul, it inflames the Mind, and puts it into a violent Hurry of Thought: It is still reaching after an empty imaginary Good; that has not in it the Power to abate or satisfy it.

Be not too fond of Honour, Wealth, or Fame,
 Since none of these can beautify the Mind;
 But may Ambition and your Pride proclaim,
 And render you the best of Human-kind:
 When true Humility, without all these
 May make you Happy, & shall make you Please.

A Poem on Fame:

By MR. JOHN BANCKS.

Imaginary Good, or true,
Immortal Fame! Thee all pursue,
Thee make their End in all they do.

For Thee y<sup>e</sup> found their Thoughts impart;
The Bard his Muse; the Shield his Art.
Tis Thou that warmst the Soldier's Heart.

Yet what Thou art, we thus admire,
For which we labour, pant, aspire,
How shall we learn? of whom enquire?

If mere Delusion of the Mind,
Whence are we seriously inclin'd
To court a Shade, a Breath of Wind?

Or if Thou art a real Good,
How can thy Worth be understood,
Thro' Pain, or Poverty persuad?

Can all the Wreaths that crown his Head,
Compensate now, to Homer dead,
The living Homer's Want of Bread?

Yet who would not a Beggar be,
To grow as much renoun'd as He?
Methinks, I wish y<sup>e</sup> were offerd Me!

Thou art, at least, a specious Bait;
And if Thou wantest nought in Weight,
There's Something sweet in y<sup>e</sup> Decay.

HONOUR.

On polish'd Springs, true Men of Honour move,
Free is their Service, and unbought their Love.
When Danger calls, and Honour leads the way,
With Joy they follow, and with Pride obey.

Not all the Threats, or Favours of a Crown,
A Prince's Whisper, or a Tyrant's Frown;
Can awe the Spirit, or allure the Mind,
Of him who to strict Honour is inclin'd.

Honour! that Spark of the Celestial Fire,
That above Nature makes Mankind aspire,
Ennobles the rude Passions of our Frame,
With Thirst of Glory and Desire of Fame.

*Honour's the Conscience of an Act well done,
Which gives us Pow'r, our own Desire to shun:
The strong and secret Curb of headstrong Will!
The Self-Reward of Good, and Shame of Ill.*

*O Honour! frail as Life, thy fellow Flow'r,
Cberish'd, and watch'd, and bum'rouffly gfeern'd;
Then worn for sbort Adornment of an Hour,
And is, when Loft, no more to be redeem'd!*

Peter Norman Scrip.

Honour, tho' a different principle from Religion, produces the same effects. The lines of Action, tho' drawn from different parts, terminate in the same point. Religion embraces Virtue, as it is enjoined by the laws of God. Honour, as it is - graceful and ornamental to humane Nature.

HUMILITY.

Humility is the grand Virtue that leads to Contentment; it cuts off the Envy and Malice of Inferiors & Equals, and makes us patiently bear the Insults of Superiors.

As Arrogance, & Conceitedness of our own Abilities are very shocking & offensive to Men of Sense and Virtue, we may be sure, they are highly displeasing to that Being who always delights in an humble Mind.

Of all the Causes whith inspire to blinds,
Man's erring Judgment & misguide the Mind,
What if weak Head with strongest Bias rules

Pride, where Wit fails, steps in to our defence,

Painting

Of all the Productions of human Ingenuity, of all the Operations, which the Fancy, assisted by the Hand is - capable, there is none more excellent or Useful, none - more Universally Admired than the Art of Painting.

First Poem

Whatever yet in Poetry held True,
If duly weigh'd, holds just in Painting too:
Alike from Heaven congenial first they came,
The same thro' Labour & their Praise & same:
Alike, by turns, they touch the conscious Heart,
And each on each reflects the lights of Art.

Second Poem

Like Zeuxis first with trembling Hand design
 Some humble Work, and study fine by fine; —
 A Roman Urn, a Grove-encircl'd Bon'r,
 The blushing Cherry, or the bending Flor'r;
 Painful and slow to Noble Arts we rise; —
 And long long labours wait the glorious prize.
 Yet by Degrees your steadier Hand shall give
 A bolder Grace, and bid each Object live;
 Ev'n Raphael's self from rude Essays began; —
 And shadow'd with a Coal his shapeless Man.

Bland.

In Ancient Times, when Painting first began,
A Pen, or Chalk, thus imitated Man.

Long time the Sister-Arts in Iron Sleep'd;
A heavy Sabbath did Supinely keep:
At length in Raphael's Age at once they rise,
Stretch all their Limbs, & open all their Eyes.
Thence rose the Roman & the Lombard Line,
One Colour'd best, and one did best Design.
Raphael's, like Homer's, was the nobler Part,
But Titian's Painting look'd like Virgil's Art.

By slow Degrees the Painting Art advanc'd;
As Man grew polish'd, Picture was enhanc'd.

ON
The British Nation.

Fair Liberty sits Goddess of our Isle;
 And peaceful Blessings all around her smile:
 Darkness and Bigotry before her Fly,
 And Truth and Virtue grow beneath her Eye.

From British Laws our choicest Blessings come,
 Honour abroad and Liberty at home.

Mark those who doat on Arbitrary Pow'r,
 And you shall find them either hot-brain'd Youth,
 Or needy Bankrupts, servile in their Greatness,
 And Slaves to some, to Lord it o'er the rest.

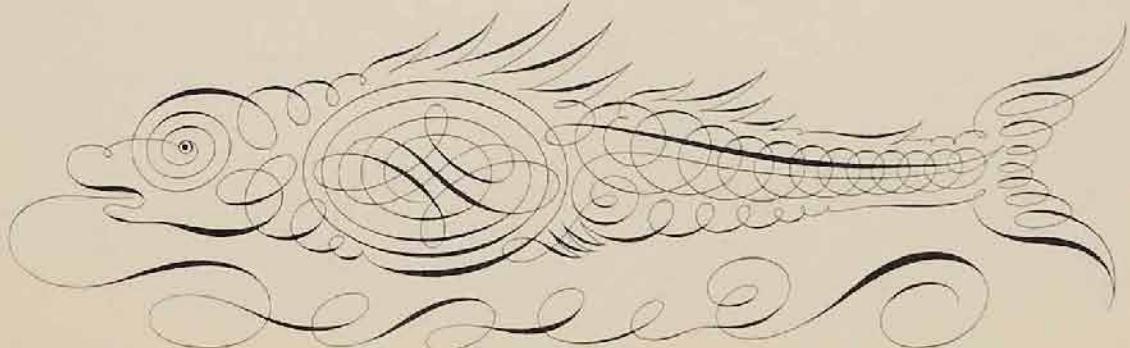

Nathaniel Dove scrip.

LIBERTY.

O Liberty! thou Goddess heavenly-bright,
Profuse of Bliss, & pregnant with Delight! —
Eternal pleasures in thy Presence reign,
And smiling Plenty leads thy wanton Train.—
Eas'd of her Load, Subjection grows more light.—
And Poverty looks cheerful in thy Sight: —
Thou mak'st the gloomy Face of Nature gay.—
Giv'st Beauty to the Sun, & pleasure to the day.—

J. Champion Scripsit.

Liberty.

LIBERTY SHOULD REACH EVERY INDIVIDUAL OF A PEOPLE, AS THEY ALL SHARE ONE COMMON NATURE; IF IT ONLY SPREADS AMONG PARTICULAR BRANCHES, THERE HAD BETTER BE NONE AT ALL; SINCE SUCH A LIBERTY ONLY AGGRAVATES THE MISFORTUNE OF THOSE WHO ARE DEPRIV'D OF IT, BY SETTING BEFORE THEM A DISAGREEABLE SUBJECT OF COMPARISON.

Merchandize.

Merchandize promotes Humanity; as it has open'd and yet keeps up an Intercourse between Nations far remote from one another in Situation, Customs and Religion; promoting Arts, Industry, Peace and Plenty; by mutual Benefits diffusing mutual Love from Pole to Pole; and teaching the Advantages of honest Traffick.

Our Trade extends as far as Winds can blow,

I have heard of the Casualties which have involvd you in Extream distress at this Time; and knowing you to be a Man of great Good-Nature, Industry and probity, have resolv'd to stand by you: Be of good Cheer, the Bearer brings with him Five thousands Pounds, and has my Order to Answer your Drawing as much more on my Account. I did this in hast for Fear I should come too late for your relief; but you may value Yo<sup>r</sup> Self with me to the Sum of Fifty Thousand pounds; for I can very cheerfully run the Hazard of being so much less rich than I am now, to save an honest Man whom I love,

CREDIT.

The Merit of the Merchant is above that of all other Subjects; For while he is untouched in his Credit, his Hand-writing is a more portable Coin for the Service of his Fellow Citizens, & his Word the Gold of Ophir to the Country wherein he resides.

The most unhappy of all Men, and the most exposed to the malignity or Wantonness of the common Voice, is the Trader. Credit is undone in Whispers. The Tradesman's Wound is received from one who is more private & more cruel than the Ruffian with the Lanthorn and Dagger.

A Promissory Note mentioning Order is indorseable from one Person to another; which is done by the present Possessor's writing his Name on the Back of it, and delivering it up to the Party, to whom he intends to assign over his Property therein. —

It is unnecessary to have a Promissory Note payable to Bearer indorsed, if you are satisfy'd the Note is good: And if a Note be indorsed, it is necessary to write a Receipt thereon, to prevent its being negotiated, after it is paid and deliver'd up. —

B A As you have desired my Advice and Assistance, in the Second part of your Universal Penman, which is intended to comprise a Variety of Useful Forms practised by Merchants and Tradesmen; I am of Opinion that many of them ought to be Specimens of that Manner of Writing which is most proper for y<sup>r</sup> ready Dispatch of Business, a thing much wanted, and of such general Concern, that it justly claims the Regard of the publick: And I think that a Running Hand of this Nature is better adapted, and has a more Natural Tendency to Expedition than that which is commonly written after a formal Roundness, and if sometimes less Ornamented with a few loose Strokes performed by Command of hand, & judiciously disposed, will have still a more agreeable Effect. # ON Commission.

Commission is the Authority or Power by which one Person transacts Business for or under another, which is commonly by Deed or Writing, duly executed, which the delegated Person produces upon all proper & necessary Occasions, to satisfy those who have a right to examine into it. So in the Army, & in all Offices under y<sup>e</sup> Crown, a Person is said to have a Commission given him, who had no Power to act before. In Trade, it sometimes means the Power of acting for another, & sometimes the Premium or Reward that a Person receives for his so doing, which is  $\frac{1}{2}, 1, 2, 3,$  or more per Cent, according to the Nature of the Affair.

Directions, and Restrictions;

To be observed by the within Named Job Lookout,

In his Voyage outwards and homewards.

Viz.

The said Master shall not take on board his said Ship, either for the Account of himself or any other Person whatsoever, any Goods or Merchandize, without a Permit or Warrant from the said Company, or their proper Officer, specifying the Nature, Quantities, Qualities, Kinds, Species, Weights, Numbers, and Package of the said Goods and Merchandize.

The said Master upon his Arrival in his designed Port outwards, before any Goods or Merchandize are unladen, shall deliver to the Company's Agent there, a full and particular Account of all Goods and Merchandize on board his said Ship, and by whom the said Goods or Merchandize were put on board in Great-Britain, and to whom they were Consigned, which said Account is to be signed by the said Master.—

And the said Master upon his Arrival back at his delivering Port in Great-Britain, shall, before he break Bulk, deliver to the said Company, or their proper Officer, a like full and particular Account of his Loading, and by whom the several Species and Quantities of Goods or Merchandize were put on board his said Ship, and to whom they were Consigned, which Account is to be Signed by the said Master.—

The Distinguishing Marks OF A True Fine Gentleman.

When a good Artist would express any remarkable Character in Sculpture, he endeavours to work up his Figure into all the Perfection his Imagination can form; and to imitate not so much what is as what may or ought to be. I shall follow their Example, in the Idea I am going to trace out of a fine Gentleman, by assembling together such Qualifications as seem requisite to make the Character compleat. In Order to this, I shall premise in general, that by a fine Gentleman I mean a Man compleatly qualified as well for the Service and Good, as for the Ornament and Delight of Society. When I consider the Frame of Mind peculiar to a Gentleman, I suppose it graced with all the Dignity and Elevation of Spirit that Human Nature is capable of. To this I would have joined a clear Understanding, a Reason free from Prejudice, a steady Judgment, and an extensive Knowledge. When I think of the Heart of a Gentleman, I imagine it firm and intrepid, void of all inordinate Passions, and full of Tenderness, Compassion, and Benevolence. When I view the fine Gentleman with regard to his Manners, methinks I see him Modest without, Bashful without, frank and affable without, Impertinence, obliging and complaisant without, servility, cheerful and in good Humour without, Noise. These amiable Qualities are not easily obtained, neither are there many Men that have a Genius to excel this Way. — A finished Gentleman is perhaps the most uncommon of all the great Characters in Life. Besides the natural Endowments with which this distinguished Man is to be born, he must run through a long Series of Education. Before he makes his his Appearance and Shines in the World, he must be principled in Religion, instructed in all the moral Virtues, and led through the whole Course of the polite Arts and Sciences. He should be no Stranger to Courts and to Camps; he must Travel to open his Mind, to enlarge his Views, to learn the Policies and Interest of foreign States, as well as to fashion and polish himself, and to get clear of National Prejudices, of which every Country has its Share. To all these more essential Improvements, he must not forget to add the fashionable Ornaments of Life, such as are the Languages and the bodily Exercises most in Vogue. Neither would I have him think even Drefs it, left beneath his Notice.

It is no very uncommon Thing in the World to meet with Men of Probity; there are likewise a great many of Honour to be found. Men of Courage, Men of Sense, and Men of Letters are frequent. But a true fine Gentleman is what one seldom sees. He is properly a Compound of the various good Qualities that embellish Mankind. As the great Poet animates all the different Parts of learning by the Force of his Genius, and irradiates all the Compass of his Knowledge by the Lustre and Brightness of his Imagination; so all the great and solid Perfections of Life appear in the finished Gentleman, with a beautiful Gloss and Varnish; — everything he says or does is accompanied with a Manner, or rather a Charm, that draws the Admiration and Good-will of every Beholder.

Description of the City of Tyre;

Apply'd

To the City of London.

This great City seems to float upon the Waters, and to be Queen of all the Sea; the Merchants resort hither from all parts of the World, and its Inhabitants are the most famous Merchants in the Universe. When Men enter into this City, they cannot think it to be a place belonging to a particular people, but rather to be a City common to all Nations, and the Center of all Trade and Correspondence.

THIS ancient City is for Trade compleat,
Her wealthy Merchants Eminently Great;
Her Thames supports unnumber'd Ships of Pride,
That float, with Plenty, down her silver Tide.

Blast be the Man his Memory at least,

 And taught succeeding Times an easy way -
 Their Secret Thoughts by Letters to convey;
 To baffle Absence, and Secure Delight.

 The parting Farewel spake, the last Adieu,
 The leaving Distance past their loss of View;
 The Friend was gone, w<sup>s</sup> some kind Moments gave,

When for a Wife the youthful Patriarch sent -
 The Camels, Jewels, and the Steward went,
 And wealthy Equipage, the grave and slow -
 But not a Line that might the Lover show -
 The Ring and Bracelets wro<sup>d</sup> her Hands & Arms;
 But had she known of melting Words, the Charms
 That under Secret Seals in Ambush lie,
 To catch the Soul, when drawn into the Eyes;
 The fair Assyrian had not took his Guide,
 Nor her soft Heart in Chains of Pearl been tyd.

An Epistle
To the Countess of EXETER.
Playing on the Lute.

What Charms you have from a high Race you sprung
Have been the pleasing Subjects of my Song
Unskill'd & young, yet something still I writ,
Of Landish Beauty joint to Cecil's Wit:
But when you please to show the lab'ring Muse,
What greater theme your Musick can produce,
My babbling Praises I repeat no more,
But hear, rejoice, stand silent, and Adore.
The Persians thus, first gazing on the Sun,
Admir'd how high 'twas plac'd, how bright it shone,

But as his Pow'r was known, their Thoughts were rais'd,
And soon they Worshipp'd what at first they prais'd.
Elizas Glory lives in Spencers Song,
And Cowley's Verse keeps Fair Orinda young,
That as in Birth, in Beauty you Excel,
The Muse might dictate, and the Poet tell,
Yours Art no other Art can speak, and You,
To show how well you play, must play anew,
Your Musick's pow'r your Musick must disclose,
For what light is, 'tis only Light that shows.

I take this Opportunity of recommending to you, one very material Branch of Education, which has hitherto been too much neglected. A particular which is of use in every Station of Life, and which methinks every Master should teach his Scholars. I mean the writing of Familiar Letters. To this end, instead of some other things, there might be a punctual Correspondence establish'd between two Boys, who might act in any imaginary parts of Business, or be allowed sometimes to give a range to their own Fancies, and communicate to each other whatever Trifles they thought fit provided neither of them ever fail'd at the appointed time to answer his Correspondent's Letter.

I believe I may venture to affirm, that the generality of Boys would find themselves as much advantaged by this Custom (when they come to be Men), as by any other that can possibly be propos'd: But this I submit to your Superior Judgments, and am,

Deaf for the publick Good is the Characteristick of a Man of Honour, & a Gentleman; & must take place of Pleasures, Profits, and all other private Gratifications; whoever wants this Motive, is an open Enemy, or an inglorious Neuter to mankind, in proportion to the misapplied Advantages, with which Nature & Fortune have blessed him. SIR,

July 4. 1740 —

The greatest Honour of Human Life is to live well with Men of Merit, and I shall always esteem it a peculiar Happiness to be reckond amongst the Number of yr Friends. The Conversation of a Gentleman, that has a refined Taste of Letters, & a disposition in which those Letters found nothing to correct but very much to Exact, is a good Fortune too uncommon to be enjoyed in Silence. In others, the greatest Business of Learning is to weed the soil; in You, it had nothing else to do, but to bring forth Fruit. Affability, Complacency, and Generosity of Heart, which are natural to You, wanted Nothing from Literature; but to refine and direct the Application of them, I am

A Young Gentleman,

Who has lately lost a worthy Father.

---

Dear Sir,

The virtuous Principles you had from that excellent Man whom you have lost, have wrought in you as they ought to make a Youth of Three and Twenty incapable of Comfort upon coming into Possession of a great Fortune. I doubt not but you will honour his Memory by a modest Enjoyment of his Estate, and scorn to triumph over his Grave; by employing in Riot, Excess, and Debauchery, what he purchased with so much Industry, Prudence, and Wisdom. This is the true Way to shew the Sense you have of your Loss, and to take away the Distress of others upon the Occasion. You cannot recall your Father by your grief, but you may revive him to his Friends by your Conduct.

THE Ill Effects of Tyranny.

Besides Poverty and Want, there are other Reasons that debase the Minds of Men, who live under Tyranny, though I look on this as the Principal. It is odd to consider the Connection between Despotic Government and Barbarity, & how 't making of one Person more than Man, makes 't rest less.

*Too long this Queen imperiously thus Sway'd,
By no set Laws, but by her Will obey'd.
Her fearful Slaves, to full Obedience grown,
Admire her Strength, & dare not use their own.*

If there be but one Body of Legislators, it is no better than a Tyranny: if there are only two, there will want a casting Voice, and one of them must at length be swallowed up by Disputes and Contentions: Four would have the same Inconvenience as Two, and a greater Number would cause too much Confusion: Therefore a mixt Government consisting of three Branches, of Regal, of Noble, & the Popular, is the best.

Oriental Languages.

INTRODUCTION

The Hebrew is the most ancient Language in the World, at least that is known to the Europeans. The square Hebrew Character is originally the Chaldee Character, which the Jews assumed during the Babylonish Captivity. As particular Companies of Men became Inhabitants of different parts of the World, and had different Languages, so they invented various Characters. The Greeks and Romans have herein been most famous, and their Characters are chiefly used in Europe; but the Oriental Nations have their own peculiar manner of Writing, several Specimens of which, may be seen in the following Page. —

The Alphabet is the whole Order of the Letters in any Language, ~ from Alpha and Beta, the two first Letters in the Greek Tongue. ~

The English Alphabet contains twenty six Letters, but others differ in their Number and Form, and vary in their Placing and Writing. ~

The Hebrews write from the Right hand to the Left, Others from Left to Right, and back again from Right to Left, The Chinese from Top to Bottom, and from Right to Left, but the Europeans, and most Others, write from Left to Right without Retrogression to the Left. ~

All our English Alphabets are exhibited in the two next Pages. ~

If you would write both Legible and Fair,
Copy these Alphabets with all your Care.

Observations,
FOR
Ingenious Gentlemen;
BY
Mr. Hart.

Tis hard a Sprightly Fancy to command,
And give a Respit to the Labring Hand.
In vain we strive each trivial Fault to hide,
That shuns but little Judgment, and more Pride.
Like some Nice Prude, offensive to the Sight,
Exactness gives, at best, a Cold Delight.
Each painful Stroke disgusts the lovely Mind,
For Art is lost, when Over-much refin'd.
To Err is Mortal; do whatever we can,
Some Faulty Trifles will confess the Man.
Wisest are they who each mad Whim repress,
And shun Gross Errors, by committing less.
