INVASION OF TIMUR-BEC.

TIMUR-BEC, being informed of the commotions and civil wars of India, began his expedition into that country, in the eight hundredth year of the Higerah, and, on the twelfth of Mohirrim, in the following year, arrived on the banks of the Chule Jallali, one of the moft wefterly branches of the Indus. He immediately difpatched Noor ul Dien to difpoffefs Mubarick, who, on the part of the king of Delhi, had, in charge, the defence of the frontier diffricts. When Noor ul Dien had arrived within a few miles of Mubarick, he fummoned him to fubmit to Timur. But as the imperial general had previoufly retreated into a ftrong hold, on the bank of the river, round which he had drawn a ditch, forming the place into an ifland, he determined to defend himfelf to the laft.

Noor ul Dien, however, found means, upon making his approaches, to fill up the ditch : but at night he fuffered a confiderable lofs, by a violent fally of the befieged ; whom, in the end, he repulfed, and forced to take fhelter within the walls. Timur himfelf advanced against the enemy, with his whole army. Mubarick, intimidated by the approach of Timur, stowed privately, in forty boats, his treasure and family, and fell down the river, being two days purfued in vain, by Noor ul Dien, who was detached with a party after him. The garrifon, after the departure of their leader, immediately furrendered.

Tamerlane lays Tulmubini under contribution. Timur proceeded down the river to the conflux of the Jimboo and Chinab, where there was a firong fort and town, known by the name of Tulmubini. He ordered a bridge to be laid acrofs the river, by which his army might pafs. Having pitched his camp, without the town, he laid it under a heavy contribution. But whilft the inhabitants were very bufy in collecting the fum demanded, a complaint being made in the camp, of the fcarcity of provifions, orders were iffued to feize grain wherever it fhould be found. The foldiers, upon this, haftened to fearch the town, but not being content to take provifions alone, the natural confequence was, that a general plunder enfued. The inhabitants, endeavouring to oppofe this outrage, were maffacred without mercy.

Shawnaw: ze . pillaged. To befiege the citadel would but retard the defigns of Timur. He therefore marched, the next day after the maffacre, to a town called Shawnawaze, where he found more grain than was fufficient to ferve his whole army. He therefore ordered, that what could not be carried away fhould be burnt; having previoufly cut off Jifferit, the brother of the prince of the Gickers, who had attempted to defend the place with two thoufand men. Timur marched, on the third day, from Shawnawaze, and, croffing the Bea, came into a rich and plentiful country.

. It may not be improper here to fay fomething concerning the proceedings of the prince, the grandfon of Timur, Pier Mahommed, after his having, as has been already mentioned, taken Moultan. The Solftitial rains having deftroyed a great part of his cavalry, in the field, he was under the neceffity of drawing his army into the city of Moultan. There he was driven to the utmost diftrefs by the inhabitants of the country, who had clofely invefted him. His cavalry, inftead of being able to act against them, diminifhed daily in their numbers, for want of forage.

In this untoward fituation were the affairs of that prince, when his grandfather entered Hindoftan. Timur immediately reinforced Mahommed with a detachment of thirty thousand chosen horse, and foon after joined him with his whole army. The prince carried in his mind great animofity against the governor of Battenize, who had chiefly diftreffed him. Timur, to chaftife the governor, felected ten thousand horse, with which he marched directly towards him. When he reached Adjodin, he was fhewn the tomb of the learned Ferid, the poet, in refpect to whole memory he fpared the few inhabitants who remained in the place, the greater part having fled to Delhi and Battenize.

Timur continued then his march to Battenize, croffing the river who arrives of Adjodin, and encamping at Chalifkole, from which place, in one day, he marched one hundred miles to Battenize. Upon his arrival, the people of Debalpoor, and other adjacent towns, crowded into the place, in fuch numbers, that half of them were driven out, and obliged to take shelter under the walls. They were there and invests it. attacked, the first day, by the king, and fome thousands of them flain. Raw Chilligi, who was governor of the place, feeing the enemy fo few in number, drew out the garrifon, and formed them without the town, in order of battle. The Moguls, however, upon the first onfet, drove him back within his walls, while the king, in perfon, pressed fo hard upon the enemy's rear, that he posses before they could be shut. Then driving the runaways from street to street, he became, in a few hours, intirely master of the place, except the citadel; to reduce which, he ordered a party immediately to difmount, and begin to undermine it.

The city taken, The garrifon defired to capitulate, to which Timur agreed; and the governor, having had an interview with the king, prefented him with three hundred Arabian horfes, and with many of the valuable curiofities of Hindoftan. Timur, in return, honoured him with a chelat; and after the conditions were fettled, fent Soliman, Sheh, and Omar Ulla, to take poffeffion of the gates, commanding them to flay all thofe who had taken refuge in the place, and had before been active againft his grandfon Mahommed. and the inhabitants put to the fword. In confequence of this inhuman order, five hundred perfons, in a few minutes, were put to death. Those who remained fill within the fort, were fo ftruck with this maffacre, that they fet fire to the place, murdered their wives and children, and, in mere defpair, fought after nothing but revenge and death. The fcene now became terrible ! but the unfortunate inhabitants were, in the end, cut off to a man; they however revenged themfelves amply, upon the rapacious and inhuman authors of their diffres; fome thousands of the Moguls having fallen by their hands. This fo much exasperated Timur, that firebrand of the world, that he ordered every foul in Battenize to be maffacred, and to reduce the city itself to ashes.

Timur,

Timur, marching to Surufti, put the inhabitants of that place, alfo, to the fword, and gave the town up to pillage. Advancing to Fatteabad, he continued the fame fcene of barbarity, through that, and the adjacent towns of Rahib, Amirani, and Jonah. He detached Hakîm Agherâck towards Sammana, with five thoufand horfe, and with the few that remained, he himfelf fcoured the country, and cut off a tribe of banditti called Jits, who had lived for fome years by rapine. His army, in the mean time, being divided under different chiefs, carried fire and fword through all the provinces of Moultan and Lahore, but when they advanced near the capital, he ordered a general rendezvous at Keitil, a town within ten miles of Sammana.

Timur himfelf foon joined his army, and having regulated the order of his march, advanced towards Delhi. When he reached Panniput, he ordered his foldiers to put on their fighting apparel*; and, that he might be the better fupplied with forage, croffed the Jumna, took the fort of Lowni by affault, and put the garrifon to the fword. He then marched down along the river, and encamped oppofite to the citadel of Delhi, pofting guards to prevent all communication. He immediately detached Soliman and Jehan to fcour the country behind him to the fouth and fouth eaft of the city; whilft he himfelf that very day, with feven hundred horfe only, croffed the river to reconnoitre the citadel.

The King of Delhi and his minister, Eckbal, seeing fo few in the retinue of Timur, issued forth with five thousand foot and twenty-seven elephants against him. Sillif, an Omrah of repute in Delhi, who led on the attack, was repulsed and taken prisoner by the Moguls. Timur ordered him to be immediately beheaded, Several cities taken by Timur, and the inhabitants maffacred.

A. D. 1397. Hig. 801. and after having made the observations which he had intended, repassed the river and joined his army.

He next morning moved his camp more to the eaftward, where he was told, by the princes and generals of his army, that there were then above one hundred thousand prisoners in his camp, who had been taken fince he croffed the Indus; that thefe unfortunate perfons had, the day before, expreffed great joy, when they faw him attacked before the citadel; which rendered it extremely probable, that, on a day of battle, they would join with their countrymen against him. The inhuman Timur, who might have found other means of prevention, gave orders to put all above the age of fifteen to the fword, fo that, upon that horrid day, one hundred thoufand men were maffacred, in cold blood. This barbarity, together with his other actions of equal cruelty, gained him the name of Hillâk Chan, or the deftroying Prince. Upon the fifth of the first Jemmad, Timur forded the river with his army without opposition, and encamped on the plains of the city of Firofe, a part of Delhi; where he entrenched himfelf, filling the ditch with buffaloes fronting the enemy. He fastened the buffaloes with ropes and picquets to their flations, placing, at the fame time, ftrong guards, at proper diftances, behind them.

Though the aftrologers pronounced the feventh an unlucky day, the king marched out of his lines, and drew up his army in order of battle. King Mahmood and Eckbal, with the army of Delhi, and one hundred and twenty elephants in mail, advanced towards him. But upon the very first charge of a fquadron, called the Heroes of Chighitta, the elephant-drivers were difmounted, and the outrageous animals, deprived of their guides, ran roaring back, and spread terror and confusion among their own ranks. The veteran veteran troops of Timur, who had already conquered half the world, improved this advantage, and the degenerate Hindoos were, in a few minutes, totally routed, without making one brave effort for their country, lives, and fortunes. The conqueror purfued them, with great flaughter, to the very gates of Delhi, near which he fixed his quarters.

The confternation of the fugitives was fo great, that, not trufting to their walls, Mahmood and his minister deferted, in the night, their capital; the former flying to Guzerat, the latter taking the route of Berren. Timur, having intelligence of their flight, detached parties after them, one of which coming up with Mahmood, killed a great number of his retinue, and took his two infant fons, Seif ul Dien and Choda Daad, prifoners. Timur received the fubmiffion of all the great men of the city, who crowded to his camp, and were promifed protection upon paying great contributions; and, upon the Friday following, he ordered the royal proclamation and titles to be read in his own name in all the mosques. Upon the fixteenth of the fame month he placed guards at the gates, and appointed the fcriveners of the city, and magistrates, to regulate the contribution according to the wealth and rank of the inhabitants. Information was, in the mean time, lodged, that feveral omrahs and rich men had fhut themfelves up in their houfes, with their dependents, and refused to pay down their share of the ranfom. This obliged Timur to fend troops into the city, to enforce the authority of the magistrates. A general confusion, uproar, and plundering, immediately enfued, which could not be reftrained by the Mogul officers, who, at the fame time, durft not acquaint the king that their authority was contemned by the troops.

Timur, according to his cuftom after fuccefs, was then bufy in his camp, in celebrating a grand feftival, on account of his victory, fo who defert the city.

A. D. 1397. Hig. 801. fo that it was five days before he received any intelligence of thefe proceedings. The first notice he had of them, was by the flames of the city; for the Hindoos, according to their manner, feeing their wives and daughters ravished and polluted, their wealth feized by the hand of rapine, and they themfelves infulted; beat, and abufed, at length, with one confent, shut the city gates, fet fire to their houses, murthered their wives and children, and ran out like madmen against their enemies.

A general maffacre in Dclhi.

But little effect had the defpair of the unfortunate upon the Moguls, who foon collected themfelves, and began a general maffacre. Some fireets were rendered impaffable, by the heaps of dead : and, in the mean time, the gates being forced, the whole Mogul army were admitted. Then followed a fcene of horror, much eafier . to be imagined than defcribed. The defperate courage of the unfortunate Delhians, was at length cooled in their own blood. They threw down their weapons, they fubmitted themfelves like sheep to the flaughter. They permitted one man to drive a hundred of them prifoners before him; fo that we may plainly perceive, that cowardice is the mother of defpair. In the city, the Hindoos were, at leaft, ten to one, fuperior in number to the enemy, and had they poffeffed fouls, it would have been impoffible for the Moguls, who were fcattered about in every ffreet, houfe, and corner, laden with plunder, to have refifted the dreadful affault. But though the Indians had the favage refolution of imbruing their hands in the blood of their wives and children, we find them still the flaves of fear, and shrinking at the approach of that death, which they could fo readily execute upon others.

Another account of the mailacre in Delhi. This maffacre is, in the Hiftory of Nizam, otherwife related. The collectors of the ranfom, fays he, upon the part of Timur, having having used great violence, by torture and other means, to extort money, the citizens fell upon them, and killed fome of the Moguls. This circumftance being reported to the Mogul king, he ordered a general pillage, and, upon refistance, a massacre to commence. This account carries greater appearance of truth along with it, both from Timur's general character of cruelty, and the improbability of his being five days close to the city without having intelligence of what passed within the walls. But the imperial race of Timur take, to this day, great pains to invalidate this opinion, nor do they want arguments on their fide. The principal one is this, that, in confequence of a general plunder, the king would have been deprived of the ranfom, which muft have been exceedingly great, and for which he only received the elephants and regalia. Neither have we any account of his taking any part of the plunder from his army afterwards, though it must have been very immense.

The king, after this horrid scene, entered the city, taking to himself one hundred and twenty elephants, twelve rhinoceroses, and a number of curious animals, that had been collected by the emperor Ferose. The fine mosque, built by that prince, upon the ftones of which he had infcribed the hiftory of his reign, being efteemed a master-piece of architecture and taste, took fo much the fancy of the conqueror, that he ordered flone-cutters and masons from Delhi to Samarcand, to build one upon the same plan.

After having stayed fifteen days at Delhi, Timur took a fudden Refolves to refolution of returning, and he accordingly marched out to Firofeabad, whither the Indian governor of Mewat fent him two white parrots, as curiofities, with professions of fubjection. The king fent Seid Turmuzi to bring him to the prefence, which fummons VOL. II. he

A. D. 1397. Hig. 801. he immediately obeyed; and Chizer †, who had lain concealed in the hills, appeared in the royal prefence, and was favorably received.

Arrives at Paniput, The king marching from Firofeabad arrived at Paniput, from whence he detached Amir Shaw, to befiege Merat, a firong fort, fituated between the rivers, about fixty miles from Delhi. When Amir Shaw reached the place, upon reconnoitring its firength, and finding the garrifon determined to defend it, he mentioned in a letter to the king, that they infulted him from the walls, by telling him he could fueceed no better than Seri, the Mogul prince, who had formerly attempted to take the place.

Befieges and takes Merat. This had the defired effect upon the king, who immediately marched his army againft Merat, and, without delay, began to fink his mines, and carry on his approaches; advancing his fap towards the walls, at the rate of fifteen yards every twenty-four hours. Elias Adyhuni, the fon of Moluna, Ahmud, and Suffi, defended the place with great refolution. But the Moguls having filled up the ditch, placed their fcaling ladders, and faftened their hook-ropes to the wall, in fpite of all oppofition; and, without waiting for a breach by means of the mines, flormed the place, and put every foul within it to the fword. The mines, however, being finifhed, the king ordered them to be fprung, which blew the walls and baffions into pieces.

His progrefs towards the head of the Ganges. Timur continued his march to the fkirts of the mountains of Sewalic, marking his way with fire and fword. Croffing, then, the Ganges, he fubdued the country as high as where the river iffues from the mountains; returning from thence, he repaffed the river, and marched through the hills, where he was oppofed A. D. 1397. by an Indian zemindar, whom he defeated and plundered. He Hig. 801. then continued his rout, taking feveral fmall forts in his way; having arrived at Jimmugur, he fought the raja of that place, who was wounded, taken, and forced to become a Muffulman.

Sur mu

Jifferit, the brother of the prince of Gickers, who had fled to him after his being defeated by Timur, had by his brother been feverely reprimanded for opposing the king; which having been represented to Timur, the prince was admitted into his prefence, and became a great favorite. But when the king had marched Lahoretaken. on to Delhi, he remembered not his obedience, and in the abfence of Timur poffeffed himfelf of Lahore. The king having returned to Jimbo,* the Gicker refused to fubmit to his authority. The Sultan fent part of his army to befiege Lahore, which being taken in a few days, the prince was brought prifoner to the king, who ordered him to be inftantly beheaded.

We do not find that Timur appointed any king to govern Hindoftan, which he had in a great measure subdued. He, however, confirmed the fubas, who had fubmitted to him, in their governments; and, from this circumftance, we may suppose, that he intended to retain the empire in his own name; though he left no troops behind him, except a fmall detachment in Delhi, to fecure it from further depredations. While he remained at Jimbo, he appointed Chizer viceroy of Moultan, Lahore, and Dibalpoor, then proceeded, by the way of Cabul, to Samarcand.

The city of Delhi had remained in anarchy for the space of two months after the departure of Timur, when it was taken possession of by the pretended emperor Nuferit, with only two thousand horse,

Two chiefs, Shab and Almafs, with their troops and ten elephants, joined him foon after from the fame place; Nurferit fent immediately Shab, with his troops, towards Birren, againft Eckbal, who had there taken up his refidence. But Shab was attacked, in the night, upon his march, by the zemindars in the intereft of Eckbal, and flain; Eckbal purfuing this advantage, took all the baggage of Shab's army.

This fuccefs raifing the reputation as well as fpirits of Eckbal, he, in a few days, thought himfelf in a condition to make an attempt upon the capital, which he did with fuccefs; for Nuferit, upon his approach, fled to Merat; and Eckbal refumed the administration of affairs in the ruined city. The inhabitants, who had fled to different places, having ftill a natural hankering after their old abode, began to affemble again, and the place, in a short time, put on the appearance of populous field, especially the quarter called the New City.

Eckbal recovers Delhi.

The Subas revolt from the empire. Eckbal poffeffed himfelf foon of the country between the two rivers, which, with a fmall diffrict round the city, was all that now held of the capital. The fubas had rendered themfelves independant, in their own governments, during the misfortunes and confusion of the empire. Guzerat was feized upon by Azim; — Malava by Delawir; — Kinnoge, Oud, Kurrah, and Jionpoor, by Chaja Jehan, commonly called the King of the Eaft; — Lahore, Dibalpoor, and Moultan, by Chizer; — Sammana by Ghalil; — Brana by Shumfe; — Mahoba by Mahommed, the fon of Malleck, and grandfon of Ferofe; and fo on with regard to the other provinces, the governors afferting their own independence, and filing themfelves Kings.

whofe troops joining him, he proceeded to Kittar, and after having levied a great contribution upon the territory of Narfing, returned to Delhi. Intelligence was foon after brought him, that Chaja Jehan was dead at Jionpoor, and that his adopted fon, Kirrinphil, having affumed the title of the Emperor Mubarick, held that government. Eckbal having gained over to his intereft Shumfe, governor of Biana, Mubarick and Bahadre of Mewat, marched the fame year againft Kirrinphil.

When he had reached the village of Pattiali, upon the banks of the Ganges, Rai Seri, and all the zemindars of that country, oppofed him; but he defeated them, with great flaughter. After this victory, he marched to Kinnoge, with an intention to proceed to Jionpoor, and from thence to Bengal. Upon his march, however, he was met by Kirrinphil, who oppofed his croffing the Ganges fo effectually, that, after repeated efforts for two months, he was forced to abandon the undertaking, and to return to his own country. But the perfidious Eckbal, entertaining fome groundlefs fufpicions of Shumfe and Mubarick, affaffinated them both upon their way back to their own governments.

Fruftrated in his defigns upon Jionpoor.

Mahmood

returns to Delhi,

The emperor Mahmood, in the year 804, being difgufted with Ziffer, governor of Guzerat, fled from him to Malava, and foon after, by the invitation of Eckbal, returned to Delhi. He, however, contented himfelf with a penfion, fearing that his interfering in the government would prove fatal to him. Advice being arrived, that Kirrinphil, or, as he fliled himfelf, Mubarick, was dead, at Jionpoor, Eckbal, taking along with him the Emperor Mahmood, marched again towards Kinnoge; upon which, Ibrahim, the brother of Mubarick, who had mounted the throne, advanced with the troops of the Eaft to meet him.

Eckbal marches againft Gualier, When the armies were near one another, Mahmood, diffatisfied with his condition, and having the folly to imagine that Ibrahim would acknowledge him king, and abdicate the throne of the Eaftern provinces for his fake, efcaped, one day, when he was out hunting, to the army of Ibrahim. But when that prince learned the intentions of Mahmood, he even with-held from him the neceffaries of life, and intimated to him to quit the camp. Mahmood returned, in great diffrefs, to Kinnoge, and was left, by Eckbal, in the government of that city; the governor, who was formerly there on the part of Ibrahim, being driven out. Ibrahim, however, put up with this infult, and returned to Jionpoor, while Eckbal retired to Delhi.

In the year 805, Eckbal marched against Gualier, which had fallen into the hands of Narsing, during the invasion of Timur, and had now, upon Narsing's death, descended to his fon, Byram Deo. The fort being very strong, he could effect nothing against it, but plundering the district around, he returned to Delhi. Brooking ill, however, this disappointment, he, in a short time, marched a second time against Gualier. Byram Deo fallied out of the place, and engaged Eckbal, but he was soon driven back into the fort, the second the country as before, he returned to Delhi.

He then turned his arms against the nominal emperor Mahmood, in Kinnoge. Alim came to mediate matters, and a peace was foon patched up between the contending parties, and both joining their forces together, marched towards Moultan, against Chizer. At Tilbundi they were opposed by Rai Daood, Camal Mai, and Rai Hubbu, chiefs in the northern provinces, who were defeated and taken prifoners. The perfidious Eckbal, after this victory, without any apparent reafon, except a defire of aggrandizing himfelf, feized upon Byram, and ordered him to be flay'd alive. The death of Byram did not remain Byram is long unrevenged. Eckbal arriving near Adjoudin, Chizer met him, with the troops of Moultan, Punjaab, and Dibalpoor, and, upon the nineteenth of the first Jemmad, the two armies engaged; Eckbal was flain, and the world was happily rid of a perfidious Eckbal Chara and cruel villain.

Dowlat Lodi, and Actiar, who commanded in Delhi, being Sultan Mahinformed of this event, called the emperor Mahmood from Kinnoge. Mahmood, coming with a fmall retinue to Delhi, reaffumed the throne; but, laying afide any further efforts to reduce Moultan, he fent Dowlat with an army against Byram, who, upon the death of the former Byram, poffeised himfelf of Sammana. In the month of Rigib, 810, Dowlat Lodi and Byram came to battle near Sammana. Byram was defeated, and furrendered himfelf to Dowlat; but before the latter had enjoyed any fruits of his victory, he was himfelf beat back to Delhi, by Chizer. Mahmood, in the following year, marched against Keiwan, who, upon the part of Chizer, commanded the fort of Firofa. The emperor, after levying contributions, returned; and Chizer, upon the advice of thefe transactions, marched against Delhi, and befieged Mahmood, who was neither a warrior nor a politician. in that part of the city which is diffinguished by the name of the city of Firofe. Chizer, in the beginning of the year 814, returned by the way of Rhotuc, a country then in the poffeffion of Sultan Mahmood, where Ecteriz and Mubariz, the governors of that country, declining hostilities, fubmitted to his pleafure. He plundered the town of Narnoul, and again advanced to Delhi; Mahmood fhut himfelf up in the old citadel of Seri, which Chizer immediately befieged. Achtiar, who commanded in Firofeabad, feeing the affairs of Mahmood in a defperate fituation, joined himfelf to Chizer, and admitted him into the place. They then, with all their troops, took poffeffion of the country on the opposite fide of the river, and prevented all fupplies from Mahmood.

Mahmood being But retires. delivered from this imminent danger, took no pains to ftrengthen himfelf against a future attack. He took the diversion of hunting in the neighbourhood of Keitul, where he was feized with a fever, and died in the month of Zecada; and with him the empire of Mahmood Delhi fell from the race of the Turks, who were adopted flaves of the Emperor Mahommed Ghori, the fecond of that race of the princes of India, diffinguished by the name of the dynasty of Ghor. ALLES IN A CHIEFE

The difastrous, interrupted, and inglorious reign of the weak His charac-Mahmood, lasted twenty years and two months. He was just as unfit for the age in which he lived, as he was unworthy of better times. God was angry with the people of Hindoftan, and he gave them Mahmood, whofe only virtue was, that his folly made him. insenfible, in a great measure, to those strokes of fortune, which abilities much greater than his could not, perhaps, avert. The omrahs, foon after his death, elected, in his flead, Dowlat Lodi, a Patan by nation, and originally a private fecretary, who, after paffing through various employs, was raifed by Mahmood to the dignity of Aziz Mumalick *.

He began his reign, by ftriking the currency in his own name, which is commonly the firft act of kings. Two chiefs of power and reputation, Malleck Ecteriz and Mubariz, who had been in the intereft of Chizer, abandoned that omrah and joined Lodi. A few days after his acceffion, he marched towards Kittar, and was met by Rai Narfingh, and other zemindars of those diffricts, who acknowledged his title. Arriving at the town of Battiali, Mohabut, governor of Budaoon, came to meet him.

Advices, in the mean time, arrived, that Ibrahim, who fliled himfelf Emperor of the eaftern provinces, was belieging Kadir the fon of Mahmood, in Calpee; but as Lodi had not forces enough to march to his relief, he returned to Delhi to recruit his army. Chizer, who had been preparing to invade the capital, advanced, in the month of Zihidge, with fixty thousand horse, and a third time invested the citadel of Seri, whither Dowlat Lodi had retired. After a siege of four months, he obliged Lodi, upon the 15th of the first Ribbi, in the year 817, to furrender himself and the citadel. The emperor was confined in the fort of Firosa, where he died soon, after a nominal reign of one year and three months.

Diffurbances in Perfia, and his ardent defire of extending his conquefts to the extremities of Afia, on the north and weft, prevented Timur from retaining the conquefts he had made in India. The inferiority of the troops of the Patan empire to the Moguls convinced him, that he could, at any time, reduce India; and he was therefore unwilling to leave any part of his veteran army to fecure the provinces he had feized. Timur, after his return from HinHindoftan, fettled the affairs of Perfia, reduced Syria, Egypt, and the leffer Afia; and, in the 805 of the Higera, defeated Bajazet, the Turkish Emperor, in a great battle in the plains of Galatia. When he was meditating the conquest of China, he died on his march into that country, in the 808 year of the Higera, and the 1405 of the Christian æra. His fon Sharoch succeeded Timur, in his vast empire, and was on the throne at the death of Dowlat Lodi.

His family.

THE most accurate historians of those times affirm, that .I Chizer was of the race of the Prophet, and confequently, what the Islamites call a Seid. His father, Soliman, being a per-Ion of fome diffinction, became the adopted fon of Dowlat, a great omrah, and governor of the province of Moultan in the reign of Ferofe. Dowlat was, upon his death, fucceeded in his government by his own fon Malleck Shech; and he foon dying, Soliman was appointed to that viceroyship, which defcended to Chizer from his father. Chizer being defeated, as we have already obferved, by Saring, and driven from his country, he waited upon Timur, after the conquest of Delhi, and, having gained his favor, was by him reinstated in his former government, with the addition of all the countries watered by the five rivers, commonly called Punjaab and Dibalpoor. This acceffion of ftrength enabled him to pave afterwards his way to the empire.

Does not affume the name of Emperor. Pretends to hold of 'Timur. Chizer, upon his acceffion, conferred honours upon Malleck Joppa, and made him Vizier; and raifed to dignities Rahim, the adopted fon of his father Soliman, with the government of Fattepoor and Moultan. He thus diffributed favors, governments, and dignities among his other omrahs, but would not affume the imperial titles to himfelf, holding forth, that he held the empire for Timur: and ordered the coin to be ftruck in his name. The Chutba, during the life of Timur, was read in that conqueror's name in the mofques; and after Timur had travelled the way of mortality, in that of the Emperor Sharoch his fon, mentioning the name of Chizer after him. He even fent fometimes a tribute to Samarcand. This was, probably, good policy in in Chizer, as he could govern his fellow omrahs, with lefs envy, in the name of the Tartar Prince, than if he was to affume the name of King himfelf, to which he had not the leaft fhadow of pretence.

In the first year of his government he fent Joppa, with an army, towards Kittar, which he fubdued, and drove Rai Narfingh to the mountains; but upon paying a tribute Rai Naringh was again put in poffeffion of his country. Mohabut, Suba of Badoon, at the fame time came to meet Malleck, and promifed allegiance; and from thence the vizier marched towards Koer, Kumbul, and Chidewar, and levied the revenues which were due for fome years before. After recovering Jellafar out of the hands of the Rajaputs of Chundwar, he marched to Atava, which he brought under fubjection, by changing the administration; and after these exploits returned to Delhi.

In the month of the first Jemmad of this year, a tribe of Turks, who were of the adherents of Byram, affaffinating Malleck, governor of Sirhind, took poffeffion of his country. Chizer fent Zirick, with a powerful army, against them; and, upon his approach, the Turks croffed the Suttuluz, and retreated to the hills. Zirick purfued them thither; but those mountains being a continuation of those of Nagracot, which were then poffeffed by powerful zemindars, who affifted the Turks, he could effect nothing material against them; and, in the end, he was obliged to retreat.

The Turks expelled from Sirhind.

Intelligence was, in the year 819, received at Delhi, that Ah- Chizer's exmud, who fliled himfelf king of Guzerat, had advanced to Nagore. Chizer muftering all his forces, marched against him, but Ahmud declining battle, turned off towards Malava. When Chizer Chizer had reached Hanir, Elias, governor of that beautiful city, which had been built by the Emperor Alla, came out to meet him, and was honorably received. The Emperor proceeded from thence to Gaulier, where he levied the tribute upon the raja, and then continued his march to Biana, taking tribute from Kerim, the lord of that country. He after these transactions returned to Delhi.

In the year 820, Tân, chief of thofe Turks who had affaffinated Malleck, lay at the head of a great army before Sirhind. Zirick, governor of Sammana, was immediately difpatched by Chizer, with a ftrong force, againft the Turk who befieged Sirhind, and he was once more driven back to his hills; and a feafonable relief was accomplifhed for the empire. Zirick having, in purfuit of the enemy, reached the village of Pael, Tân confented to pay tribute, and gave him his fon as a hoftage, expelling the murderers of Malleck. Upon this pacification he was left in poffeffion of Jallender, and Zirick returned to Sammana, fending the hoftage and contributions which he had raifed, to the royal prefence.

his approach, thut himfelf up in Budaoon, where the king befieged him for fix months. In the course of the fiege, Cawam, Achtiar Lodi, and all the old friends of the Emperor Mahmood, formed a confpiracy against the life of Chizer. The Sultan difcovering the plot, decamped from before Budaoon, and returned towards Delhi. He, on his way, prepared an entertainment, upon the 20th of the first Jemmad in 822, to which all the conspirators were invited, and the guards fetting fuddenly upon them, they were to a man affaffinated.

After the Sultan returned to Delhi, he was informed, that an impostor had appeared at Matchewarrah, under the name of Saring Chan, and had, by that means, collected a great body of people together. The king ordered Maleck Lodi, who, with the title of Islam Chan, was, at that time, governor of Sirhind, against him. The impoftor was defeated, driven to the hills, and purfued by the joint forces of Tân, governor of Jallender, of Zirick, governor of Sammana, and of Maleck, governor of the country between the rivers. The impoftor's army deferted him, each man fkulking as beft he could, and privately retiring to his abode. The imperial forces having no further fervice to do, feparated, and returned to their refpective flations. But, in the year following, Saring, the impoftor, iffued again from his hills, and having made an alliance with Tân, governor of Jallender, they invefted the fort of Sirhind, and ravaged the country as far as Munfurepoor and Pael. The king fent a great army against them, who, giving them a total defeat, drove them out of the kingdom.

In the year 824, Chizer marched towards Mewat, taking and Chizer's destroying the fort of Kotillah. The vizier dying at that time, the vizarit was conferred upon his fon. The Sultan turned from thence Accordingly, two days after the Sultan's death, Mubarick * afcended the throne, by the title of the Supporter of Religion and father of throne. the victorious. The new emperor made the usual appointments, raifing Maleck Buddir, his coufin, to high honours; and Maleck Rigib, to the government of Dibalpoor and Punjaab.

In the month of the first Jemmad, he received advices, that Jifferit, the brother of Sheca the Gicker, who had, the preceding year, defeated and taken Ali king of Cashmire, upon his return from an expedition against Tatta, prefuming upon his own power and valour, had taken a refolution to attempt the throne of Delhi. He. for this purpole, invited into his fervice the famous Tan, who had fled to the mountains, and appointed him captain general of his forces. He foon over-run the countries of Punjaab and Lahore, feized upon Zirick, governor of Jallender, by perfidious means, after which he took the place; and immediately thereafter befieged Islam, the imperial governor of Sirhind.

The emperor Mubarick, though the folfitial rains were then in their height, marched from Delhi, and upon his approach to Sirhind, Jifferit raifed the fiege, and retreated to Ludhana. Zirick, at that place, found means to escape from him, and join Mubarick. The emperor advanced towards Ludhana and Jifferit, croffing the Suttuluz, encamped on the opposite bank; having first possefied himfelf of all the boats upon the river, which circumftance obliged Mubarick to halt, till the water fhould fall at Kabulpoor, Jifferit, in the mean time, being determined to oppofe his paffage. Upon the 11th of Shuwal, Secunder the Vizier, Zirick, Mahmood Haffen, Maleck Callu, and other omrahs, according to the emperor's order, made a forced march, and forded the river, the king himfelf following them clofe to fupport them with the body of the army. Jifferit, by this means, was thrown into confusion, and turned his face to flight. The Sultan kept clofe to his heels, flew, in the purfuit, a great many of the enemy, and took all their baggage.

Jifferit, after this defeat, took refuge in the mountains, in a very diffreffed condition. But Rai Bimé of Jimmu, having directed the king's army to Bile, a flrong fort into which Jifferit had thrown himfelf, he fled to another place, but was purfued with great flaughter, and Mubarick, in the Mohirim, of 825, directed his march to Lahore, ordered the ruined palaces and fortifications to be repaired, and, appointing Haffen governor, returned to Delhi.

Mubarick rebuilds Lahore, and returns to Delhi.

Jifferit befieges Lahore without fuccefs, Jifferit, collecting his fcattered forces, took the field again, and invefted Lahore for five months, without fuccefs. He then raifed the fiege, retired to Callanore, and fell upon Rai Bimé, for having given affiftance to the king; but the action, which enfued between them, being undecifive, Jifferit went to the banks of the Bea, and began to recruit his army. In the mean time, Malleck Secunder the vizier, who had been fent to fuccour Lahore, joined by Malleck Rigib, governor of Debalpoor, and by Iflam, governor cf Sirhind, advanced towards Jifferit, and obliged him to crofs the Ravi and Chinaab, and to take fhelter among the hills. The vizier vizier marched along the Ravi to Callanore; and, upon the frontiers of Jimmu, Rai Bimé joined him, and leading the imperial troops through the hills, where the Gickers were concealed, fome thousands of that unhappy people were put to the fword, and the vizier returned to Lahore.

Thefe fucceffes prevailed upon the king to appoint the vizier vice-roy of Lahore, and to recal Haffen. But, in the year eight hundred and twenty fix, the Sultan deprived him of the vizarit, and conferred it upon Surur ul Muluck, whom he difpatched against the Hindoos of Kittar. The emperor himself followed that general with a greater army. The inhabitants of Kittar were fub- Mubarick indued, and a great tribute exacted from them. Mubarick having fettled affairs with Mahabut, governor of Budaoon, commanded him to march against the tribe of Toor, whom that general plundered, and took prifoners to a man. The Raja of Attava having, at this time, withdrawn himfelf from the royal camp, Mubarick purfued him to that place, and befieged him there. But terms of peace were fettled between them, and the Raja's fon given as a hoftage for his father's future good behaviour. The king, after these transactions, returned to Delhi.

Haffen was, about this time, appointed paymafter and commander in chief of the troops. Iifferit, unconquered by his misfortunes, raifed again his head, and, having defeated and flain Rai Bimé, by a fresh acquisition of reputation and wealth, raifed an army of Gickers, with which he again attempted the conqueft of Delhi. Having ravaged the countries of Lahore and Debalpoor, he collected together very confiderable plunder, but when Secunder, the late vizier, advanced against him, he did not chufe to rifque a battle, and therefore retired, with his fpoils, E 2

In the mean time, Jifferit made an alliance with Amir Ali, a Mogul Omrah, a fubject of the emperor Sharoch, the fon of the great Timur, who refided at Cabul. He perfuaded Amir Ali to make an incurfion into the territories of Seiftan, Bicker, and Tatta, to draw off the king's attention from Delhi, and fo to facilitate his own fchemes. Alla, governor of Moultan, dying about this time, and the news of Amir Ali's incurfion being noifed abroad, the king, without delay, fent Haffen, with the army, towards Moultan. The raja of Malava had, in the fame year, invefted Gualier, which obliged the emperor Mubarick to raife all the forces of thofe provinces, and to march againft him ; levying, on his way, contributions upon Amir, prince of Biana.

The raja of Atava, upon the approach of Mubarick, croffed the Chumbul, and fat down on the oppofite bank. Mubarick having, in the mean time, found another ford, croffed the river with great expedition, attacked him in his camp, took many prifoners, and a part of the enemy's baggage. The prifoners being found to be Mahommedans, were difiniffed by the king. The raja thought it then advifeable to compound all differences, by paying down a fum of money to the Sultan; upon which he was permitted to withdraw towards Dhar. Mubarick having tarried for fome time in that place, to levy contributions upon the neighbouring Zemindars, returned, in the month of Rigib, eight hundred and twenty feven, to Delhi.

The Sultan, next year, made a motion towards Kittar, where the Indian prince Narfingh came to the banks of the Ganges, to

The Sultan croffed the river, chaftifed fome riotous Zemindars, and returned to Delhi. He did not remain there many days, before he drew his army towards Mewat, from whence he drove the rebels to the hills, and ravaging their country, returned to Delhi; and permitting his omrahs to retire to their jagiers, he gave himfelf up to pleafure and fellivity.

But the inhabitants of Mewat, rendered more defperate and diffreffed by the king's bad policy, in ruining their country, were obliged to prey upon their neighbours, and to infeft all the adjacent countries. This circumstance obliged the king, in the year eight hundred and twenty nine, to collect again an army to fubdue them. Upon his approach, Jillu and Kiddu, the grandfons of Badhader Nahir, retreated to the hills of Alwar, where they defended the paffes with great bravery. Being, at length, reduced to great diffress, they furrendered themfelves, were imprisoned, their country was again ravaged, and the Sultan returned to Delhi.

But the diffreffes of the people of Mewat did not render them peaceable fubjects. The king, after a receis of four months only, was again obliged to turn his arms against them, and to carry fire and fword through their whole country. He proceeded as far as Biana, where, after the death of Amir, his brother Mahommed held the chief fway. Upon the approach of the emperor. During thefe transactions Mahommed found means to escape, with his family, to Mewat, and collecting a confiderable force, took the city of Biana, in the absence of Mackbul, on an expedition to Mahaban. The Sultan dispatched Mubariz, whom he appointed to that government, to drive Mahommed from thence. Mahommed retired into the fort, when Mubariz took possible for the country. Ibrahim advanced along the banks of the Black River to Burhanabad, from thence to the village of Raberi, and so on to the banks of Kinhire, where he encamped. The action commenced, with great fury, about noon, and night The amies parted the combatants ; both armies retreating to their refpective A drawn batcamps. Ibrahim, however, marched off, in the morning, towards Jionpoor, while Mubarick, contenting himfelf with the advantage he had gained, returned towards Gualier, croffing the river at Hitgaut. Having received there the ufual prefents, he turned off towards Biana, into which Mahommed had again thrown himfelf, after the battle. He made a gallant defence, but was again obliged to capitulate, and had leave to go whitherfoever he pleafed. In the mean time advices arrived at Delhi, that Malleck Rigib was dead, upon which, the king conferred the title of Ameid ul Muluck upon Haffen, who had fettled the affairs of Biana, and fent him governor to Moultan. The Sultan, in the following year, proceeded to Gualier, which country he ravaged, and carried off fome thoufands of the poor inhabitants into flavery. Turning then his forces towards Raberi, he wrefted that country from the fon of Haffen, gave it to Malleck Humza, and afterwards returned to Delhi. Seid Allum dying by the way, his eldeft fon had the title of Seid Chan conferred upon him, and the youngeft that of Suja ul Muluck, together with all the wealth of their father, which was very great; though, according to the cuftom of Hindoftan, it fhould become the property of the king.

Ingratitude of the fons of Seid Allum. These favours, however, did not fecure the faith of the fons of Seid Allum, for they fent Fowlad, a Turkish flave, to Tibberhind, to flir up privately, in their name, an infurrection there. They had formed hopes, it is faid, that they might be fent with a force to fuppress the rebellion, and so have an opportunity to join the rebels. But the plot was discovered, and both imprisoned; while, in the mean time, Eusuph and Ibbu were fent to Tibberhind to confiscate their estates, and suppress the disturbance raised by Fowlad.

Rebellion of Fowlad. Fowlad entering into a negotiation, lulled into a negligent fecurity the imperial generals, and fallying one night from his fort, furprized their camp. He was, however, fo warmly received by the king's troops, that he was foon driven back. This did not deter him from making another effort next night, at the fame time making a great difcharge of artillery from the works, which fruck a panic into the imperial troops, who took immediately to their their heels, leaving their camp flanding, with all their baggage. Mubarick, upon receiving advice of that difafter, was conftrained to march towards Tibberhind in perfon. The rebel daily gathered ftrength, and the king was obliged to call Ameid ul Muluck from Moultan, and feveral other governors, to join him. Every thing for the expedition being prepared, Mubarick flopped at Surfutti, and difpatched the greatest part of his army to invest the fort of Tibberhind. Fowlad fent a meffage to the imperial camp, importing, that he had great confidence in Ameid ul Muluck, and faid, that if he should be fent with promife of pardon, he himfelf would deliver up the place. The emperor accordingly fent Ameid to Tibberhind, where Fowlad met him a little without the gate. Having accordingly received affurances of pardon, he promifed to give up the place the next day. But one of Ameid's attendants, who was of Fowlad's acquaintance, told him privately, that though Ameid was a man of firict honour, and would certainly adhere to his promife, yet the king might not be fo tender of preferving his, and that it was very probable he might bring Fowlad to punifhment. Fowlad, after the conference was over, revolved this intimation in his own mind, and repented ferioufly of his promife ; and, therefore, as he had both money and provisions, he determined to hold out to the laft.

The king feeing that the taking of the place would be a work of Befieges him. time, and that there would be no occafion for fo great an army to befiege it, he permitted Ameid ul Muluck to return with the forces of Moultan, and leaving Islam Lodi, Cummal, and Firofe, to carry on the fiege, he himfelf retired to Delhi. Fowlad, having held out fix months, was greatly diffreffed, and faw no means of extricating himfelf, but by an alliance with Ali, governor of Cabul, on the part of Sharoch, the Mogul emperor. Fowlad, for this fignal fervice, gave to Ali two lacks of rupees, and other prefents; and having given to him all the charge of his family, exerted himself in repairing the fortifications, and laying in provisions and ammunition.

Moguls ravage the country; Ali, croffing the Suttuluz, committed cruel depredations upon the unhappy country, acquiring of plunder twenty times the value of the fubfidy which he had received from Fowlad. Advancing then to Lahore, he raifed the ufual tribute from Secunder, then returned towards Dibalpoor, defolating the country wherever he went; infomuch that forty thoufand Hindoos were computed to have been maffacred, befides a great number carried away prifoners. Ameid ul Muluck pofted himfelf to oppofe Ali, at the town of Tilbanna, but he gave him the flip, and went to Chitpoor, when Ameid received the king's orders to retreat to fave Moultan. The flight of the imperial army encouraged the enemy to follow them beyond the Ravi, and to lay wafte the country, to within ten crores of Moultan. Ali defeated there: Illam Lodi, who had been left to ftop his progrefs.

From thence the Moguls advanced to Cheirabad, within fix miles of the city, and the next day, which was the fourth of Ramzan, they made an affault upon the place, but were beaten back. They continued, however, from their camp to make daily excurfions towards the city, putting all whom they could meet to the fword.

MUBARICK II.

The king being informed of thefe transactions, fent Fatte Chan and Mubarick, with other omrahs of diffinction, to fuccour Ameid; who, upon being joined by all thefe with their forces, went out, and offered battle to Ali. Ali did not decline it, and a furious conflict enfued, in the beginning of which the Moguls gained fome advantage. However, upon the death of Fatte Chan, the gale of fortune changed, and blew with the ftandards of Hindoftan. Ali, at one ftroke, played away all his gains, efcaping, with a few attendants only, to Cabul, his whole army being either killed or drowned in the Gelum, in their precipitate flight.

Ameid, having purfued the runaways to Shinnore, returned victorious to Moultan, and the omrahs, who had fuccoured him, repaired, by the king's orders, to Delhi; and foon after, Mubarick, jealous of the fuccefs of Ameid, called him alfo to court. Jifferit took advantage of his abfence, croffed the Gelum, Ravi, and Bea, and fought Secunder, the late vizier, near Jillender, defeated and took him prifoner, with all his treafure and baggage. He forthwith advanced and befieged Lahore. Ali, at the fame time, at the infligation of Jifferit, made another incurfion towards Moultan, and, having taken Tilbunna, by capitulation, he broke his word, plundered the place, maffacred all the men able to bear arms, and carried their wives and children into captivity, laying the town in ruins.

Fowlad, taking alfo advantage of thefe diffurbances, marched out of Tibberhind, and invading the country of Rai Firofe, defeated him. Mubarick thought it now high time to march from Delhi. He, accordingly, upon the first of the first Jemmad, eight hundred and thirty-five, took the route of Lahore, appointing his vizier, governor of that place, and to command in the van of his army. The Sultan, upon this, took the government of Lahore from the vizier, and gave it to Nuferit; then returning, encamped near Panniput, on the banks of the Jumna, fending Ameid ul Muluck with a part of the army to fupprefs fome infurrections about Gualier, and the vizier to befiege Tibberhind; he himfelf returning to Delhi.

Mubarick marches against Jisserit. In the month of Zihidge, Jifferit advanced again to Lahore, and commenced hoftilities againft Nuferit, which obliged the king, in the year eight hundred and thirty-fix, to march from Delhi as far as Sammana. Intelligence was brought to him in that place of the death of his mother, Muchduma Jehan, and he immediately returned, with a few attendants; and, after performing the funeral obfequies, went back to his army. After his arrival in the camp, he fuddenly changed his refolution, and turned back towards Mewat, conferring the government of Lahore upon Malleck Lodi, who promifed to expel Jifferit. But Jifferit, upon hearing of the king's return, was joined by a great body of Gickers, who imagined that his affairs bore a better afpect, fo that he was in a condition to receive Lodi, whom he defeated.

The king having received the news of this overthrow, and alfo that Ali, governor of Cabul, was coming towards Tibberhind, took again the rout of Punjaab, fending before him Ameid ul Muluck to reinforce the omrahs who were befieging Tibberhind. Upon his approach, Ali, who ftood in awe of him, laid afide his intentions of coming to Tibberhind, and turned away, by forced marches, towards Lahore, which he furprized, and began a horrid fcene of maffacre and depredation. But hearing that the king had reached Tilbundi, Ali left a garrifon of two thoufand men in the place, and retreated towards Cabul, ravaging the country in his way,

The king a fecond time raifed Secunder, who had ranfomed himfelf, to the government of Lahore, Dibalpoor, and Jillender, upon which he advanced and laid fiege to the city. He took it by capitulation, and permitted the garrilon to retire to Retaken. Cabul. He immediately croffed the Ravi, near Tilbundi, and invested Shinnore. Muziffer held up in that place the fandard of opposition for a whole month, but being hard preffed, he capitu- Shinnore calated, by giving his daughter to the king, and paying a great ranfom for his liberty. Mubarick left a great part of his army at Dibalpoor, and, with a felect body, marched himfelf to Moultan to vifit the tombs of the faints, from whence he returned in a few days to his camp. He, at this time, divefted Secunder of his government of Lahore, gave it to Ameid ul Muluck, and returned with great expedition to Delhi. Being jealous of the power of the vizier, he joined Kammal with him in the vizarit; and, the latter being efteemed a man of superior abilities, he foon gained the favour of his fovereign and the people.

The vizier, upon this, became diffatisfied, and began to project treason. Having gained over Sidarin and Sidpal, two great Hindoo chiefs of the tribe of Kittrie, Miran Sidder, deputy to the chief fecretary Sammud, lord of the private chambers, and others, they watched an opportunity to affaffinate the king. About this time, Mubarick had ordered a city to be founded upon the banks of the Jumna, calling it the city of Mubarick, and made an excursion towards Tibberhind, as it were to take the diversion of hunting. Having, on the way, received advices that Tibberhind was taken, and being prefented with the head of Fowlad, he returned to the new city. He there received intelligence that

He therefore gave orders to muster his army, and pitching his tent without the city, delayed a few days in regulating and collecting his forces, during which time he continued to visit the new works without fear of danger, having never given offence to his nobility, except in changing or turning them out of their governments when they milbehaved.

He is affaffinated. Upon the ninth of the month of Rigib, in the year eight hundred and thirty-feven, according to his cuftom, he went to worfhip at a new molque which he had built in the new city, with only a few attendants. The confpirators rufhed in, in armour, with drawn fwords upon him, and bafely affaffinated him. The vizier having previoufly fettled matters with Mahommed, one of the grandfons of the emperor Chizer, raifed that prince to the throne.

His character. Mubarick reigned thirteen years, three months, and fixteen days. He was effected a man of parts, just and benevolent, and, though no great warrior, had he lived in a virtuous age, there is no doubt but he posseffed talents which might render him worthy of a throne.

State of Afia.

Little alteration happened in the north of Afia, during the reign of Mubarick. Sharoch fat on the throne of the Moguls, and feemed more inclined to rule his dominions with justice and equity, than to extend their limits towards India.

MAHOMMED V.

CCORDING to the cuftom of the world, which cannot I fublift without rule, the fame day that Mubarick was fent to eternity, Mahommed * was eftablished upon the throne. The ungrateful affaffin, the vizier, received the title of lord of the world, and feized upon the king's treasure, regalia, and other effects, difcharging all the old omrahs from office, and appointing new ones, who might, in time, ferve his ambitious views.

Kummal, the deputy vizier, and other omrahs, who were in the camp, having confulted among themfelves, upon hearing of difcontent. the king's death, refolved, rather than kindle a civil war in the country, to bear with the times, to pay allegiance to the new king, and to wait a more proper and more certain opportunity of taking revenge upon the confpirators. They came into the city and paid their compliments to Mahommed. The first preferments, which the vizier gave away to facilitate his future fchemes, was to appoint the two Hindoo confpirators to the governments of Biana, Amrohi, Narnoul, and Coram; and Miran Sidder, dignified with a title, was prefented with a very confiderable jagier. The fon of Seid Salem was dignified with the title of Chan Azim, and the government of feveral countries were conferred upon him. But the omrahs, and dependants of Mubarick, were, by tricks and falfe accufations, killed, imprifoned, banished, robbed, or turned out of office.

that place. At the fame time, fome of the omrahs of the emperors Mubarick and Chizer, who faw that there was a defign on foot to deprive them of their jagiers, particularly Chimun, governor of Budaoon, Malleck Lodi, who commanded at Simbol, Ali of Guzerat, and Amir, the Turk, crected the fpear of rebellion, upon which the vizier, deceived by the behaviour of his deputy Kummal, gave him the command of the army, and fent Sidarin, and his own fon Eufoph, along with him, to fupprefs the rebels. But when they came to the village of Birren, Kummal intended to take revenge on Sidarin and Eufoph, for the murder of the king. He therefore acquainted Malleck Lodi of his refolutions, who, for that reafon, made no motion towards them. This defign being, however, discovered to the vizier, he fent Hoshiar, his own flave. with a great army, under pretence of fuccours, with private infructions to prevent the effects of the plot. Kummal had, at Ahare, joined his forces with Malleck Lodi, before the reinforcement, under the vizier's flave, arrived. Hofhiar, hearing of this junction, thought that there was no fafety for him, and he, therefore, fled, with Eufoph and Sidarin, to Delhi. Kummal immediately fent to call the difaffected omrahs, who joined him without delay, fo that, upon the laft of Ramzan, he moved, with a great army, towards Delhi.

The vizier befieged in the citadel. The vizier flut himfelf up in the citadel of Seri, which he held out three months; but as the party of Kummal daily gained ftrength and reputation, he was driven to great diffrefs. The king, perceiving that his own affairs would be ruined, if he fhould adhere to the vizier, endeavoured to conciliate matters with the befiegers, and, at the fame time, fought an opportunity of making his efcape, or cutting off the vizier. The vizier difcovering this plot, defigned to be beforehand with the king; accordingly, upon the eighth of Mohirrim, with the fons

The fons of Miran Sidder, and the reft of the affaffins, were taken, and put to death, while Hofhiar and one Mubarick, who were parties concerned, were publickly executed. The Kittries, and other adherents of the vizier, afraid for themfelves, role up in arms. The king was obliged to that himfelf up, ordering the Bagdat-gate to be thrown open to the befiegers, who, rushing in accordingly, began a dreadful maffacre among the rebels, till they entirely fubdued them. Such as remained alive were bound and put to death at the tomb of the emperor Mubarick.

Kummal, and the other omrahs, fwore allegiance the next day, for the fecond time, to Mahommed; the vizarit was conferred on Kummal, and Chimun was dignified with the title of Ghazi Malleck, with a jagier. The other omrahs were confirmed in their former offices, governments, and eflates. When matters were completely fettled at Delhi, the king, by the advice of his counfellors, made a campaign towards Moultan, and encamping near the city of Mubarick, gave orders to draw together his army from all the provinces. Many of the chiefs, being intimidated, delayed to repair to the imperial flandard till Ameid ul Muluck arrived from Moultan, adding power to enforce the royal commands, by a numerous army, which he brought with him. All the other provincial omrahs haftened to the camp, and were honoured with dreffes, and other marks of favor and diffinc-and to Sammana. In the year eight hundred and forty, he marched towards Sammana, and detached a part of his army againft Jifferit, the Gicker, who was raifing diffurbances. The country of Jifferit was plundered, and the king returned to Delhi, where he gave himfelf up entirely to pleafure, neglecting all the cares and neceffary affairs of government. The accounts of the king's luxurious indolence foon affected the flate. Diffatisfaction began to appear first in Moultan, where a tribe of Patans, called Linga, rofe in rebellion. At the fame time, Beloli Lodi, who, after the death of his uncle, Iflam, became governor of Sirhind, without any orders, possible himfelf of the city and districts of Lahore and Debalpoor, with all the country back to Panniput.

Beloli defeats the imperial army. The Sultan receiving intelligence of this revolt, fent his whole army against him, who drove him back to the hills. In the retreat many chiefs of distinction were put to the fword; but Beloli recruited his army, and, when the imperial forces were withdrawn, he again possessed himself of all the countries from which they had driven him. Mahommed, this time, fent Hissam Chan, the vizier's deputy, against him, who was defeated, and beat back to Delhi; upon which, Beloli wrote to the king, that if he would put Hissam to death, who, by his intrigues, had been the occafion of this rebellion, he would lay down his arms.

The governors of the provinces obferving this pufillanimous and impolitic behaviour of the king, predicted his deftruction, and endeavoured to fecure their own independency; while the fubjects and zemindars, forefeeing the convultions that must happen in the ftate, with-held their rents, in hopes that they might be paffed over, in the general confusion.

Ibrahim, fovereign of the eaftern provinces, poffeffed himfelf of feveral diftricts adjoining to his dominions; and Mahmood Chilligi *, king of Malava, made an attempt on the capital; and, in the year eight hundred and forty-four, advanced within two crores of the city. Mahommed, ftruck with terror in this urgent fituation of affairs, imprudently fent an embaffy to Beloli, to beg his affiftance. Beloli accordingly, with twenty thoufand Perfian horfe, came to Delhi; Mahommed, though his army was greatly fuperior to the enemy, was afraid to take the field by himfelf, but committed the charge of the whole to his omrahs, and repofed himfelf in the haram. The omrahs, according to orders, advanced with the army againft the enemy, Beloli leading the van.

When Mahmood Chilligi was given to underftand, that the king of Delhi was not prefent, he thought it was meant as an affront to him; and, to be on a footing with Mahommed, he committed the charge of his army to his fons Yeaz ul Dien and Kuddir Chan. The two armies having engaged, the troops of Delhi gave way, and left Beloli alone to difpute the field, which he maintained with invincible refolution, till the fugitives, afhamed of their behaviour, returned to the action. Beloli, who now began justly to defpife them both, and to afpire to the empire, marched out of the city with his own troops, and purfuing Mahmood Chilligi, attacked him upon his march, defeated him, and took all his baggage. The weak Sultan, who did not hitherto fee through his palpable intentions, gave him the title of first of the nobles *, and adopted him for his fon.

In the year eight hundred and forty-five, the emperor marched to Sammana, giving the governments of Lahore and Debalpoor to Beloli, and ordering him to expel Jifferit. He himfelf returned to his capital. Beloli, by this means, became extremely powerful, and recruited a great army of Afghans; but, inflead of fighting Jifferit, he brought him over to his party, and began to feize upon feveral diffricts, without any orders from the king. In the mean time, Mahommed fell fick and died, in the year eight hundred and forty-nine, leaving behind him the character of a weak, diffolute, and unwarlike prince; owing to the ambition of others a throne, upon which he could not fit with dignity himfelf. A LLA *, the fon of Mahommed, mounted the throne upon the demife of his father. All the omrahs, excepting Beloli Lodi, came and fwore allegiance to him. This contempt of Beloli, the new Sultan was in no condition to chaftife. But having collected an army, in the beginning of the year eight hundred and fifty, he marched to recover Biana. When he was upon the way, there was a rumour propagated, that the king of the Eaft was advancing towards Delhi, which, though falfe, brought back the emperor to his capital; though he was told by Hiffam, the vizier, how ridiculous it would appear in a king to be guided by a vague report. This reprimand brought upon the vizier Alla's difpleafure.

His luxury.

This flep, however, proved ruinous to the Sultan's reputation, and the meaneft of the people feared not to fay publickly, that he was a weaker man, and a greater fool, than his father. He marched in the following year to Budaoon, where he remained fome time, laying out gardens, building pleafure-houfes, and making entertainments, and then returned to Delhi. Pretending that the air of Budaoon agreed better with his health, he expressed an inclination of making that city his refidence, to divert him from which, the vizier took much pains, but only incurred more and more of his displeasure.

Beloli made, about this time, another attempt upon the city, but was not more fuccefsful than he was before. The king, relieved from this danger, began to confult the means to recover part of his loft empire, advising with Cuttub Ifah, and Partab. These chiefs, defirous to weaken him still more, told him, that the omrahs were all difgusted with his vizier; that, should he be turned out of office, and imprifoned, they were ready to pay him. due allegiance, and made no doubt but the affairs of the empire would put on a more favourable afpect. The weak Alla became the dupe of those traitors, and accordingly imprifoned and difgraced his vizier. He immediately ordered preparations to be made for removing his court to Budaoon, from which not all the remonstrances of his best friends could restrain him; though they represented, in a ftrong light, how impolitic it would be, at fuch a juncture, to change his capital.

Alla accordingly, in the year eight hundred and fifty-two, fet out for Budaoon, leaving Hiffam in the government of Delhi. When the Sultan arrived at h is new capital, Cuttub and Partab waited upon him, and told him, that as long as the vizier was alive, the omrahs could not be brought to truft themfelves at court. BELOLI was an Afghan, of the tribe of Lodi, which people, forming themfelves into a commercial fociety, carried on a trade between Perfia and Hindoftan. In the time of the emperor Ferofe, Ibrahim, the grandfather of Beloli, being poffeffed of wealth, made his way at the court of Delhi, and raifed himfelf to the government of Moultan. Ibrahim had five fons, Sultan, Culla, Firofe, Mahommed, and Chaja, who, on the death of their father, remained in Moultan.

When Chizer, afterwards emperor, was appointed to that government, Sultan received the command of all his Afghan troops. In the action which Chizer had with Eckbal, Sultan had the good fortune to kill Eckbal, by which means he became a great favorite with Chizer. He was accordingly appointed by that prince governor of Sirhind, with the title of Illam Chan, while his brothers partook of his fortune. One of whom, Calla, the father of Beloli, had a diftrict beftowed upon him by his brother. The wife of Calla, who was his own coufin, being fmothered by the fall of a houfe, when with child, the father inftantly ripped up her belly, and faved the life of the infant, who afterwards held the empire, by the title of Sultan Beloli.

Account of his birth.

Diffinguishes himfelf in an action. Calla being killed in an action with the Afghans of Neaz, Beloli went to his uncle Iflam, at Sirhind, and upon his diffinguifhing himfelf in a battle, his uncle gave him his daughter in marriage. Iflam was, at this time, fo powerful, that he retained twelve thousand Afghans, mostly of his own tribe, in his fervice.

Iflam,

Islam, at his death, though he had children of his own come to maturity, recommended Beloli to fucceed him. The troops, upon this, divided into three parties, one of which adhered to Beloli, one to Firofe, brother to Islam, who had been made an omrah by the king of Delhi, and the other to Cuttub, the fon of Islam. Lat Beloli, who was the most artful of the three, found means to weaken his rivals, and encrease his own power.

Cuttub repaired to Delhi, and acquainted the emperor Mahommed V. that the Afghans of Sirhind were effablishing a power, which, unlefs it was foon prevented, would thake the empire. The Emperor immediately difpatched his vizier Secunder, with a powerful army, to bring the chiefs of the Afghans to court, and if they difobeyed, to expel them from Sirhind. Jifferit was also infligated to take arms against them, by which means they were; in the end, driven to the hills; but upon a promife of peace, and of their future good behaviour, Firofe left his fon Shai Chan and Beloli with his army, and, with fome attendants, went to. Tifferit and Secunder. They, notwithstanding their promise, by the advice of Cuttub, his nephew, who was in the imperial camp, imprifoned him and flew all his attendants. They alfo difpatched part of their army to reduce Beloli, but he retreated to a place of fafety; with the women and children. and even Cuttub, repenting of his former behaviour, found means to be reconciled to Beloli. Beloli foon after invaded Sirhind, and poffeffed himfelf of that province. Upon receiving intelligence of thefe transfactions, the emperor Mahommed fent Hiffam, his vizier, with a great army against him. Beloli took the field, and giving the vizier battle, defeated him, by which his power and reputation greatly encreased.

Is promifed the empire by a Dirvefh. We are told, that when Beloli was yet a youth in his uncle's fervice, one day he was permitted to pay his refpects to a famous Dirvefh of Sammana, whofe name was Sheidai. When he fat in a refpectful pofture before him, the Dirvefh cried out, in an enthufiaftick manner, "Who will give two thoufand rupees for the em-" pire of Delhi?" Upon which, Beloli told him, he had only one thoufand fix hundred rupees in the world, which he ordered his fervant to bring immediately and prefent to the Dirvefh. The Dirvefh accepted the money, and, laying his hand upon the head of Beloli, faluted him king.

Reflexion upon that tale.

Strate Milder

The companions of Beloli ridiculed him very much for this action; but he replied, " That, if the thing came to pafs, he had " made a cheap purchafe; if not, the bleffing of a holy man " could do him no harm." Upon a mind naturally ambitious, and in an age of fuperfition, this prediction of the Dirvesh might have great effect in promoting its own end; for when a man's mind is once bent upon the attainment of one object, the greateft difficulties will be often furmounted, by a fleady perfeverance. But to return from this digreffion.

After Beloli had defeated the vizier, he wrote to the emperor Mahommed, as before related, laying the whole blame of his rebellion all and the base of the second states of the bellion upon the vizier's conduct towards him. When Mahommed bafely complied with his defire of cutting off the vizier, Beloli, according to his promife, waited upon the king, that he might be better able to carry on his intrigues at court. He managed his affairs at Delhi fo well, that the government of Sirhind was conferred upon him, together with other diffricts near it, confirmed to him in jagier; which were the means that enabled him to mount the throne, as we have already feen, in the former reign. He had, at the time of his acceffion, nine fons, Chaja Baezid, Nizam, who was afterwards king, under the name of Secunder; Barbec, Mubarick, Alla, Jemmâl, Jacob, Mufah, and Jellâl; and of omrahs of renown, who were related to him, there were thirty-fix in the empire.

As Hamid, the vizier, who conferred the empire upon him, had great influence still in the state, he treated him for fome time with honor and refpect. Being one day in Hamid's house, at an entertainment, he ordered the companions whom he carried with him, to make themfelves appear as foolifh and ridiculous as poffible, that the vizier might confider them as filly fellows ; that fo he might be lefs upon his guard against them. When they accordingly came into company, fome tied their fhoes to their girdles, and others put them up in the niches of the apartment. Hamid afked them the reafon of that extraordinary behaviour. They replied, that they were afraid of thieves. When they had taken their feats upon the carpet, one of them began to praife the flowers, and brightness of the colours, faying, He would be extremely glad to have fuch a carpet, to fend home to his own country, to make caps for his boys. Hamid laughed, and told him, he would give him velvet or brocade for that purpofe. When the plates and boxes of perfumes were laid before them, fome began to rub the finest otter of rofes all over them, others to drink it, and others

The vizier, imagining that this behaviour proceeded from the king's humour, who had a mind to make merry in his houfe, was extremely pleafed, and had no fufpicion of men given to fo much mirth. The next vifit the king paid to Hamid, a greater number of his attendants were admitted : but as Hamid had ftill a greater number of his own friends within the court, it was neceffary to gain admiffion for fome more of the king's people, who were flopped without by the guards. The king having before inftructed them how to proceed in this cafe, they began loudly to wrangle with the guard, and threw out bitter invectives againft the king; for permitting them to be fo unworthily treated. The vizier hearing this, ordered the doors to be thrown open, and as many to be admitted as the court could contain. This point being gained, the king gave the fignal, and all his people drawing at once, told Hamid's fervants to remain quiet, and they fhould come to no harm. Upon which, two or three feized the vizier, and bound him. The king then told him, that gratitude was a fecurity for his life, but that it was neceffary he fhould retire from bufinefs, and fpend the reft of his days in the cares of a future flate. After this the king ruled without fear or controul.

Some of his omrahs being diffatisfied at this time, left him, and joined Mahmood, king of Jionpoor, who, during the abfence of Beloli, in the beginning of the year eight hundred and fifty-fix, advanced with a great army, and laid fiege to Delhi. Beloli haftened from Debalpoor, march by march, nor halted till he reached Perah, within thirty miles of Delhi.

Mahmood fent thirty thousand horse, and thirty elephants, under the command of Herevi, against him. When the action began, Cuttub, who excelled in archery, having funk an arrow in the forehead of one of Herevi's elephants, the animal became outrageous, and broke the lines. Cuttub, in the mean time, advancing against Diria Lodi, one of the difaffected omrahs, who had joined Mahmood, cried out-" For fhame! Diria, where is your " honor, thus to wage war against your own kindred, and to " inveft your wife and family in the city of Delhi, when you " ought rather to defend them against your natural enemies?" " Purfue me not," faid Diria, " and I am gone ;" and he immediately wheeled off, followed by all the Patans, or Afghans, in Herevi's army. The other troops being thus deferted, gave way, and Herevi was taken prifoner; but having, with his own hand, juft killed the brother of Rai Kirren, that omrah, in revenge, ftruck off his head, and fent it to the emperor. Upon receiving the news of this defeat, Mahmood railed the fiege of Delhi, and retreated with great precipitation to Jionpoor. Mahmod, immediately after this pr

The power of Beloli became firmly eftablished, and he began to turn his thoughts upon new acquisitions. His first movement was towards Mewat, where Hamid, the vizier, fubmitted himfelf to his authority. The emperor took feven pergunnahs from Hamid, and Beloli from thence marched to Birren, and Diria, governor of Simbol, prefented him with feven more pergunnahs, and fubmitted in like. manner. He then took the rout of Koli, and confirmed Ifah in that government. He continued his progrefs to Burhanabad, and gave that province to Mubarick, while Boga was delivered over to. Rai Partab. But when he advanced to Raberi, Cuttub, the fon of. Haffen, the governor, flut himfelf up in the fort, but the king took it in a few days by capitulation, and again fettled him in the fame government. Beloli marching from thence to Attava, regulated that government, and confirmed the former Suba.

The king of the East has defigns upon Delhi. An omrah, called Jonah, quitted, about this time, the court in, difguft, and joined Mahmood, king of the Eaft, from whom he. received the government of Shumfeabad. Jonah infligated Mahmood to make another attempt upon Delhi, who, for that purpofe, took the route of Attava, where he met Beloli. The armies, the firft day of their appearance in fight, on both fides fent out partiesto fkirmifh, but nothing remarkable was done, and, the next day, they began to treat, when it was agreed, that Beloli fhould keep, poffeffion of all the countries poffeffed by the emperor Mubarick, and that Mahmood fhould hold all that was in the poffeffion of. Sultan Ibrahim, of Jionpoor; that the former fhould give up all the elephants taken in the engagement with Herevi, and the latter: turn Jonah out of his government.

Offended with Beloli. Mahmood, immediately after this pacification, returned to Jionpoor, and Beloli went to Shumfeabad to take pofferfion of it. This latter expedition of Beloli greatly offended Mahmood, and he immediately returned to Shumfeabad, where the omrahs, Cuttub and Diria, furprized his camp in the night. But during the attack, attack, the horfe of Cuttub having trod upon a tent-pin, threw him, and he was taken by the enemy, and his party retreated to their own camp. Beloli drew out his army in the morning, but received advice that Mahmood had juft expired, and that the Dies. omrahs had fet up his fon Mahommed; and, by the mediation of Bibi Raja, the young king's mother, who probably had received previous affurances, a peace was immediately concluded. Mahommed returned to Jionpoor, and Beloli took the rout of Delhi.

Before the king arrived at the capital, he received a letter from Shumfe Chatoon, the fifter of Cuttub, conjuring him, in the moft tender manner, not to fuffer her brother to remain in captivity. This prevailed upon Beloli to break the peace he had juft concluded, and to march towards Jionpoor. Mahommed met him near Sirfutti. The younger brother of Mahommed, Haffen, fearing his brother's refertment for fome trefpafs, took this opportunity of marching off, with all his adherents, to Kinnoge. Sittal, his other brother, foon followed him; but the detachment which Beloli had fent after Haffen, met Sittal on the way, and took him prifoner. Beloli determined to keep him as a ranfom for Cuttub.

In the mean time, the omrahs confpired againft Mahommed, king of the Eaftern provinces, and having affaffinated him, advanced Haffen, his brother, who had fled to Kinnoge, to the throne. Beloli, for what reafon we know not, took no advantage of thefe diforders, but now entered into a truce with Haffen for the fpace of four years; Cuttub and Sittal being interchangeably releafed. Beloli returned towards Shumfeabad, whither Bir-Singi, the fon of Rai Partab, came to pay his refpects. But as his father had taken a ftandard and a pair of drums formerly from the omrah Vol. II. Treachery of Diria. Deria in an action, that bafe man thought to wipe off that difhonour by affaffinating Bir-Singhi. Cuttub, the fon of Haffen, Mubariz, and Rai Partab, differing with the cruel traitor about this murder, were obliged to fly to Haffen, king of the Eaftern provinces. Beloli, after these transactions, returned to Delhi.

But, upon account of the rebellion of the viceroy of Moultan, and the diforders in Punjaab, he marched towards that quarter. Upon his way, he heard that the Eaftern monarch Haffen was advancing, in his abfence, with a great army, to take Delhi. He therefore, through neceffity, returned, and leaving Delhi in charge of Cuttub and Jehan, he went out to meet the enemy. The two armies having met at the village of Chundwar, they fkirmifhed without intermiffion for feven days. A peace was at length patched up for the term of three years. At the expiration of this truce, Haffen invefted Attava, took it, and drew over Ahmed, governor of Mewat, and Ruftum of Koli, to his intereft, while Ahmed, who commanded at Selwan, and was also governor of Biana, ftruck money, and read the chutba in his name. Haffen, with one hundred thousand horse and a thousand elephants, marched from Attava towards Delhi; and Beloli, no ways intimidated by that great force, marched out boldly to meet him. The two armies having advanced to Battevara, encamped for fome time in fight of each other, and after fome fkirmifhes, in which there was no fuperiority of advantage on either fide, they again firuck up a peace. But this pacification was not permanent. Haffen advanced again towards Delhi fome months after, and was oppofed at the village of Sinkar, and obliged to depart upon peaceable terms.

Much about this time, the mother of Haffen, Bibi Raja, died at Attava, and the Raja of Gualier and Cuttub went to confole 3 him.

him upon that occasion. When in discourse, Cuttub perceived that Hallen was a bitter enemy of Beloli, he began to flatter him after this manner :- Beloli is one of your dependants, and cannot think of contending long with you. If I do not put you in poffellion of Delhi, look on my word as nothing. He then, with much art, got leave to depart from Haffen's court, and returned to Delhi, and there he told to Beloli that he had escaped with a great deal of difficulty from the hands of Haffen, who was meditating a fresh war against him.

About this time, the abdicated emperor, Alla, died at Budaoon, upon which Haffen went to fettle matters at Budaoon, and, after the funeral ceremonies were over, he took that country from the children of Alla. Marching from thence to Simbol, he imprifoned Mubarick, governor of that province, then marching towards Delhi, in the year eight hundred and eighty-three, he croffed the river Jumma near Gutteruitch. Beloli, who was at Sirhind, upon receiving intelligence of this invalion, returned with all expedition to fave his capital. Several flight actions enfued, in which Haffen had, in general, the advantage.

Cuttub difpatched a perfon to Haffen, informing him, that Beloli was ready to relinquish all the countries beyond the Ganges. upon condition he should leave him in possession of all the provinces on this fide of that river. These terms being accepted, they reverfed their hoftile fpears, and Haffen marched homeward. But Beloli, in a perfidious manner, broke the peace, and, purfuing Haffen, attacked him upon his march, killing a great number, and taking forty omrahs prifoners, belides part of his treafure and equipage. Beloli purfued his victory, and took feveral diffricts belonging to Haffen, fuch as Campul, Pattiali, Shum-I 2 feabad, feabad, Sickite, Marhera, Sittali, and Koli, appointing agents to manage them under himfelf. But when he had purfued Haffen as far as Arumbidger, the latter flood his ground, and engaged Beloli. The victory being dubious, a peace was patched up between them, the village of Doupamou being fettled as the boundary between the empires. After this pacification, Haffen proceeded to Raberi, and Beloli returned to Delhi.

Haffen could not, however, forget the perfidy of Beloli. He recruited his army, and fome time after marched againft him, and met him at the village of Sinhar, when an obflinate battle enfued, in which Haffen was defeated, and loft all his treafure and baggage; which, together with an addition of reputation, greatly promoted the affairs of Beloli. Haffen having retreated to Raberi, he was followed thither by Beloli, and upon flanding a fecond engagement, he was again totally defeated. After the battle, he retreated towards Gualier; the raja of Gualier brought him fome lacks of rupees, elephants, horfes, camels, and a fine fet of camp equipage, and accompanied him to Calpie.

Beloli marched, in the mean time, to Attava, where he befieged Ibrahim, the brother of Haffen, and took the place by capitulation. He, however; generoufly made him a prefent of the fort, and proceeded to Calpie; Haffen met him upon the banks of the river, where they remained for fome months. But Rai Chand of Buxar, coming over to Beloli, fhewed him a paffable ford in the river, by which he croffed, and attacking Haffen, defeated him and drove him to Jionpoor, upon which Beloli turned off to the left towards Kinnoge. Haffen again met him near that city, but he was once more defeated with great flaughter. His regalia and equipage were taken, and alfo the chief lady of his feraglio, Bibi Conza, Conza, the daughter of Alla, emperor of Delhi, who was A. D. 1478. treated with great refpect. Beloli returned, after this victory, to Delhi.

Having recruited and regulated his army, he advanced the fpear of hostility again towards lionpoor. He conquered that country, and gave it to Mubarick Lohani, leaving Cuttub, Jehan, and other omrahs, at Migouli, to fecure his conquefts. He himfelf went to Budaoon, where he foon after heard of Cuttub's death. Jehan, Mubarick, and other omrahs, though they kept up the appearance of fidelity, were, after the death of Cuttub, concerting measures to throw off Beloli's voke. Beloli being apprized of their intentions, marched towards Jionpoor, and drove away Haffen, who had made an attempt to recover it, and placed Barbee, one of his own fons, upon the throne of Jionpoor. He himfelf returned to Calpie, which he took, and gave to his grandfon, Azim Hamaioon, the fon of his eldeft fon Baizied. He directed then his march to Dolepore, raifing a tribute upon the raja of that place, who began to rank himfelf among Beloli's fubjects. The king marched from thence to a place in the diffricts of Rintimpore, which he plundered, and foon after returned to Delhi.

Beloli being now extremely old, and infirmities beginning daily Beloli, old to increafe upon him, he divided his dominions among his fons, giving Jionpoor to Barbec ; Kurrah and Manikpore, to Mubarick ; Barage to his nephew Mahommed, famous by the name of Kalla Par, or the Black Mountain ; Lucknore and Calpee, to Humaioon, whofe father, Baezid, was affaffinated a little before by his own fervant; Budaoon to Chan Jehan, one of his old omrahs, and a relation; and Delhi, with feveral countries between the two rivers. Some time after this division, the emperor proceeded to Gualier, and railing a tribate of eighty lacks of rupees from the raja of that place, came to Attava, from whence he expelled Sickit Sing, and then turned his face towards Delhi. Falling fick upon his march, many of the omrahs were defirous that he fhould alter his former will, with respect to the fucceffion, which, they faid, was the undoubted right of Humaioon, his grandfon. The fultana, upon this, wrote to her fon Nizam, who, having heard of his father's illnefs, was fetting out from Delhi, by no means to come, otherwife he might be imprifoned by the omrahs : at the fame time the king, by the advice of fome omrahs, ordered public letters to be fent him, to haften him to the camp, that he might fee him before his death. Nizam was greatly perplexed how to act upon this nice occafion. He, at length, was advifed by Cuttuluk, the vizier of the Eaftern emperor Haffen, who was then prifoner at Delhi, to pitch his tents without the city, and to advance by very flow marches. In the mean time, the king's difeafe overcame him, and he died at Malauli, in the pergunnah of Sikite, in the year eight hundred and ninety-four, having reigned thirty-eight years, eight months, and feven days.

His character.

Beloli was, for those days, effected a virtuous and mild prince, executing juffice to the utmost of his knowledge, and treating his courtiers rather as his companions than his fubjects. When he came to the empire, he divided the public treasure among his friends, and could be feldom prevailed upon to mount the throne, faying, " That it was enough for him, that the world knew he was king, " without his making a vain parade of royalty." He was extremely tremely temperate in his diet, and feldom eat at home. Though a man of no great literature himfelf, he was fond of the company of learned men, whom he rewarded according to their merit. He had given fo many proofs of perfonal bravery that none could doubt it; at the fame time, he was often cautious to excefs, never chufing to truft much to chance, and delighting greatly in negotiation.

During the long reign of Beloli, in Delhi, the empire of Perfia State of Afine remained divided into a number of petty principalities, most of them fubject to the descendants of Timur-Bec and Zingis Chan. Ifmaiel, who afterwards founded the dynasty of the Sofis of Perfiabegan to make fome figure, in the Weftern Afia, before the death of Beloli. Tranfoxiana, the most of Chorassan and the provinces towards the Indus, were fubject to the posterity of Timur, who were engaged in almost uninterrupted hostilities against one another.

The omrahs varioufly inclined. THE omrahs, immediately upon the death of Beloli, formed themfelves into a council, in which fome appeared to be attached to the intereft of Azim Humaioon, fome to Barbec, the eldeft fon of the Sultan then living, and fome to Nizam, who had affumed the name of Secunder, in confequence of his father's will. When they were debating, the mother of Secunder, whofe name was Rana, originally a goldfmith's daughter, but raifed to the Sultan's bed, by the fame of her beauty, came behind the curtain, in the great tent, and made a fpeech to the omrahs, in favor of her fon. Upon which Ifah, the nephew of Beloli, anfwered her, in a difrefpectful manner, and concluded with faying, that a goldfmith's offspring was not qualified to hold the empire.

Some time after his acceffion, Secunder marched towards Raberi, and befieged his own brother, Allum, in the fort of Chundwar, for fome days. Allum evacuated the place, and fled to Ifah Lodi, at Pattiali. Secunder gave Raberi to Firmilli, went, in perfon, to Attava, and calling Allum, his brother, to court, gave him poffellion of that country. He then advanced to Pattiali, engaged. Secunder, about that time, fent a trufty perfon to Barbec, his brother, King of Jionpoor, defiring he would do him homage, and order his name to be read first in the chutba all over his dominions. Barbec rejected thefe propofals, and Secunder marched againft him. Barbec and Calla Par came out in order of battle to meet him. An action enfued, in which Calla Par, charging too far among the troops of Delhi, was taken prifoner. Secunder, upon feeing him, alighted from his horfe, and embraced him, faying, that he efteemed him as his father, and begged to be looked upon as his fon. Calla Par, confounded at the honor done him, replied, that, except his life, he had nothing to make a recompence for fuch kindnefs, defiring to get a horfe, that he might flow himfelf not wholly unworthy of the royal favour. The King carried Barbec with him to Jionpoor; but as Haffen, the expelled King of the eaftern provinces, was flill a powerful prince in Behar, he thought Barbec would be the propereft perfon to check him, and accordingly confirmed him as before in the government of Jionpoor; leaving, however, fome trufty friends at his court, upon whom he beftowed effates and jurifdictions, to keep them firm in his own intereft.

Secunder returning to Calpie, took the place from his brother Azim Humaioon, and gave it to Mahmood Lodi. He marched from thence to Kurrah, and Talar the governor paying him homage, he confirmed him in his office, and turning towards the fort of Gualier, he fent one of his omrahs Chaja with an honorary drefs to Raja Maan, who dispatched his nephew with prefents to accompany the King to Biana. Sherrif, the governor of Biana, met the emperor, upon friendly terms. The King ordered him to give up Biana, and he would appoint him governor of Tellafar, Chandwar, Marrara, and Sekite. Sherrif took Omar Serwani with him to put him in poffeffion of the fort, but when he had got within the walls, he fhut the gates upon Omar, and prepared to defend himfelf. The King defpairing to reduce the place, went to Agra, where Hybut, who held that fort under Sherrif, as governor of Biana, thut the gates againft him, contrary to his expectation. This infult enraged the Sultan to that degree, that he determined, let the event be what it would, to reduce Sherrif Sherrif to his obedience. He accordingly, leaving part of his army to befiege Agra, returned in perfon, with the utmost expedition, towards Biana, which he immediately befieged. The fiege proved long and bloody; however, Sherrif, in the end, was obliged to capitulate, in the year eight hundred and ninety feven, and his government was given to Firmilli, who had been dignified with the title of first of the nobles.

The fort of Agra falling, about the fame time, into Secunder's and Agra, hands, he returned to Delhi, where, in a few days, he received advices of an infurrection at Jionpoor, among the zemindars, to the number of one hundred thousand horse and foot; and that they had already flain Sheri, the brother of Mubarick the governor of Kurrah. Mubarick himfelf being driven from Kurrah, was taken prifoner by Rai Bhede, of Battea, and Barbec obliged to go to Barage, to follicit the affiftance of Calla Par; fo that the King, after twenty two days respite at Delhi, was under the necessity of marching towards Jionpoor. When he arrived at Dilmow, he was joined by Barbec; and Rai Bhede hearing of Secunder's approach, releafed Mubarick, and the zemindars difperfed themfelves. The Sultan carried Barbec to Jionpoor, and having left him there to punish the offenders, he spent a month in hunting about Oud. At Oud intelligence was brought to Secunder, that the zemindars had rifen again, and befieged Barbec in Jionpoor. He ordered immediately that Calla Par, Humaioon Serwani, and Lowani, by the way of Oud, and Mubarick by the way of Kurrah, fhould march against them, and fend Barbec prifoner to the prefence. His orders were accordingly executed, Barbec was given in charge to Hybut and Omar Serwani, being efteemed an improper perfon for the government, and too dangerous to be trufted with his liberty.

The King, after these transactions, marched towards Chinar, which was held for Sultan Haffen of the Eaft; upon his approach, the garrifon made a fally, and were driven back into the fort; but Secunder, upon reconnoitring the place, looked upon it as almost impregnable, and immediately left it, marching his army towards Battea. Rai Bhede came out of Battea, and paid him homage, upon which the King confirmed him in his dominions, and returned to Areil, ordering Rai Bhede to accompany him; but Rai Bhede fuspecting fome defign against himself, left all his retinue, and deferted the camp alone. Secunder fent him back his effects. He, however, permitted his troops to plunder the country of Areil, and croffing the river, by the way of Kurrah, went to Dilmow, where he married the widow of Sheri, the late governor of that place. From Dilmow Secunder marched to Shumfeabad, where he remained fix months, and then went to Simbol; but returning from thence, in a few days, to Shumfeabad, he plundered the town of Mudeo-makil, where a band of banditti refided. Secunder fpent-the rainy feafon at Shumfeabad. In the year nine hundred, Secunder made another campaign towards Battea, defeating Bir Singh, the fon of Rai Bhede, at Carrangatti, who fled to Battea; but, upon the King's approach, Rai Bhede took the route of Sirkutch, and died upon his march. Secunder, after this victory, proceeded to Sezdewar; but provisions growing fcarce in his camp, he was obliged to return to Jionpoor, having, in this expedition, loft a great part of his cavalry by fatigue, bad roads, and the want of forage.

Lickim, the fon of Rai Bhede, and other zemindars, wrote to Sultan Haffen, the titular King of the Eaft, now in possefilion of the province of Behâr, that the cavalry of Secunder was now in a wretched condition, and that it was an excellent opportunity for him him to take fatisfaction for his former defeats. This induced Haffen to put his army in motion, and march directly againft Secunder. The Emperor hearing of his intentions, put his army upon the best footing possible, and croffed the Ganges to meet him, which he did thirty fix miles from Benaris: An obftinate battle was fought, in which Haffen was defeated, and fled to Battea.

Secunder leaving his camp with a proper guard, purfued the fugitives for three days, with a party of horfe; but hearing that Haffen was gone to Behar, he ftopped, and upon the ninth day returned to his camp. He foon after marched with his whole army towards Behar, but upon his approach, Haffen left Cundu to guard the city, and fled himfelf to Calgaw, in the dominion of Bengal. Alla, then King of Bengal, called Haffen to his court, and treated him with the greatest respect during the remainder of his days, which he paffed with him; fo that with Haffen the royal line of Jionpoor was extinguished.

Secunder, from his camp at Deopar, fent a division of his army against Cundu, who evacuated the city and fled, leaving the whole country open to the enemy. The King left Mohabut with a force in Behar, and marched towards Turhat, the raja of Bengal inwhich fubmitted himfelf to his clemency, and laying down a large fum, agreed to pay an annual tribute. To collect the tribute, the Sultan left Mubarick, and returned to Derveshpoor, and from thence went to vifit the tomb of Shech Sherrif at Behar, and diftributed prefents to the dirvefhes who lived there upon the charity of pilgrims.

Secunder having regulated his army, marched towards Bengal; but when he had reached Cuttlifhpoor, Alla King of Bengal fent Danial

A peace concluded between Secunder and Alla. Danial his fon to oppofe him. Secunder detached Zere Zichme, one of his generals, to acquaint him, that he had no intention to fubdue the country, but as their dominions now bordered upon each other, it became neceffary to know upon what footing he muft efteem Alla, before he left that country. The King of Bengal gladly accepted of a peace, wherein it was flipulated, that neither monarch fhould permit any of their governors to invade each other's dominions, and that neither of them fhould give protection to the other's enemies.

A dearth in Hindoftan. Secunder returned to Dirvefhpoor. Mubarick at that time dying, the care of Turhat was given to Azim Humaioon, the fon of Chan Jehan, and Behar was beftowed upon Deria, the fon of Mubarick. There happened, at this time, a great dearth in the country, but all duties being taken off by the King's order, that calamity was in a great measure mitigated. Secunder, in the mean time, reducing the diffricts of Sarin, which were then in the hands of fome zemindars, gave the lands in jagiers to fome of his omrahs; then returning by the way of Movilligur to Jionpoor, he refided there fix months.

Secunder having afked the daughter of Sal Bahin, raja of Battea, in marriage, the father refufed to comply with his requeft. Secunder, to revenge this affront, put his army in motion againft the raja, in the year nine hundred and four, and marching to Battea, facked it. After having ravaged the country round Bandugur, he returned to Jionpoor, where he fpent fome time, in the civil regulations of the empire. About this time, the accounts of Mubarick Lodi being infpected for the time of his adminiftration in Jionpoor, and a great balance being found due to the royal revenue, the King ordered it to be levied upon him. This feverity feverity greatly difgufted the omrahs, among whom Mubarick was very much effeemed. A faction accordingly arofe in the army, which first difcovered itfelf by private quarrels. For, one day, as the Sultan and his court were playing a party at club and ball, on horfeback, the club of Hybut, by accident, or defign, wounded one Soliman in the head. Chizer, the brother of Soliman, came up, and returned the compliment to Hybut; fo that, in a few minutes, the parties on both fides joined in the quarrel, and the whole field was in one uproar and confusion.

Secunder, fearing a confpiracy, fled to the palace, but nothing of that kind transpiring, he made another party at the fame game, fome days thereafter, and a quarrel of the fame nature enfued, for which Shumfe Chan, who begun it, was difgraced, and baffinadoed. But the Sultan would not be fatisfied but that there was fome plot in agitation, and therefore ordered his guards to be felected, and to keep upon the watch. The King's jealoufies were not groundlefs; for at that time, Hybut, and two other chiefs, had proposed to Fatti Chan, the King's brother, to cut off the Sultan, who, they faid, was now difliked by the generality of the chiefs, and to place Fatti upon the throne. Fatti defiring fome time to confider of it, difclofed the fecret to Shech Cabuli, and to his own mother, who advifed him against fo horrid an action; and, left the affair fhould, by any other means, transpire, she defired him to acquaint the King of their propofal. This he did accordingly, and the confpirators were detached upon different fervices, where they were put to death by Secunder's orders.

Secunder, in the year nine hundred and five, marched to Simbol, where he fpent four years in pleafure, and in transacting civil affairs. But hearing of fome bad administration of Afghir, the governor of Delhi,

A remarkable inftance of religious perfecution.

At this time there happened a remarkable inflance of religious zeal and perfecution. A brahmin, whofe name was Bhodin, upon being abufed by a Mahommedan, for his idolatry, happened to make a very moderate, but what proved to him a fatal reply. The reply was this : " That he effected the fame God to be the " object of all worfhip, and, therefore, believed the Mahommedan " and Hindoo religions to be equally good." The bigotted Mahommedan, for what he thought the impiety of this answer, fummoned the brahmin immediately before the cafy, or chief judge of the city. The affair making fome noife, by the various opinions of the public, the King called together all the Mahommedan doctors of fame in the empire, to decide the caufe. After many long disputes, the doctors brought in their opinion, that the brahmin ought to be forced to turn Mahommedan, or be put to death. The brahmin, however charitable he might have been to all opinions upon religion, refufed to apoftatize, and accordingly died a martyr to his faith, which reflects no finall difhonor upon Secunder and his inquifitors.

When Chawafs, whom we have already mentioned, entered Delhi, he found an order from the Emperor to proceed immediately to court, with which he inftantly complied. At the fame time, a certain omrah called Seid Sirwani came from Lahore, who was a man of a very factious disposition, and commenced some treasonable projects, for which he, Tattar, and Mahummud, were banished to Guzerat. But he was prevented from the execution of his purpole, for fome time, by the death of Firmilli, governor of Biana, and by those disturbances in that province, which fucceeded that governor's death. The government of Biana having devolved upon Ameid Soliman, the fon of Firmilli, who was yet too young and unexperienced for fuch a charge, the King gave that appointment to Chawafs. Sifdir was fent with a force to reduce Agra, which belonged to the province of Biana, and had then revolted; another detachment being fent, at the fame time, to reduce the fort of Dolipoor, which was in the possefion of Raja Benacdeo, who had begun to make warlike preparations. Here Chaja Bein, a warrior of great fame, fell by the fword, which fo irritated Secunder, who had a great effeem for him, that he marched himfelf against that place. Upon his approach Benacdeo left fome friends in the fort, and fled towards Gualier, but the garrifon, the next night, evacuated the place, and left the King to take poffeffion of it. He tarried there about a month, and then marched to Gualier. The raja of which place, changing his haughty file, now humbly fued for peace, fending to him Seid, Baboo, Rai Ginis, and others, who had, at different times, fled from Secunder, and taken protection under him. Here he remained during the rains, and, in the year nine hundred and ten, marched towards Munderael, which he took, and deftroyed the Hindoo temples, ordering molques to be built in their flead. Secunder returning to Dolipoor, removed the raja from his office, and gave it to one Kimir. He paffed from thence to Agra, giving his omrahs leave to return to their refpective eftates.

An earthquake at Agra. In the following year, upon Sunday the third of Siffer, there was a violent earthquake in Agra, fo that the mountains shook on their broad bases, and every lofty building was levelled with the ground, fome thousands being buried in the ruins. Secunder, in the fame year, moved towards Gualier, and stopped by the way fome time at Dolipoor, where he left his family, and, with an unincumbered army of horse, proceeded to the hills, to plunder fome Hindoo rajas, from whom he took great spoils, and ravaged their peaceful habitations. Just as the King was passing by the town of Javer, in the dominions of the raja of Gualier, he was attacked by a resolute body of men, who had lain in ambush for him; but, by the bravery of Awid and Ahmed, the fons of Chan Jehan, the Hindoos were defeated, and a great number of rajaputs put to the fword.

Secunder befieges Awintgur, which is taken. The Sultan returned to Agra; and, in the year nine hundred and twelve, he went towards the fort of Awintgur; and, as he had defpaired of reducing Gualier, he bent his whole ftrength to the reduction of this place. It was accordingly, in a fhort time, taken, and all the rajaput garrifon put to the fword, the temples deftroyed, and mosques ordered to be built in their place. This government was conferred upon Bickin, the fon of Mujahid Chan, when fome envious perfons gave the King information that Mu-1 jahid. jahid had taken a bribe from the raja of Awintgur, when they A. This being proved, Mujahid was imprifoned at Dolipoor; after which the King, returning towards Agra, on the way loft eight hundred men, in one day, for want of water.

Secunder, eyeing from his march the ruins of Agra, moved towards Narvar, a ftrong fort, in the diffrict of Malava, then in var. the poffeffion of the Hindoos. He ordered Jellal, governor of Calpie, to advance before him, and inveft the place, which was accordingly done. When the King arrived before Narvar, Jellal drew up his army, out of refpect, that the King might review them as he paffed. This circumftance proved very hurtful to Jellal, for, from that time, the King became jealous of his power, and determined to ruin him. Secunder furrounded the place, which was fixteen miles in circumference, and began to carry on the fiege. The fiege was now protracted eight months, when the Sultan received intelligence, that a treafonable correspondence was carried on between fome of his omrahs and the garrifon, for which Jellal and Sheri were imprisoned in the fort of Awintgur. The garrifon, foon after, was obliged to capitulate, for want of provisions, and the King remained, for the space of fix months, at Narvar, breaking down temples, and building molques. He there also established a kind of monastery, which he filled with divines and learned men.

Shab ul Dien, the fon of Nafir, King of Malava, being at this time difcontented with his father, propofed to have a conference with Secunder. The King immediately fent him a drefs, and promifed to fupport him in the government of Chinderi, against the power of his father. But circumstances fo fell out, that it became unneceffary to take that unnatural ftep.

The Sultan, in the month of Shuban, in the year nine hundred and fourteen, marched from Narvar; but after he had advanced to the river Ganges, he began to confider that it would be proper to furround that fortrefs with another wall. He therefore ordered that work to be immediately begun, and then he himfelf took the rout of Lohar. At that place he bestowed Calpie, in jagier, upon Niamut Chatoon, the wife of Cuttub Lodi, and daughter of the prince Jellâl, his brother. He then directed his march towards the capital, and arriving at Hitgat, fent a detachment against fome rebels in that country, and deftroyed all their habitations, placing finall garrifons at proper diftances to overawe them. About this time he received advices, that Ahmed, the fon of Mubarick Lodi, governor of Lucknore, had turned idolater; upon which orders were difpatched to fend him prifoner to court, and that his fecond brother, Sud Chan, should take the administration of affairs in his ftead. In the year nine hundred and fifteen, the King marched to Dolipoor, and ordered caravanferas to be built at every flage. Mahummud Nagori having defeated Ali and Abu Bekir, whohad confpired against him, they fled to Secunder for protection. Mahummud, fearing they would bring the King against him, fent prefents by way of prevention, and ordered the chutba to be read in Secunder's name. The Sultan, pleafed with his fubmiffion, fent him a drefs of confirmation, and returned to Agra.

Transactions at Dolipoor.

He fpent fome months there in building, making fpacious gardens, and in hunting, then returned to Dolipoor, ordering Soliman, the fon of Firmilli, to fuccour Huffen Chan. Soliman veryimprudently told the King, that he could not prevail upon himfelf to leave the prefence. This expression threw Secunder into a violent rage, and he forthwith ordered him from his fervice and camp by next morning at day-light, or that otherwife all his effects thould be given to the foldiers as public plunder. ed?

Much about this time, Bogit Chan, governor of Chinderi, who held that place of the King of Malava, feeing the weaknefs of his own prince, turned his face to Secunder. That monarch fent Amad ul Muluck to fupport Bogit in his rebellion. He foon after returned to Agra, and iffued a proclamation bearing the fubmiffion of Bogit, and his own confequent right to that country.' He fent more troops and omrahs to Chinderi, who entirely fettled it as an appendage of the empire. Bogit found matters carried on in his government in fuch a manner, that he was confirained to refign his office, and come to court.

After this, we find no transactions worthy of memory in the empire, till the year nine hundred and twenty-two. Ali Nagori, fuba of Suifuper, in that year prevailed upon Dowlat, governor of Rintimpore, which he then held of Malava, to deliver the fort to Secunder, if that monarch fhould come in perfon to take poffeffion of it. Secunder, with great joy, clofed with the propofal, and fet out towards Biana, to which place the governor of Rintimpore came to meet him, and was gracioufly received. But Ali, who had been difappointed in fome favors which he expected for bringing this matter to bear, refolved fill to prevent the accomplishment of it. He had fo much influence upon the governor, that he made him retract his promife about giving up the fort, though he had put himfelf in the Sultan's power. The Sultan having found out the caufe of this change, difgraced Ali, and deprived him of his government, but was obliged to return to Agra without fucceeding in his defign upon Rintimpore, fettingthe governor at liberty, notwithftanding he had fo egregiously deceived him.

SECUNDER dying at Agra, his fon Ibrahim * immediately fucceeded him in the throne. This prince, contrary to the maxims and policy of his father and grandfather, behaved himfelf with infupportable pride and arrogance to his friends and family. One foolifh expression of his was, that king's had no relations, but that every body should be the flaves of royalty. The omrahs, of the tribe of Lodi, who were always before honoured with a feat in the prefence, were now constrained to stand by the throne, with their hands crossed before them. They were for much difgusted with this infolence, that they privately became his enemies.

A confpiracy therefore was formed, by the omrahs of Lodi, in which it was agreed to leave Ibrahim in poffeffion of Delhi, and a few dependent provinces, and to place the prince Jellal, his brother, upon the throne of Jionpoor. Jellal marched from Calpie, by the aid and advice of the difaffected omrahs, and mounted the throne of Jionpoor. He appointed his coufin Fatte Chan his vizier, who brought over all the omrahs of the Eaftern provinces to his intereft.

Jehan Lohani came at that time from Beri, to congratulate Ibrahim upon his acceffion, and, in a very high ftrain, began to blame the omrahs for dividing the empire, which, he faid, would be attended with many evil confequences to the family of Lodi. But Hybut having over-acted his part, by flattery and importunity, Jellal fufpected a plot against himfelf, and wrote them a genteel excufe. They, however, not difcovering his jealoufy, fent Firmilli and other omrahs to enforce the requeft of Hybut; but Jellal took no notice of their folicitations or intrigues. Ibrahim, and his omrahs, finding that thefe baits would not take with Jellal, iffued a proclamation, declaring all the omrahs, who fhould join him, traitors to the flate; at the fame time fending prefents and meffengers to all the principal officers in those These means had the defired effect, and the omrahs, on parts. the fide of Jellal, were brought over from his interest, by degrees. The affairs of Jellal declining in this manner, he faw that nothing but a refolute attempt could retrieve them. He accordingly marching to Calpie, fecured his family in that fort; and, collecting all his ftrength, affumed the title of emperor, under the title of Jellal ul Dien, and was determined to try his fortune in the field. He fent, at the fame time, a trufty ambaffador to Azim Humaioon, who held Callinger for Ibrahim, and had a great army in pay, to beg his affiftance. Azim was prevailed upon to join him; and a refolution was formed, first to fettle the countries about Jionpoor, and afterwards to think of affairs of fill greater moment. They accordingly marched, with all expedition, against Mubarick Lodi, fuba of Oud, whom they drove to Lucknore.

Ibrahim

Ibrahim hearing of these transactions, marched his army to that quarter, fending his other brothers, in confinement, to Haffi, where he penfioned them for life. Upon his march towards Oud, he was informed that Azim Humaioon had deferted Jellal, and was now upon his way to meet him, which gave him great joy. He fent fome omrahs to efcort him to his camp, where he was very favourably received. A number of other omrahs, of those parts, joined Ibrahim; and he difpatched the greatest part of his army, under the command of Azim Humaioon Lodi, againft his brother. But before Azim could come up with Jellal, he threw a garrifon into Calpie, and, with thirty thousand horse, gave him the flip, and marched directly towards Agra; while Azim laid fiege to Calpie. Jellal had it now in his power either to take poffeffion of, or to plunder, the treafury. But he feems to have been perfectly infatuated. Adam, who was in the city with a fmall garrifon, not only prevailed upon him to relinquish that advantage, but amused him with hopes of his brother's favor, till he fent him all his enfigns of royalty. Adam went fo far as to promife to Jellal the government of Calpie, and other advantages, without having any powers of treating from the king.

Adam fent the whole to Ibrahim, and acquainted him of every particular. But the king having now taken Calpie, and the treaty being concluded without his authority, he took no notice of it, but marched against Jellal, who, now deferted by his army for his pufillanimity, was obliged to fly to Gualier, and folicit the protection of the raja of that place. Ibrahim came to Agra, where he remained to regulate the affairs of the government, which, fince the death of Secunder, had fallen into great confusion. An army fent against Gualier.

C LA

About this time, the king, without any apparent reafon, conceived a difgust at Miah Boah, who was formerly vizier to Secunder, and put him in chains, conferring at the fame time great honours upon his fon. He then formed a refolution of reducing Gualier, ordering Azim Humaioon to march from Kurrah against it, with thirty thousand horse, and three hundred elephants. Seven other omrahs, with armies, were fent to reinforce Azim. Jellal, who had taken refuge in Gualier, being intimidated, fled to the king of Malava. The imperial army arriving before Gualier, invefted the place, and in a few days raja Man Sing, who was a prince of great valour and capacity, died, and his fon Bickermagit fucceeded him in the rajaship. After the fiege had been earried on fome months, the army of Ibrahim at length poffeffed themfelves of an outwork at the foot of the hill, upon which the fort, called Badilgur, flood. They found in that place a brazen bull, which had been a long time worfhipped there, and fent it to Agra; from whence it was afterwards conveyed to Delhi, and placed at the gate of Bagdat. ea to promite to Jellel the government of Eldri

Ibrahim pretended to fend him prifoner to Haffi, but gave private orders to affaffinate him upon the way, which was accordingly done.—What are those charms in power, which could induce a man to fhed the blood of a brother ? Nor was Ibrahim fatisfied with the death of Jellal; he imbrued his hands in the blood of feveral omrahs of great diffinction. He called Azim Serwani from Gualier, when juft upon the point of taking the place, imprifoned him and his fon Fatte, turning out his other fon Iflam from the fubafhip of Kurrah. The Sultan having received advices of the reduction of Gualier, which had been for a hundred years in the hands of the Hindoos, he had leifure to turn all his power to fupprefs the rebellion at Kurrah. Azim Humaioon and Seid, after the reduction of the place, were permitted to go to their jagiers at Lucknore; where, joining the interest of Islam, they ftirred up more diffurbances.

Ibrahim placing very little dependence upon the fidelity of the A rebellion, troops which he had near him, iffued orders for those of the diftant provinces to repair to his ftandards. He, in the mean time, conferred great favours upon Ahmed, the brother of Azim Humaioon, and giving him the command of the army, fent him against Islam. Ahmed having arrived in the environs of Kinnoge, Eckbal, a dependent of Azim Sirwani, rushed out from an ambufh with five thousand horse, and having cut off a number of the imperial troops, made good his retreat. The king was greatly exafperated against Ahmed, upon receiving intelligence of this defeat. He wrote to him not to expect his favor, if he did not quickly exterminate the rebels; at the fame time, by way of precaution, fending another army to fupport him. The rebels were now about forty thousand strong in cavalry, belides five hundred elephants, and a great body of infantry. When Ahmed had received the reinforcement which we have mentioned, and the two armies came in fight of each other, raja Bochari, who was effeemed the first man for parts in that age, was defirous of bringing affairs to an amicable accommodation. Overtures being made, the rebels confented to difmifs their army, upon condition that Azim Sirwani fhould be fet at liberty. Ibrahim would not hearken to these terms. Ibrahim's tyranny and cruelty. Ibrahim now gave full fcope to his hatred and refertment againft the omrahs of Secunder, and many of them were barbaroufly put to death. Azim Humaioon Sirwani, Miah Boah, and others, who were in confinement, were, at the fame time, affaffinated, and fear and terror took poffeffion of every heart. These cruelties and affaffinations gave rife to another rebellion. Dirai Lohani, fuba of Behar, Jehan Lodi, and Firmilli, turned their heads from the yoke of obedience. Ibrahim having received intelligence of this defection, fent a private order to the faints of Chunderi, to take off Firmilli, fuba of that country, and these holy perfons accordingly affaffinated him in his bed. This fresh inftance of Ibrahim's baseness and tyranny, ferved only to create him more enemies.

Dirai, of the tribe of Lodi, fuba of Beria, died about this time, and his fon of the fame name, affumed the title of emperor, under the name of Mahommed, with all the enfigns of royalty. But having heard of his tyrannies, by the way, he was apprehenfive of danger to himfelf, and returned to his father, Dowlat, at Lahore. Dowlat, feeing no fafety but in extremity, revolted from the Sultan, and follicited Baber, the mogul, who then reigned in Cabul, to come to the conqueft of Hindoftan. The first thing, however, that Dowlat did, was to obtain from Baber, Alla, the brother of Ibrahim, now in the fervice of Cabul. Supporting him, as a cover to his measures, with his whole force, he reduced the country as far as Delhi. Alla was joined by the omrahs of those parts, fo that his army now confisted of upwards of forty thousand horse, with which he invested Delhi. Ibrahim refolved to march against him, but when he came within fix crores of Alla's army, he was furprized by that prince in the night. A confused and tumultuous fight was maintained to daylight, when Ibrahim found that he was deferted by fome of his omrahs, who had joined Alla. Ibrahim obferving, in the morning, that the troops of Alla were difperfed, in plundering the royal camp, rallied a number of his troops, and the greateft part of his elephants, returned to the attack, and drove him off the field, with great flaughter. Ibrahim entered Delhi in triumph, and Alla, feeing no hopes of reducing it, retreated to Punjaab.

In the year nine hundred and thirty-two, no remarkable event happened in the empire, till Baber drew his army against Ibrahim, as will be hereafter related at large, overthrew him in the field of Panniput, deprived him of his life and kingdom, and transferred the empire from the Afgan tribe of Lodi, to the family of Timur. Ibrahim reigned twenty years : a cruel, proud, and wicked prince, though poffeffed of ordinary parts, and extremely brave.

A BU SEID, who held the titles of the mogul empire in the weftern Tartary, and in Choraffan, dying in Irac †, left eleven fons, Ahmed, Mahmood, Mahommed, Sharoch, Ali, Amer Shech, Abubekir, Murad, Chilili, Mirza Willid, and Amer ‡. Four of the brothers arrived to the dignity of kings; Ali to the throne of Cabul; Ahmed to the kingdom of Samarcand; Amer to the united thrones of Indija and Firghana; and Mahmood to those of Kundiz and Buduchshan. Eunus, king of Mogulstan, gave to each of those four kings one of his daughters in marriage, excepting to Ali. Amer, by Catlick Negar, the daughter of Eunus, had a fon, whom he named Baber, born in the year eight hundred and eighty eight. The relation between Timur § and Baber, is this: Sultan Abu Seid, the grandfather of Baber, was the fon of Mahommed, the fon of Miran Shaw, and grandfon of Timur, lord of ages.

Baber, when as yet but twelve years old, difcovered a capacity fo uncommon at that age, that his father Amer gave him the kingdom of Indija; and, when Amer, upon Monday, the fourth of Ramzan, in the eight hundred and ninety ninth of the Higera, fell, by an accident, from the roof of a pigeon-houfe, and was

The kings of Cafhgar and Chutun, both of the family of Timur, foon after drew a great army towards the borders of Orgund, and made war upon Baber; but he obliged them to retreat. He, at this time, appointed Haffen governor of Indija, who was not faithful to his truft. He rebelled in the year nine hundred, but Baber marched againft him, and obliged him to fly towards Samarcand. In the fame year, Ibrahim Sarid, the governor of Afhira, rebelled, and read the chutba in the name of Beifinker, the fon of Ahmed, who had fucceeded to the throne of Samarcand. Baber marched againft him, and befieged him in Afhira, which he reduced in the fpace of forty days; and the rebel was obliged to come forth with a fword and coffin before him. Baber, in the year following, drew his army towards Samar- Marches tocand, being in alliance with Ali, the brother of Bailinker, and king of Bochara; for the former endeavoured to recover from the latter the kingdom of Samarcand. The confederate kings not being able to reduce Samarcand that year, they returned home for the winter feafon, and made great preparations for another campaign. Both the kings, accordingly, in the year nine hundred and two, in the beginning of the fpring, took the route of Samarcand. Sultan Ali reached Samarcand first, and Baifinker advanced without the city, and encamped before him; but, upon Baber's arrival, he retreated within his walls in the night. Eulu Chaja, who was going the rounds of Baber's camp, difcovered the retreat of Baifinker, and falling upon his rear, put a great number to the fword. Baber laid fiege to a fort, called Afhira, at a fmall diftance from the city, and took it. The confederates, after this fuccefs, attacked Samarcand, which was defended with great bravery, till winter obliged them to raife the fiege, and retire to quarters, till the enfuing feafon.

Shubiani, king of the Ufbecs of Turkeftan, upon his march from his own dominions, to join the king of Samarcand, came before Baber, but he thought proper to make the beft of his way for Samarcand. Shubiani and Baifinker quarrelled foon after, and the former returned to his own country. This circumftance fo much diffreffed Baifinker, that, with a fmall retinue, he went in perfon to beg the affiftance of Chufero, king of Kunduz, alfo of the pofterity of Timur, while Baber, feizing this opportunity, haftened to Samarcand, and, in the year nine hundred and three, entered the city without oppofition, and mounted the throne, being acknowledged by the greateft part of the omrahs.

Deferted by his army,

But as Baber had taken the place by capitulation, and forbad all manner of plunder, the army, to whom he was greatly in arrears, and who ferved him only for the hopes of booty, began to difperfe. The moguls, who were commanded by one Ibrahim, went off in a body, and were followed by feveral other chiefs, with their whole dependents, to Achfi, where Jehangire, the brother of Baber, commanded. Jehangire, by the aid of the deferters, and that of a prince, called Ozin Haffen, declared himfelf king of Indija. He wrote, by way of fneer to his brother, that as Baber had fubdued the kingdom of Samarcand, he begged to be indulged with that of Indija. Baber having received this melfage, gave way to his paffion, and, in blaming the perfidy of those chiefs who had deferted him, imprudently threw fome reflections upon those who remained. The omrahs refented this behaviour, by abandoning him, and joining his brother. Baber, in the utmost diffrefs, fent Eulu Chaja to endeavor to reconcile the omrahs to him again, but they fent a party to way-lay the embaffador, and cut him to pieces.

The omrahs Ali and Molana, in the mean time, threw a garrifon A. D. 1496. into the fort of Indija, and continued to hold it out for Baber. The faithful omrahs fent advice to Baber of their fituation; but, unfortunately at this time, he was taken fo extremely ill, that, His misfornot able to fwallow any thing, he barely exifted by having moiftened cotton applied to his lips. When he had recovered his health, and found the preffing fituation of his affairs in Indija, he determined to run the rifque of lofing Samarcand, rather than his paternal dominions, and accordingly directed his march home-But Ali Dooft, and his friends in Indija, having heard wards. that Baber was certainly dead, had capitulated, and given up the place to Jehangire. This traitor affaffinated Molana, and, mounting the throne, read the chutba in his own name.

This difagreeable intelligence, and other advices, that the Samar- Samarcand candians had revolted, were, at once, brought to Baber, upon his march, which threw him into the utmost diffrefs, having now lost both kingdoms. He fent, as his laft refource, Amir Cafim to Tashcund, to entreat the affistance of his uncle Mahmood. That monarch haftened to Tilka, where he and Baber met; but an emiffary, at the fame time, came to Mahmood, from Jehangire, who managed matters fo well, that Mahmood left his two nephews to fettle their own differences, and returned to Tashcund. This unexpected blow had fuch an effect upon the affairs of Baber, that they now appeared fo defperate, that of all his army, in a few days, only forty horfemen remained with him, to conquer two kingdoms. In this forlorn fituation he retreated to Chojind. He wrote from thence to Mahommed Huffein, at Artaba, acquainting him, that the place in which he was then could not protect him from the fury of his enemies; he therefore earneftly folicited him to permit him to pass the winter at Bishaer. He takes the field with a few.

After a few were gathered round his flandard, he confidered that his future fortune depended entirely upon the reputation of his arms, and refolved to employ them against his enemics. He, therefore, haftened to Barnilack, where he took fome forts by affault, and fome by ftratagem. But thefe petty exploits were of little fervice to him, for his affairs bore still a very ruinous afpect, which threw him into great perplexity. He received, in the mean time, agreeable tidings from Alli Dooft, begging his forgivenels, and informing him, that he was in pofferfion of the garrifon of Marinan, and if Baber fhould come to take poffeffion of it, he would number himfelf among his flaves. Baber did not hefitate to accept this offer, and arriving at the place, he met Alli Dooft at the gate, who put him into poffeffion of the fort, and fupplied his finances. Baber immediately fent Amer Caffim towards the mountains of Indija, and Ibrahim Sara and Vifs Laghiri towards Achfi, to endeavour to bring over friends to his party. This meafure had the defired effect, for the mountaineers of Indija were gained to the interest of Baber, while Ibrahim Sara and Vifs Eaghiri fettled matters with the governor of the fort of Baab, and two or three more, who declared for Baber. The negotiations of that prince fucceeded, at the fame time, at the court of his uncle, Mahmood, of Bochara, who marched to join him.

detached, at the fame time, part of his army towards Achfi, who, falling in with Mahmood, were defeated, with great flaughter. When Jehangire received thefe advices, he was firuck with embaraffment, and retreated to Indija. But Nafirbeg, the fon-inlaw of Ozin Haffen, who had now the government of that city, feeing the favourable afpect of Baber's affairs, by the junction of Mahmood, and feveral parties of Ufbecks, determined not to admit Jehangire, and immediately fent a mellenger to haften Baber to take poffeffion of the place. This check ruined the affairs of Jehangire, for immediately his army began to difperfe, while he himfelf took the way to Oft, and Ozin Haffen that of Achfi.

Baber, by this time, advanced to Indija, and took pofferfion of that city, conferring honors upon his friends; and thus the capital of Firghana was, in the year nine hundred and four, reftored to its former administration. Upon the fourth day after the arrival of Baber, he fet out for Achfi, where Ozin Haffen capitulated, and was permitted to retire to Hiffaar, Cafim Ogib being appointed governor of the place. The king returned to Indija, with the greatest part of Ozin Haffen's troops, who inlisted themselves under his victorious banners. But the forces of Haffen having, upon a former occafion, plundered feveral perfons, then in the king's army, of their effects, a complaint was made to Baber, and orders were iffued to reftore the plunder to the proper owners. The moguls, unwilling to comply with this order, mounted their horfes, and, to a man, fet out for Orgund, where they joined Jehangire and Ahmed Timbol, by which they were again in a condition to march against Indija. Indija befieged. The enemy advanced with all expedition, and laid fiege to Indija for the fpace of thirty days, but as they could effect nothing againft it, they marched towards Oufe. The king having recruited his army, marched, in the year nine hundred and five, towards Oufe, while the enemy, by another road, made a pufh towards Indija. Baber, however, trufting to his friends in that city, and the ftrength of the place, marched to Badwerd, a ftrong fort in the poffeffion of Chilili, brother to Ahmed Timbol. Chilili defended the place with great refolution, but at length was forced to a capitulation, by the terms of which, he was exchanged for the king's friends, who had fallen into the enemy's hands.

The enemy are overthrown by Baber.

Ahmed Timbol, in the mean time, made an attempt to fcale the walls of Indija in the night, but was repulfed with great lofs. Baber, by this time, returning to that place, took a ftrong poft by the banks of the river. He encamped before the enemy for the space of forty days, and then determined to attack their camp. though with great difadvantage. After an obflinate and bloody refiftance, the rebels were driven out of their trenches, and difperfed. The king, after the victory, entered the city in triumph. Baber was informed in Indija, that fix thousand horse from Mahmood, king of Bochara, whofe policy it was to weaken both parties, had come to the affiftance of Jehangire, and had fat down: before Cashan. The king, though it was now the middle of winter, in fevere froft and fnow, marched that way, upon which the allies retreated to their own country. Timbol, who was upon his march to join the rebels, fell in accidentally with the King, in a fituation where he could not escape, had not the night favored favored his retreat; by which means he went off with little lofs. The King purfued him under the walls of Bishare, and encamped in fight.

Upon the fourth day, Ali Dooft and Cumber Ali, prevailed upon the King to make propofals of accommodation. The terms were immediately agreed upon; that Jehangire fhould keep poffeffion of all the country between the river Chajand and Achfi; and that the kingdom of Indija, and the diffricts of Orgund, fhould remain to Baber; that if the latter fhould ever recover the kingdom of Samarcand, he fhould give up Indija to Jehangire. After thefeterms of pacification were folemnly ratified by mutual oaths, the brothers had an interview, and the prifoners upon both fides were fet at liberty. The King returned to Indija, where Ali Dooft, who was a man of great wealth and power, had began to exert unbounded authority. He banifhed fome, and imprifoned others, without the King's permiffion; while his fon, Mahommed took a princely flate upon himfelf. The King, upon account of his great influence, and the numerous enemies which environed his dominions, was conftrained to diffemble his refentment.

In the mean time, Mazidlir, an omrah of Ali, who by the removal of his brother Baifinker, reigned in Samarcand, apprehenfive of danger from his mafter, joined Bijan Mirza, the fon of Mahmood, and carried him againft Samarcand. Bijan Mirza was defeated, returned, and fent an embaffador to Baber, inviting him to the conqueft of that kingdom. Baber embraced the propofal, and drew his army towards Samarcand. Mazidlir having joined Baber upon his march, it was refolved in council to fend a perfon to found Chaja Eiah, who had almoft the whole power of Samarcand in his hands. He returned them for anfwer, that they might march

In the mean time, Dildai, one of Timur's pofterity, who commanded a tribe in Baber's camp, left his poft without any apparent reafon, fled to Samarcand, and acquainted the enemy of the correspondence with Chaja Eiah, which disconcerted their measures. His veteran troops crowded to the King's flandard, making complaints against Ali Doost. Baber, therefore, determined to dismiss him from his prefence, fo that he and his fon went over to Ahmed Timbul, but in a few days he died.

At this time Shubiani, King of the Ufbees, had taken Bochara, and was upon full march to conquer Samarcand, which Ali was advifed to relinquifh to him. Baber, upon hearing this news, went to Kifh, and from thence to Hiffar, where Mafidlir, and the omrahs of Samarcand, defpairing of taking that city, left him, and went to Chufero, King of Kunduz. Baber, after this defertion, was obliged to take the way to Sirtack, over rocks, flones, and rugged paths, by which his army fuffered exceedingly, having loft moft part of his camels and horfes. This circumftance difpirited his troops to fuch a degree, that they all deferted him by the time he reached Barnilack, except two hundred and forty men.

Baber deferted by his whole army, except two hundred and forty men.

His daring attempt upon Samarcand. Any man but Baber would have now defpaired of fuccefs in his defigns; but though he had left a kingdom to which he might have flill returned, his ambition prompted him to run the rifque of a young adventurer for another. He accordingly marched directly for Samarcand, with this fmall retinue, with an intention to get into that city, without being difcovered. His hopes were, that he could raife a faction among his friends, while yet the city was in diforder. He entered Samarcand in the dufk of the evening, ing, and went to Eurit Chan's house, but in a few minutes his arrival was whifpered about, and the whole city began to be in an uproar. Baber, as his fcheme was not ripe for execution, thought Obliged to it high time to make his efcape, which he did accordingly, without any lofs.

After he had got clear of the city, he looked back and repented of his precipitate flight. He immediately flopped in a grove, where, being wearied with the fatigue of the day, he laid himfelf down upon the ground to fleep, as did the greatest part of his retinue. In His dream. about an hour he awaked from a dream, in which he imagined he faw Abdalla, a dirvefh of great repute, coming towards his houfe. He thought that he invited the dirvesh to fit down, upon which his fleward fpread a table cloth before him, at which the dirvefh feemed greatly offended t, and rofe to go away. The King begged he would excufe him, as the offence was committed by a fervant. The dirvefh, upon this, took him by the arm, and held him up towards the fky, upon which he awoke, and calling up his attendants, related his dream, and determined to make an attempt immediately upon Samarcand.

Baber's finall party having mounted their horfes, returned and reached the bridge about midnight. He detached eighty of his men before to a low part of the wall, near the Lover's Cave, which they fealed by the help of a hook-rope, and coming round to the gate and falling upon the guard commanded by Cafiter Chan, killed and difperied them. They immediately fet open the gate, and admitted the King and his fmall party. The city was alarmed; but the party proclaiming the name of Baber as they paffed through

In a flort time the alarm reached the houfe of Chaja Eiah, where feven thoufand Ufbecks were quartered. They rufhed out and joined Shubiani their King, who, with eight thoufand more of his nation, lay in the citadel of Didar. Shubiani, with one hundred and fifty men, commanding the reft to wait for orders, fet out for the iron gate, but feeing he could do nothing with that handful, he retreated. Baber, in the mean time, attended by fome thoufands, who rent the fky with acclamations, followed him fo clofe, that Shubiani could not, either by words or example, make one of the Ufbecks fland his ground. He therefore followed them out at the oppofite gate, and fled towards Bochara, and Samarcand immediately fubmitted to Baber.

This action, if we confider the firength of the place, the troops it contained, the alarm that had been fpread in the evening, the fmall number who attempted it, the uncertainty of being joined by the citizens, and many other difficulties, we muft effeem it equal to the boldeft enterprize in hiftory. The authors who relate it, very juftly give it the preference to any of the exploits of Timur. Mufidler took this opportunity of wrefting the forts of Kirfhi and Heraz from the Ufbecks; while Haffen Mirza, from Muracufs, came and took Kole. Baber fent ambaffadors to Haffen Mirza, and other neighbouring princes, his relations, to requeft their alliance, to drive Shubiani quite out of Maver ul Nere. They either paid no regard to Baber's embaffy, or fent fuch pitiful fupplies, as ferved no purpofe. Shubiani, by this means, recovered ftrength during the winter, taking Karacole, and other diffricts.

Baber defeated by Shubiani. Baber, in the month of Shawal, nine hundred and fix, collected his whole force, and marched out of Samarcand, to engage Shubiani.

Shubiani. He came up with him in the environs of Caridzin, and A.D. 1501. fought him. Baber exhibited, upon this occasion, all the good qualities of the general and brave foldier, but he was deferted by his allies, and foon after by his own troops. Only fifteen brave friends remained at laft by his fide, with whom, feeing it in vain to contend any longer with fortune, he made good his retreat to Samarcand. He loft in this action his principal omrahs, and other chiefs of note. Shubiani advanced, and laid fiege to the city; the King taking up his quarters at the college of Ali Beg, as being the most centrical place for fending orders, or affistance. The fiege was continued with great obftinacy for many days, numbers being killed on both fides; during which time, Kutch Beg, Loma, and Kelnizer, gave extraordinary examples of bravery. Four months had now paffed in attacking and repulfing, when a dreadful famine began to rage in the city. The inhabitants eat their horfes, and even the most unclean animals, while those who could not procure other provisions, fublished upon the bark of trees.

Though the King, at the commencement of the fiege, had fent ambaffadors to the Kings of Choraffan, Kundez, Buckolan, and Mogulistan, all princes of the house of Timur, for fuccours, he received no hopes of their aid. He was, therefore, under the cruel neceffity of abandoning his capital and kingdom, with about one hundred friends, in a dark night, in the beginning of the year nine hundred and feven. He escaped to Tashcund, whither his brother, Jehangire, came to pay him his refpects. His uncle, Mahmood, comforted him in his diffrefs, entertained him in a princely manner, and gave him the city of Artaba to refide in during the winter.

Forced to quit the city with one hundred men.

But in the beginning of the fpring, he was again attacked by Befieged at Shubiani, who, not being able to effect any thing against the city, plundered the country, and retreated to Samarcand. In this manner, Baber, unable to raife his head from his misfortunes, lived for fome time, Ahmed Timbol having taken pofieffion of the kingdom of Indija, which the King had refigned to his brother Jehangire, upon his taking Samarcand. Mahmood, and his brother Ahmed, were at length prevailed upon to fupport their nephew Baber in an attempt to recover the kingdom of Indija from Ahmed Timbol. When the confederates had reached the boundaries of Ferghana, Timbol marched out to oppofe them. It was agreed, that Baber, with a fmall detachment of Moguls, should march towards Ofh, to raife a party there, whilft his uncles oppofed Timbol. Baber accordingly took Ofh, and was joined by fome of the inhabitants of Orgun and Marinan, who expelled the garrifons of Timbol. The King immediately marched towards Indija; and Timbol decamped from before the confederate princes, and haftened back to cover Indija.

Defeated by Timbol. Timbol happened, by accident, to fall in with Baber's camp, when the troops were out foraging, and defeated him. The King efcaped, wounded, to Ofh, while Timbol threw himfelf into Indija, and prepared for a defence. The next day, the allied army of Mahmood and Ahmed appeared in fight, and fat down before the place, where they were joined foon after by Baber. Some time after, the inhabitants of Achfi called the King, and put him in poffeffion of that place; but the allied princes, not being able to reduce Indija, raifed the fiege.

Totally defeated by Shabiani. In the mean time, Shubiani, King of the Ufbecs, fearing the fuccefs of Baber, advanced from Samarcand with a very great army, towards Achfi. Baber immediately joined his allies, and they prepared to receive him. But in this action, which was very obflinate and bloody, the fortune of Shubiani prevailed, and both the uncles of Baber were taken prifoners. The King escaped to A.D. 1502. Mogulistan, and the kingdom of Tashcund fell into the hands of Shubiani, which greatly augmented his power. Shubiani, fome time after, difmiffed the two brothers, but Mahmood retired, and fell into a deep melancholy. When one of his friends told him, that Shubiani had poifoned him, and begged to fupply him with some famous theriac of Chitta, as a powerful preventive of the effects of poifons ; the prince replied, "Yes ! Shubiani has poifoned " me, indeed ! he has taken my kingdom, which is not in the " power of your theriac to reftore."

Baber left Mogulistan, and came to Shudma, and from thence He afks adproceeded to Turmuz, in the neighbourhood of Balich, where er, Backer, prince of that place, who was uncafy at the great power of the Ufbecks, glad of Baber's alliance, who ftill had the command of an army, received him with great kindnefs and refpect, and gave him large prefents. Baber faid to him, upon this occafion, That being a long time the football of fortune, and like a piece of wood on a chefs-board, moved from place to place, vagrant as the moon in the fky, and reftlefs as a ftone upon the beach, he would therefore be glad of his friendly advice, as he had been fo unfuccefsful in his own refolves. Backer replied, That, however incapable he was to advife him, he would not withold his opinion, which was, that, as Shubiani was now in full pofferfion of Baber's kingdom, and many others, which rendered him extremely powerful, it would be more adviseable for him to purfue his fortune elfewhere, particularly in Cabuliftan, which was now in a ftate of anarchy.

The King followed this advice, and, in the year nine hundred and ten, marched towards Cabul +. Paffing, in his way, through the dominions of Chusero, King of Kunduz, he was entertained by him with great hospitality, for which, we are forry to relate, our hero made a very bad return. During the time that Baber refided there, he flirred up a faction in Chufero's court, and gained over feven thousand of his troops to his own interest. This plot being difcovered, Chufero, with a few fervants, was obliged to abandon his capital and fly, leaving his troops, his treafure, and every thing in the poffeilion of Baber. Baber did not fail to avail himfelf of thefe advantages. He marched immediately towards Cabul, which had been in poffeffion of Ryfac, the fon of Ali, Baber's uncle, who was then in his minority. One Zicca, exerting too much authority in the country at that time, difguiled the other omrahs, who affaffinated him in the month of Zihidge. This circumftance occafioned great convultions in the kingdom; for Mokim, the fon of Amir Zulnôn, prince of Garrimfere, took advantage of the inteffine divisions of the Cabulians, and invaded them, forcing Ryfac to take fhelter among the Afghans : he himfelf took poffellion of that country, and married the fifter of the former prince.

Baber feizes upon Cabuliltan. Affairs being in this fituation, Baber arrived upon the borders of Cabul, and driving Mokîm out of the field, forced him to take refuge in the capital, which Baber befieged and took. He then applied himfelf to regulate and improve that country, as dominions belonging to himfelf. In the year nine hundred and eleven, Cabuliftan was thrown into great confternation by dreadful earthquakes, which laid moft of the cities in ruins. Baber endeavoured to alleviate this public calamity in fuch a manner, by his unwearied

His afpiring difposition began to extend his views to conquest. He accordingly led an army against the Argôns of Kandahar, and deprived them of the ftrong fort of Killât, eftablifhing an alliance with Buddiulzemân, a prince of the race of Timur, in posseffion of Herât. He marched in the fame year to Kufsluckât, which he brought into fubjection, and gave the government of Ghizni, which, from a great empire, was diminished into an inconfiderable province, to his brother Jehangire.

In the year nine hundred and twelve, Baber marched towards Marches to Chorraffan to join Huffein Mirza, who, ashamed of his former behavior, and irritated, by fresh injuries from Shubiani, now propefed to Baber, that they fhould join in alliance againft him. But when Baber had reached Nîmrofa, he heard of Huffein's death. He proceeded, however, to Chorrafsan, and endeavoured to ffir up the princes and omrahs against the Ufbecks. He was not able to effect his purpose, and he therefore returned, by the way of Herât, towards Cabul. The fnows were, at that time, very deep, and prevented his paffage over the hills, which obliged him to canton his troops in Hazara. Hi Use Bill mails all angele

When Baber was thus conftrained to remain at Hazara, Huffein Diffurbances Gurgan, Birlafs, and other mogul omrahs, joining with Mirza his coufin, raifed him to the throne of Cabul; by promoting falfe intelligence of the King's death. But when the news of his return reached the people, they rebelled against the new govern_ ment, and as foon as the feafon permitted his approach, flocked to his flandard, put all the garrifons into his hands except the capital, where Mirza and his adherents fuffained a flort fiege, and then capitulated. About this time Nafir, the Sultan's youngeft brother, who held the government of Baduchfhan, being defeated, by one of the generals of Shubiani, took refuge at Cabul, and, as Jehangire had killed himfelf by hard drinking, his government of Ghizni was now conferred upon Nafir.

Baber invited to Kandahar.

In the year nine hundred and thirteen, Baber marched against the Afghans of Ghalingi, who infefted his country, and took from them one hundred thousand sheep, and some thousands of other cattle, and returned. The omrahs of the houfe of Argôn, being greatly opprefied by the Ufbecks, wrote to Baber, at this time, that if he would march that way, they would put him in pofferfion of Kandahar*. The Sultan did not hefitate to comply with their request. He immediately fet out, and, as he was paffing Kilat, Mirza begged the favor of being admitted into his prefence, and, receiving his pardon, accompanied him. When he had reached the borders of Kandahar, he wrote to Shaw Beg and Mokim, that he was fo far upon his way, according to their defire, and that, therefore, he expected to fee them in his camp. Since the time of their writing to Baber, fome alterations in their politicks, had made them repent of the application they had made, fo that inftead of receiving the king in a friendly manner, they prepared for war, and defired he would return home. But Baber determined not to fuffer fuch an indignity with impunity. He marched forward, and engaged them at the village of Gillifhack, near the city of Kandahar, defeated them with great flaughter, and cutting off their retreat from the city, Shaw Beg fled to Saul, and Mokim towards Dawir. Baber immediately laid Mokim having, this very year, complained to Shubiani, the Ufbec, prevailed upon him to engage in his behalf, and to march towards Kandahar. Nafir, upon receiving this intelligence, fhut himfelf up in the town, and fent expresses to his brother for affiftance. Baber wrote him to defend the place as long as he could, but if he should be driven to great distrefs, to capitulate, and come to him at Cabul; for that, at the time, he was in no condition to difpute the field with Shubiani, whole forces and finances were greatly fuperior; befides, that a defeat might ruin him for ever, and overfet all the projects he had formed of raifing himfelf a kingdom in Hindoftan. Nafir, according to thefe inftructions, after he could hold out no longer with propriety, capitulated, and came to the king at Cabul. Shubiani, after taking the place, gave it back to the fons of Zulnon, and marched with his army towards Choraffan. But no fooner had Shubiani evacuated Kandahar, than the Arguniahs, a wild tribe, made an incursion, and possessed themselves of the place. This was an agreeable piece of news to Baber, as they formed a barrier between him and the Ufbecks.

This year, upon the fourth of Zicat, Baber had a fon born to Humaioon him in Cabul, whom he named Humaioon, who afterwards became emperor of Hindoftan. The Sultan, in the following year, took the field against the Memind Afghans, and, during his absence, the moguls of Chusero, who had been left to defend Cabul, revolted, and fet up again Ryfac, the fon of Ali, upon " Alskandlen (P) Stonk. The king was immediately deferted by the greateft part of his army; for hearing of the rebellion in Cabul, they haftened home to protect their families, infomuch, that out of upwards of ten thousand horse, which he carried to the field, Baber had now scarce five hundred remaining in his camp.

Baber's daring enterprize.

Kills five omrahs in fingle combat. Notwithstanding these misfortunes, Baber boldly resolved to advance towards Cabul, with the few trusty friends he had left. Ryfac, upon the Sultan's approach, came out of the city with an army ten or twelve thousand strong. The king, with his small troop, advanced towards them, and when he came near, ordered his party to halt. He himself rode close up to the rebel-army, and challenged Ryfac to fingle combat; but, as he feemed to decline it, five omrahs, one after another, engaged him, and felf by his hand. The names of the omrahs were, Alli Shubcore, Alli Seistani, Nifer the Usbeek, Jacoob, and Usbeek Bahadar. This heroic behavior struck the rebels with so much admiration and astonishment, that they refused to fight, by which means the usurper was taken. But so great was the king's clemency, that he pardoned him; but soon after, beginning to raise more diffurbance, he source the just reward of a traitor.

War between Perfia and the Ufbecks. The country of Chufero, king of Kunduz, having fallen into the hands of the Ufbeeks, who took no proper means of keeping it in fubjection, a number of independent chiefs fprung up in Buduchfhan, of whom the principal was Zeiper. Chan Mirza, upon thisby the advice of his mother, Sha Begum, who traced her genealogy to the great Secunder *, began to entertain hopes, and to take measures to raife himfelf to that kingdom. Having previously obtained leave of Baber, he this year left Cabul; and, having raifed a fmall army, advanced towards the borders of Buduchfhan.

But his mother, who came up in the rear, was attacked by a body of Kashgars, and carried off prisoner, while Chan Mirza was defeated, and obliged to give himfelf up to Zeiper, who kept him under guard. Eufoph Ali, who had been an old fervant of Mirza, formed a confpiracy against Zeiper, and affaffinated him, and Chan Mirza was raifed to the throne by the people. In the year nine hundred and fixteen, Ifmaiel Suffavi +, king of Perfia, wrote to Shubiani to withdraw his troops from fome of the fkirts of his dominions, upon which he had begun to encroach, to root up the tree of contention, which produced bitter fruits, and to plant that of friendship, whose blossons shed the most grateful perfume. Shubiani replied, That it was only for those who were descended from kings to entertain thoughts of empire; that it was true, that Ifmaiel, though the fon of a Fakier, had raifed himfelf to a kingdom, when there was no lord of feven nations around him, to oppose him; that therefore, it would be now adviseable for him to retire to his former obfcurity, and that, for that purpose, he had fent him a staff and a beggar's dish for his inheritance ; for that Shubiani only was worthy of poffeffing the bride of royalty, who durft kifs her through oppofing fwords. Ifmaiel anfwered, That if empire was an inheritance, by what means was it fo often violated, till it fell to his lot? for his own part, he had always confidered the right of kings as founded upon power, and that the longest fword was the best title. That, with the latter, he was, at all times, ready to difpute with Shubiani; and that, though he himfelf had no opinion of contemptuous oftentation, yet in return for Shubiani's prefent, he had fent him a gridiron and fpinning-wheel for his amufement. As for the reft, that Ifmaiel would be his own meffenger.

Shubiani overthrown and flain. Having difpatched this meffage, Ifinaiel immediately collected his army, and marching eaftward, fubdued Chorraffan, and advanced to Murve, before Shubiani could make the leaft oppofition. Shubiani not being then prepared to engage Ifinaiel, in the field, he fhut himfelf up in Murve. But being feverely reproached by Ifinaiel, he marched out and gave him battle, in which he was defeated. In his flight he had the misfortune to get into a park, with about five hundred princes and principal officers, from whence he could find no outlet. He was attacked there by the king of Perfia, and feeing no hope of efcape left, he and his followers fought, refufing quarter, till every man of them was laid dead ou the field.

Chan Mirza immediately difpatched accounts of this important event from Buduchshan to Baber, and went himself to Kunduz; informing the king; that now was the time for recovering his former dominions. Baber accordingly, in the year nine hundred. and feventeen, marched, with all expedition, towards Hiffar, eroffing the Amu * with Chan Mirza. But a great army of Ufbecks being encamped near that city, the moguls were obliged to retreat to Kunduz. Ifmaiel, at this time, fent the Sultana Zada, Baber's fifter, who had been taken in Samarcand, by Shubiani, and afterwards married by him, with all her effects, to Kunduz; where the gave to favorable an account of the generous behavior of the Perfian, that Baber was induced to hope for his affiftance in reinftating him in his hereditary kingdom. He, for this purpofe, fent him an ambafiador, with proper prefents. In the mean time, in order to keep up the fpirit of enterprize, he marched towards Hiffar, where he still found the Ufbecks greatly fuperior in force to him. He therefore declined to attack them, till he should recruit more forces. This being done, he advanced to their encampment, and offered them battle, which they accepted, and Baber obtained a complete victory, to which the bravery of Chan Mirza greatly contributed.

He was, in a few days after, joined by Ahmed, of the Suffvi family, Alli Oftagelo, and Sharock, with a fine body of cavalry on the part of the king of Perfia, by which his army amounted to fixty thousand horse. With this force he marched towards Bochara, and, after feveral fuccefsful actions with Abdulla, and Jani Beg, poffeffed himfelf of that kingdom. Upon the fifteenth of Regib of the fame year, he marched from Bochara to Samarcand, which city furrendered to him the third time, and and Samaracknowledged him fovereign. Baber fixed his refidence at Samarcand, and appointed Nafir, his brother, to the government of Cabul, giving leave to the troops of Perfia to return home. But he had not poffeffed this throne above nine months, before the Ufbecks, who had fled to Turkestan, advanced, under Timur, who had fucceeded to Shubiani. Upon receiving thefe advices, Baber marched to defend Bochara, where he engaged the Ufbecks, but being defeated, was obliged to fhut himfelf up within the walls. He was, in the end, forced to abandon the city, and to retreat to Samarcand. Here he was again befieged, and obliged to fly to Shadman.

About this time, Nigim Sani, of Ifpahan, general of the Perfian armies, advanced with an intention to poffers himfelf of Balich. Baber, ever watchful to grafp at every thing favorable to the ruling paffion of his foul, formed an alliance with him for the recovery of his dominions. Sani having taken the fort of Kirifh from the Ufbecks, put the garrifon, confifting of fifteen thousand, to the fword. He then laid fiege to Gudgdewan, in conjunction with the Sultan, whither the princes of the Ufbecks advanced againft

A confpiracy a gainft his life. Nor did the misfortunes of Baber rife from the enemy alone. His attendants confpired againft his life, for having blamed fome of them for bad behavior. They rufhed, in the night, into his tent, but being alarmed by the noife, he made his efcape naked, and reached the fort of Aric before morning, without one attendant; and the confpirators plundered his camp, and difperfed themfelves. In this fituation of affairs, the king faw no further hope in thofe northern regions, and therefore fet out for Cabul with a finall retinue, and upon his arrival appointed Nafir to the government of Ghizni. In the year nine hundred and twenty-four, he marched towards Sawad and Bejoar, poffeffed by the Afghans of Zehi, who had been infefting his country. Having defeated thofe mountaineers, and carried fome thoulands of them into captivity, he gave the government of that country to one of his omrahs.

Meditates the conquest of Hindostan. When Secunder, the emperor of Hindoftan, died, he was fucceeded, as we have already related, by Ibrahim the fecond, in whofe reign the Patan chiefs of the imperial family of Lodi, became fo factious, that they totally broke the power of that empire. Baber reckoned this a good opportunity to eftablifh himfelf in India, the conqueft of which he had long meditated, though he was always embroiled in other affairs. Baber accordingly, in the year nine hundred and twenty-five, marched his army as far as the blue river, one of the branches of the Indus. He fubdued all the countries in his way, and croffing the river, advanced to Berah in Punjab, raifing heavy contributions for with-holding his his troops from plunder. He fent from Berah, one Moulana, A. At this place Baber received advice of the birth of another fon, whom he named Hindal. He appointed Haffen Beg, governor of the conquered countries as far as Chinaab, and marched in perfon against the Gickers, and befieged the fort of Pirhala, whither Hati their chief had retired. The Gickers were, one day, tempted to take the field, and were defeated by Dooft Beg, the mogul general, while the king in perfon cut off their retreat to the fort, and obliged them to fly to the mountains. The fort, in which there was a confiderable treafure, fell by this means into hishands, which fatisfied Baber for this expedition, and he returned to Cabul.

In the latter end of the fame year, Baber returned again to Hin- His fecond doftan, with an intention to take Lahore, and in his way chaftifed into Hindef fome Patans of the tribe of Zehi, who diffurbed him in his march. He built a fort at Peshawir, and then advanced to the Indus. He there received intelligence, that the king of Kafhgar, or Little Bucharia, was marched into Buduchshan, which obliged him to return, leaving the prince Mahommed, one of the defcendants of Timur, with four thousand horse, to support his authority in the country. He had not, however, reached Cabul, before he heard that the king of Kashgar had been obliged to retreat .. Baber, therefore, turned his face towards the Afghans, of the tribe of Chizer Cheil, who began to make depredations upon the kingdom of Cabul in his absence, and feverely chastifed them for their infolence, fpoiled their country, and returned to his capital.

Third expedition into Hindollan.

Returns and befieges Kandahar, Baber, in the year nine hundred and twenty-fix, marched a third time towards India, chaftifing the Patans in his way, till he reached Salcot, the inhabitants of which country fubmitted, and faved their poffeffions. But the people of Seidpoor, erecting the flandard of defence, were, in the end, put all to the fword, their wealth given up to depredation, and their children and wives carried away captive. Eaber was here alarmed, by intelligence from Cabul, that obliged him to return, for the Kandharians had invaded his country. He marched againft them, drove them out of the field, and invefted their capital.

He, in the mean time, received advice of the death of Chan Mirza, in Buduchfhan, and appointed his fon Humaicon to that government. Shaw Beg, the prince of Kandahar, held out with great bravery againft Baber for the fpace of three years, during which time the blockade lafted. But in the year nine hundred and twenty-eight, Baber, who was obflinate in his refolution, at length reduced Kandahar, and all the country of Garrumfere, appointing prince Camiran, his fon, to the government.

Lahore taken, Soon after the furrender of Kandahar, Dowlat Lodi, apprehenfive of the emperor Ibrahim, fent a deputation to Baber, at Cabul, begging his protection. Baber, in the year nine hundred and thirty, augmented his army, and advanced within fix crores of Lahore, where Par Lodi, Mubarick Lodi, and Bicken Lohani, who were powerful omrahs of Punjab, joined their forces, and oppofed him; but they were defeated with great flaughter. Baber, in perfon, marched to Lahore, and took it, fetting fire to the Bazar, according to a fuperfittious cuftom of the Moguls.

Baber

The king remained four days only in Lahore, and then advanced against Debalpoor. He fummoned the place to furrender, but

but as the garrifon forced him to rifque an affault, in which he was fuccefsful, he put them all to the fword. Dowlat Lodi, with his three fons, joined Baber at Debalpoor, and the father was appointed to the government of Jallender, Sultanpoor, and other diffricts of Punjab, which rendered him very powerful.

This Dowlat Lodi was a defcendant of the race of that name who heretofore reigned at Delhi. He gave to Baber information, that Ifmaiel Selwani, and other Afghans, were collected at Kharah; that it would, therefore, be adviseable to detach a force against them. The Sultan agreed to this proposal, and prepared to fend a detachment that way. In the mean time, Delawir, the youngeft fon of Dowlat, acquainted Baber, with whom he was a great favorite, that his father and brother wanted to divide his troops, to put fome plan which they themfelves had concerted, in execution. The king, after being convinced of the truth of this information, ordered Dowlat, and his fon Ghazi, into confinement. He then croffed the Suttuluz, advanced to Sirhind, and there releafed the two Lodi's, and gave them effates. But when they had reached Sultanpoor, they deferted the camp, and fled to the hills. The king, upon this, gave to Delawir the title of first of the nobles, and both their eftates; but as the father and fon's defertion greatly affected Baber's intereft in Hindoftan, he thought it no ways adviseable to proceed to Delhi this year. He, accordingly, returned to Lahore, and, having appointed governors to the different countries in his poffeffion in India, fet out for Cabul.

During Baber's absence, Dowlat Lodi found means to feize his fon Delawir, who had betrayed him, and put him in chains; then marching with a formidable army to Debalpoor, fought Alla, the brother of the emperor Ibrahim, and Baba Kiska, and defeating Vol. II. Q them, Ibrahim attacks him. Much about this time, an army, on the part of Ibrahim, emperor of Delhi, marched againft Dowlat Lodi and his fon. Dowlat turned his army to give them battle, and, having met them at Bidwarrah, found means to ftir up a faction in his own favor in the imperial camp, infomuch that fuch as were not difaffected were obliged to fly the camp, and return to Ibrahim.

Alla arrives at Lahore.

Befieges Delhi.

Alla, who had loft his government of Debalpoor, and had fled to Cabul, now arrived in Lahore, with orders from Baber to all his officers in those parts, to join him with all their forces, and march towards Delhi, and that he would fupport them in perfon as foon as his affairs at home would permit. Dowlat and Ghazi Lodi, hearing of this order, wrote to the mogul omrahs, that they were glad to find that Baber espoufed the caufe of Alla, who was the very perfon they themfelves would chufe to raife to the throne of Delhi; that if they would, therefore, fend him to them, they would undertake to place him upon the Mufnud. The mogul chiefs, having first obtained a grant for Baber, of all the countries to the north-weft of the Indus, permitted Alla to join the Lodi's himfelf, without complying further with their mafter's orders. When accordingly Alla arrived in their camp, Dowlat and his fon fupplied him with the greatest part of their force, with which he marched towards Delhi, and invefted it, as before related, with forty thousand horse. In the mean time, the emperor Ibrahim advanced advanced against his brother from Agra, and was furprized, in the night, when he had reached near the city; but, by the irregular behavior of Alla's army, who, in the morning, difperfed themfelves to plunder, they were fallen upon by Ibrahim, and defeated in their turn, which obliged Alla to retreat, in great dif- Overthrown. trefs, to Punjaab. When Baber heard of the defeat of Alla, he awoke from the dream of indolence and luxury, which he had indulged for fome time in Cabul, and, in the beginning of the fpring, of the year nine hundred and thirty two, marched the fifth time towards Hindostan. He was joined by his fon Humaioon, with a good force, from Buduchshan, and Chaja Callan, with the troops from Ghizni. He took the rout of Lahore, and in the way used to hunt rhinocerofes, with which that country abounded, and fo had an opportunity of putting the perfonal bravery of most of his chiefs to trial, as that was a dangerous and warlike exercife. Many of those animals were killed, and fome taken alive in toils.

Upon the first of the first Ribbi, Baber croffed the Indus, and Baber croffer upon the banks of that river, mustered his army, which confisted of only ten thousand chosen horse. Croffing then that branch of the Indus, which is called Behat, he advanced to Salcot, where Alla met him, and likewife Ali, governor of Cullanore, and Haffen, the collector of the revenues in those provinces. Dowlat Lodi and his fon Ghazi who reckoned themfelves publickly in the fervice of Alla, now lay upon the banks of the Ravi, near Lahore, with an army of forty thousand men; but when Baber advanced towards them, they fled; Dowlat to the fort of Milwit, and Ghazi to the skirts of the hills. Baber invested Milwit, and Dowlat, after a few days, capitulated. It feems, that fome days before, he put on two fwords, and boafted what he would do to Baber. Baber now ordered those two fwords to be hung round his neck, and in. that manner Dowlat was brought to his prefence; but notwithftanding his behaviour, the King forgave all his crimes, and took him into favor. When the gates of the fort were opened, the troops preffed in an irregular manner, and began to plunder. Baber, upon this, mounted his horfe, and entering, was under the neceffity of using violence, to prevent their outrages. He killed, upon this occafion, a principal officer of his fon Humaioon's retinue, with an arrow, for which he was extremely grieved, as it happened by miftake. The King, by this means, faved the honor of Dowlat's family, who were all in the place, and preferved a noble library which he had collected, Dowlat being a poet and a man of learning. Baber marched from thence the next day, and purfued Ghazi, when Delawir, the fon of Dowlat, who had been dignified with a title, found means to escape to him, and was honorably received. A mogul chief, who was detached in front, having fallen in with Ghazi, defeated him, and purfued him fo clofe, that he was obliged to fly to the Emperor Ibrahim, at Delhi. The elder Dowlat died upon this march.

Marches towards Delhi. Baber having, in feveral actions, perceived the inferiority of the Indian troops to his own, determined to delay no longer his final attempt upon the empire. He accordingly marched towards Delhi, having fome letters of encouragement, at the fame time, from a few of the malcontents at the court of Ibrahim. When he had reached the banks of the Giger, he heard that the governor of Firofa, was waiting to oppofe him in front, with the troops of those parts. Baber, therefore, fent his fon Humaioon, with fome of his most experienced officers, to drive the governor from his post, which they effected, and returned victorious to the army. his father was greatly rejoiced, and gave him the countries of Firola A. D. 1525. and Jallender in Jagier. Two days after, Meian, a chief of the party of Ibrahim, appeared in fight, and defired to join Baber's colours, with three thousand Patan horse, and was accordingly entertained in his fervice.

Baber having arrived within two stages of Shawabad, received Arrives at intelligence that Ibrahim, with a great army, had marched out of Delhi to oppose him, and that Daood and Hatim formed his vanguard with twenty feven thousand horse. The fultan immediately detached Timur, and other nobles, with all the troops of the left wing, and the fquadrons of Juneid Birlafs, and Haffen Birlafs, against this advanced post. They accordingly fell in with them the next morning at fun-rife, and after an obftinate conflict, put Daood and Hatim to flight, but the latter fell in the purfuit. The victors took feven elephants, and a great number of prifoners, with whom they returned to Baber; but he, we are forry to relate fuch barbarity, put them to death, by way of firking terror into his enemies.

Baber advancing to the field of battle, encamped there fix Preparations days, ordering chains to be made to link the carriages of his guns together, to prevent the horfe breaking through them. The imperial army under Ibrahim, by this time, confifted of one hundred thousand horse, and a thousand elephants; that of Baber, of thirteen thousand only. When Ibrahim had advanced near, Baber ordered five thousand horse to attack the Indian camp in the night; but finding the enemy upon their guard, this detachment returned without attempting any thing.

This retreat haftened Ibrahim to action, and accordingly he marched for a general engagement;

Shawabad,

A. D. 1525. Hig. 932. marched next morning to Panniput. Baber, at the fame time, advanced within twelve miles of Ibrahim's encampment. Upon the day after, being the feventh of Rigib, the two armies came in fight. of each other. Baber divided his troops into two lines, and four grand divisions, with a body of referve in the rear of each, and a few light horfe to fkirmifh in front. The first division on the right was commanded by Prince Humaioon. The first on the left was under the orders of the King's coufin Mahommed. The fecond, on the right towards the center, was commanded by Timur. The fecond, to the left towards the center, by the noble Chalifa. Chufero, and other omrahs, was appointed to command the light horfe, or herawils, in the front. Aziz and Tirrah, in the rear of the right, and Ceri and Willi Kizil, in the rear of the left. Befides thefe, there was a referve in the rear of both lines, that on the right commanded by Cafim, and that on the left by Ali. The king himfelf took his poft in the centre of the first line, after having perfonally given orders to his generals.

The battle.

The emperor Ibrahim, ignorant of the art of war, obferved no regular order of battle, but drew up his forces in one great line or column of unequal depth, and ordered them to charge the Mogul army, vainly imagining that he could bear them down with numbers. But he found himfelf foon fatally deceived. So formidable were the Moguls to the Patans, from their known courage and fteady order, that the emperor's unweildy column began to break and turn thin, before they came up to the charge, which was directed at the center of the Mogul army. Those who advanced were repulfed with great bravery, but when they fought to retreat, they found themselves furrounded; for the two bodies of referve, in the rear of the Mogul line, had wheeled round their flanks, flanks, and meeting in the center, fell upon the rear of those who A. D. 1525. had advanced to the charge, by which means the Patans were almost all cut to pieces. The referve having performed this fervice, retired to their poft in the rear, and the Mogul lines advanced, fuftaining various irregular charges from the Indian army, whom they repulfed with great flaughter.

Ibrahim, at last roufed with shame and indignation, advanced in Ibrahim des perfon, followed by the flower of his army, and gave fuch a vio- flain. lent fhock to the Mogul line, as threw it into diforder. Nothing now but perfonal bravery was left to decide the day; but in this, and the compact form in which the Moguls whole force was wedged, they were ftill fuperior to the Indians. Five thousand fell with Ibrahim in one fmall fpot of ground. The Patan army, when their king was flain, recoiled like furges from a rocky fhore, and the torrent of flight rolled towards the banks of the Jumna, dying the courfe of that river with blood; for fo far did Baber continue the purfuit; but being wearied with flaughter, he gave hope to fear, and respite to death.

According to the most moderate accounts there were fixteen thousand Patans killed in this action, though most authors fay fifty thousand. Of the loss of Baber we have no information: conquerors having it always in their power to conceal the number of their flain. We may date from this battle, the fall of the Patan empire, though that race afterwards made many efforts, and recovered it, for a few years, as we shall fee in the life of Humaioon.

Baber did not fail to make the best use of his victory. He im- Baber enters mediately after the battle detached the Prince Humaioon, and three of his principal omrahs, to Agra, before they could have time time to recover from their confernation, or to remove their wealth. He alfo fent his coufin Mahommed, and three other chiefs, to Delhi, to take poffeffion of that capital, while he himfelf came up in the rear, and, on the twelfth of Rigib, entered the city. The chutba was read in his name, by Zein the Metropolitan of Delhi: and, after having furveyed the city, and vifited the tombs of the faints and heroes, he fet out for Agra, where he arrived the twenty fifth of the fame month, and immediately invefted the fort, which was in poffeffion of the former government, garrifoned by the troops of the Raja, of Gualier, who had been killed in the action. But fo much had the terror of the Mogul arms now taken poffeffion of every mind, that they immediately defired to capitulate, and fent him, by way of ranfom, a perfect diamond weighing two hundred and twenty four ruttys *, which was formerly the property of the emperor Alla. Baber prefented it to his fon Humaioon. Thus, upon the fifth day after his arrival, he was put in posseffion of the place, in which he found the mother of Ibrahim, who was treated with becoming refpect, and permitted to enjoy all her wealth.

Reflexions upon the conqueft of Hindoftan by Baber. This conquest of Hindostan, as Baber himself writes in his Commentaries †, was certainly superior to that of any former conqueror. Mahmood of Ghizni was not only a powerful emperor, but the country was, at that time, divided into a number of kingdoms, which greatly facilitated his enterprizes. Mahommed Ghori brought an army of one hundred and twenty thousand men with him, when the kingdom was not so powerful. The like may be faid of Timur, who ravaged Hindostan when it was torn to pieces by civil commotions. But the army of Baber was but a A. D. 1526. handful in proportion to that of Ibrahim, who poffeffed all the countries between the Indus and Behar, and could bring five hundred thousand men to the field; while Baber only possefied the poor countries of Cabul, Buduchshan, and Kandahar, the revenues of which were very inconfiderable. To what then can we attribute this extraordinary conquest, in a natural light, but to the great abilities and experience of Baber, the bravery of his few hardy troops, trained up to war, for their fubfiftance, and now fired with the hopes of glory and gain? But what contributed most to weigh down the fcale of conquest, was the degeneracy of the Patans, effeminated by luxury and wealth, and dead to all principles of virtue and honor, which their corrupt factions and civil difcords had totally effaced; it being now no fhame to fly, no infamy to betray, no breach of honor to murther, and no fcandal to change parties. When, therefore, the fear of fhame and the love of fame were gone, it was no wonder that a herd, without unanimity, order, or discipline, should fall into the hands of a few brave men. This is the general tendency of wealth in all governments, if the reins are not held fast, the laws punctually executed, and the progrefs of corruption checked both by private and public occonomy.

Upon the twentieth of Rigib, Baber went into the treafury, which was very rich. He referved not a fingle dinar for himfelf, but divided it among his omrahs and troops; the fhare of the former coming to two lacks of rupees each; and those of others were proportionable to their rank and flations. A part was fent to Cabul, to be divided among Baber's fubjects, which yielded to each a filver sharoch *, besides presents, which he fent to Samarcand,

The provincial omrahs refufe to fubmit.

As the Patans were in great terror of the Moguls, and had a natural antipathy to their government, they ftill refufed to fubmit, and appeared every where in arms, firengthening their forts, and erecting the flandard of defiance in their different provinces; Cazim, in Simbol; Formalli, in Mewat; Zeitôn, in Dolepoor; Tatar, in Gualiêr; Huffein Lohani, in Rhaberi; Cuttub in Atava; Allum, in Calpee; Nizam, in Biana; befides Nafir Lohani, and Furmalli, on the other fide of the Ganges. All these chiefs refufed to acknowledge Baber's authority. But as it was neceffary to form an alliance for their mutual defence, they unanimoufly appointed Par Chan, the fon of Diria Lodi, their general, or, rather, king, by the title of Sultan Mahommed; and, rendezvoufing at Kinnoge, advanced towards Agra. At the fame time, Mai, the Afghan chief, who had joined Baber, deferted him, with all his adherents : even the inhabitants of the country round Agra, cut off his foraging parties, and rendered it very difficult for him. to fupport his cavalry, or fupply his troops with provisions: Add. to this, the intolerable heat of the weather, by which a great many Moguls, not being accuftomed to fuch a climate, died.

Baber's diftrefs and refolution. In this fituation of affairs, Baber received an addrefs from all his chiefs requefting him to return to Cabul; to which he replied, That a kingdom which had coft him fo much pains in taking, was not to be wrefted from him but by death alone. He, at the fame time, iffued a proclamation, that he was determined to abide his fate in India; but if any perfon was defirous of returning to Cabul, preferring.

The omrahs hearing this, were ashamed of their former behavior, and, striking their breasts, fwore they would never forfake him; all, except Chaja Callân, whofe bravery was too well established to be disputed, though he was advifed, being at the point of death, to retire to recover his health. He was appointed governor of Cabul and Ghizni, for the great fervices which he had rendered to the king. When it was known that Baber had determined not to leave Hindoftan, as his anceftor Timur had done, fome omrahs, who were willing to be first in favor, began to come over to him ; first, Gurin, with three thousand horse, from between the rivers, offered his service, which was accepted. The next was Formalli, from Mewat, to redeem his fons who had been taken in the battle; then Firofe and Chirmali, with their whole dependents.

Much about this time, an address was received from Casim, of Casim of Simbol, that Bein, an Afghan, was befieging him in his fort, and mits. that if the King would fend him fuccours, he would lift himfelf among his fervants. The king fent a detachment, that way, who engaged the Afghan, and defeated him, after which Cafim put the Moguls in poffeffion of the fort. The king then fent his fon Humaioon, with the greatest part of his army, against the confederate Patan omrahs, whole forces amounted to fifty thouland horfe ; but, upon Humaioon's approach, they retreated from Kinnoge to Jionpoor. Humaioon having prevailed upon Fati, the former emperor's vizier, to join him, fent him to the king at Agra, who treated him with the utmost respect and favor, which induced feveral other Afghan chiefs to come over to his intereft.

Nizam, governor of Biana, fubnuits. Nizam, governor of Biana, though he was now hard preffed by Rana Sinka, who wanted to make himfelf mafter of that province, ftill refufed to fubmit to the king's authority, which obliged Baber to fend Baba Kuli againft him with a detachment, which was defeated. But Rana Sinka foon after reduced Nizam to fuch extremities, that he fent a deputation to Baber, begging pardon for his offence, and requefting he would fupport him, for which he was ready to pay him due allegiance. The king, glad of the opportunity, made no hefitation to embrace the offer, and, fending a force to drive off Rana, Nizam was put in poffeffion of the place, which was fettled upon him, with all its dependencies, for the annual payment of twenty lacks of rupees.

The governors of Gualier propofe to fubmit. Tatar and Saring, who were in poffeffion of the fort of Gualiêr, being belieged by the Indian prince of that country, in the fame manner addreffed the king for fuccours. Baber difpatched a detachment, which defeated the raja, but Saring recalled his promife, and refufed to deliver up the place. There was in the fort, at that time, a philofopher whofe name was Shech Gofe, who had a great number of fludents under him, and who wrote to the Mogul general, to endeavour to get permiffion to come himfelf into the fort, and that he would find means of accomplifhing the reft of his defires.

The Mogul, for this purpofe, begged leave, as he had enemies all around him, to bring his troops under protection of the garrifon, for fear of a night affault, and that he might be permitted the honor of paying the philosopher a visit in the garrifon. This being agreed to, the Mogul was received into the fort with a few attendants. He, from time to time, pretended occasion to fend frequent meffages in and out; till the officer of the guard troubled the gover-

The officer of the guard, who was a difciple of the philosopher, and who had been let into the plot, availed himfelf of this order, and permitted every body pointed out, to pafs, by which means all the chofen men of the detachment were within the garrifon before the entertainment was ended. Saring was told to give up the place, and threatened with inftant death, in cafe of refufal; fo having fatisfied himfelf of the circumftances, he made a virtue of neceffity, and replied, That had he not intended giving up the place to the king, he would never have been fo unguarded as to permit his party to take this advantage, and accordingly fubmitted without refiftance, and going in perfon to Agra, entered into the king's fervice. Zeiton, at the fame time, arrived from Dolepoor, and had a command conferred upon him.

Not long after thefe transactions, Hamid, Saring, and other Afghans, raifed, by a family quarrel, a great diffurbance in the caftle of Firofa. The king fent Timur against them, who chaftifed both parties. In the year nine hundred and thirty three, Chajagi, who had gone ambaffador from Cabul to congratulate Shaw Tamafp king of Perfia, upon his acceffion, returned, accompanied by Solimân, and brought various curiofities. But that which pleafed the king moft, was two beautiful female flaves, just come to maturity, of whom he became greatly enamoured. The mother of the emperor Ibrahim, who had been before the greatest favorite in the feraglio, incenfed at this change in the Sultan's affections, confpired with the tafter and cook to poifon him. The poifon was accordingly An attempt administred in some hare-soup; but the king, after eating a few ber. fpoonfuls, naufeated the tafte, and immediately vomited, which faved his life. After proper enquiry had been made, the tafter and cook denying their knowledge of any fuch thing, the king ordered a dog to be brought, who having eat of the foup, was foon feized with convultions, and died. Two of the under cooks being alfo brought to the trial, expired in the fame manner : upon which the tafter and head cook, with feveral of their affiftants, were put to the torture. The plot was difcovered, and the mother of Ibrahim caft into prifon, and all her wealth confifcated. One of Ibrahim's fons was fent, at the fame time, to Cabul, where he remained in banifhment. Prince Humaioon, having defeated the omrahs at Jionpoor, left Birlafs to keep thofe provinces in awe, returned himfelf to court, having, upon his way, conciliated matters with Allum, governor of Calpee, who now accompanied him, and was received with great refpect.

Baber alarmed with a confederacy against him.

The king was, at this time, fuddenly alarmed by advices that many Patan omrahs with Mahmood, the fon of the emperor Secunder, and other chiefs and rajas in alliance, whofe force exceeded one hundred thoufand horfe, were preparing to attack him. Baber, having no dependence on the Patan chiefs, who had joined him, detached them to defend different provinces, and with his own Moguls, haftened towards the enemy. His van guard falling in with their's, upon the frontiers of Biana, after a fharp conflict, were repulfed by the enemy with great lofs, which ftruck unufual terror into the King's fmall army. Neazi fled to Simbol, Haffen joined the enemy, and every day brought difagreeable intelligence from all quarters. Nor did the predictions of Sherif a little add to the general confternation. This pretended wizard averred, that Brifput * was in the eaft, and confequently, that whoever marched from the weft fhould be overthrown.

The King perceiving this panic, called, immediately, a council A. D. 1526. of war. The greatest part of the officers gave it, as their opinion, that, as the fuperiority of the enemy was evident, it was advifeable to leave a ftrong garrifon in Agra, and to retreat with the bulk of the army to Punjaab. Baber, with a difcontented afpect, fixed his eyes, in filence, upon the ground. He, at length, fternly afked the chiefs, What would the world fay of a monarch, whom. the fear of death fhould oblige to abandon fuch a kingdom ? " The " voice of glory," faid he, " is loud in my ear, and forbids me " to difgrace my name, by giving up what my arms have, with " fo much difficulty, acquired. But, as death is at laft unavoid-" able, let us rather meet him with honor, face to face, than. " fhrink back, to gain a few years of a miferable and ignominious " existence; for what can we inherit but fame, beyond the limits " of the grave." The whole affembly, as if infpired with one foul, cried out, at once, " War ! War !" The King, having been formerly much addicted to wine, made a vow never to drink any more, should he, upon this occasion, prove victorious. Orders. were immediately iffued to prohibit the fale of wine in the camp : not fo much from fuperflition, as to keep the mind cool for action.

Upon the ninth of the fecond Jimmad, of the year nine hun- Baber dred and thirty three, which happened to be Norofe*, Baber formed his line of battle, with his guns and rockets in his front. In that order he moved towards the enemy, who lay at the diffance of fix miles. But after he had advanced two miles he halted, and encamped his army. Several young warriors, fond of diffinguifhing themfelves, iffued out, under the command of Mahom-

The enemy advance to attack him. The King, next day, advanced two miles further, and marked out his camp at the village of Kava, but his tents were fearcely pitched, when he perceived the enemy advancing upon him. He formed his line with great expedition, in the manner which he had practifed for fome days before, and, in a few minutes, was able to receive the flock of battle. The army was chiefly drawn up by Nizam Chalipha, whom Baber reckoned his ableft general; and this order of battle being, on account of circumftances, different from the former, we fhall relate it at large in this place.

The order of battle.

The line, which upon this occasion was fingle, confisted of fix brigades, exclusive of the King's life guards in the center, where Baber posted himself. Before each of the brigades, a few paces in front, the King placed a fquadron of light horfe, which formed another kind of line with great intervals. In front of the whole, the artillery and rocket-waggons were drawn up in three divisions, the right, left, and center. The guns were chained together, fo that there was a kind of fortification formed against the enemy's cavalry. The brigade immediately to the right of the center, was commanded by Timur, confifting of his own tribe, and the troops of many other omrahs of diffinction. The brigade to the left of the center was under the immediate orders of Allum, a defcendant of the emperor Beloli, and composed of his national troops, and those of five other nobles. The two brigades of the right wing were commanded in chief by prince Humaioon, and of these the right hand brigade confifted of the troops of Cafim Huffein, and other chiefs of family and experience in war. The left hand I hand battalion of prince Humaioon's division was made up of the troops of Seid Amir, and of those of other fix nobles of the Mogul race.

The two brigades of the left wing were commanded by Seid Chaja; the left hand battalion of whofe division was composed of different fquadrons, commanded by their refpective chiefs. The right hand brigade was made up of the troops of Angi the Mogul, and those of Kumal, of the race of Alla, formerly emperor of India. The light horse of the left wing were commanded by Tirdi Beg; and those of the right wing by Mahmood Casim. Mahommed, the captain-general, took post before the King, with all his yessian the set of the left.

About ten o'clock in the forenoon the action was commenced by the artillery. The left of the enemy, charging the right of the Moguls, foon fell in hand to hand, with the battalions of Kokultafh and Malleck Cafim, and made them give ground. But Timur, by the Sultan's orders, inclining to the right with his brigade, took up their ground, and falling upon the affailants with great fury, put them to flight, the light horfe purfuing them with great flaughter, quite through their own line. The enemy, in the mean time, being fo numerous, extended their flanks far beyond the wings of the King, and came down upon him from all fides. Baber ordered his right and left wing to fall back, by which means his army was thrown into a circle. In this pofition he refifted the repeated affaults of the Patans till three o'clock, Alla Kuli of Rumi*, who commanded the artillery, making great flaughter among them.

Baber finding the enemy fatigued by their repeated affaults, determined to act offenfively, to drive them quite out of the field. He therefore put himfelf at the head of the brigades of Timur and Allum, and charging them like a lion ruthing from his forest, after an obftinate refistance put their whole army to flight. Haffen of Mewat, was killed with a cannon fhot, and Raw Luddive, Chunder Ban, Mannuk Chohan, Kirim Sing, all powerful princes of the enemy, were numbered among the dead. The King, immediately after the victory, affumed the title of Ghazi +; and, as a monument to perpetuate the memory of the battle, he ordered a pyramid to be built upon an eminence near the field, which, according to the cuftom of his age and nation, was fluck round with the heads of the flain. The aftrologer, after being feverely reprimanded for his false prediction, was prefented with a lack of rupees, and banished from the kingdom.

Baber, from this fortunate field, marched towards Mavat, where Nihar, the fon of Haffen, feeing no other means of fafety, fubmitted himfelf and the country to the King. The government of Mavat was conferred upon Timur. After these transactions, Baber returned to Agra, from whence he fent his fon Humaioon to Cabul, with orders to add Balich to that province, and to rule both in his own name. Ali, and Tirdi Beg, were ordered against Huffein and Diria, who still kept possession of Chandwar and Raberi. But upon the approach of the Moguls, they fled, and Huffein was drowned in croffing the Jumna, while Diria efcaped. Mahommed, the King's coufin, was detached at the fame time

Upon the twenty ninth of Zihidge, in the year nine hundred and Baber inverts thirty four, the King marched to hunt towards Kole and Simbol. Having diverted himfelf with the chace for fome time, he returned to his capital, and was taken ill of a fever, of which however he foon recovered. He then marched towards Chinderi, where Medeni Rai, a Hindoo chief, had fhut himfelf up with a ftrong garrifon of Rajaputs. The place was invefted, and the Rajaputs fallied out, and attacked the King, but, they paid dear for their rafhnefs, and loft fix thousand men upon the field. Those who returned after this defeat into the fort, feeing no hopes of defending it longer against the enemy, according to their dreadful custom, murdered their wives and children in the following manner. They placed a fword in the hand of one of their chiefs, and he flew the unhappy victims, who, one after another, bent, of their own accord, their necks before him ; they even contended among themfelves about the honor of being first flain. The foldiers then threw a yellow powder upon their garments, as on a day of feftivity, and throwing loofe their hair, iffued forth with their fwords and fhields, and fought after that death, which they all obtained. The empty fort fell into the hands of the Moguls.

Advices were, about this time, received, that a detachment, which had been fent against the Patan chiefs of the tribe of Lodi, who held ftill the Eaftern provinces, was defeated. The King, therefore, left Ahmed, the fon of Mahommed, and grand-fon of Sultan Nafir of Malava, who had now joined him, in the government of Chinderi, and marched in perfon towards Kinnoge. He met his defeated troops at Raberi, and arriving at the river, he threw

After a faint refiftance, the Patans gave way; but Timur purfuing them, took part of their baggage, and a great number of their women and children.

Arrives at Agra. The King, after this victory, hunted, for a few days, upon the banks of the Gang, and then returned to Agra. He appointed Zeman, one of the pofterity of Timur, for he was the fon of Budeli ul Zeman Mirza, of Balich, governor of the city, and, in the year nine hundred and thirty five, marched himfelf to furvey the country. He first took the route of Gualier, and viewed there the fortifications, the stone elephant, and the palace of the Raja. He then visited the gardens of Rehim, and ordered some flowers and plants, of an uncommon kind, to be transplanted to Agra. He went to worship in the great mosque, built by the Emperor Altums, for whose sould be ordered prayers to be read, and returned, by another way, to Agra.

Falls fick.

Baber, foon after his return to Agra, was feized with an intermitting fever, which continued upon him for eight months. Some fuperflitious people advifed him, during his ficknefs, to write a poem in praife of Chaja Ahrar, one of the faints, to induce him to intercede with God for his health. Baber, though it is highly probable he did not give much credit to the power of the faint, actually wrote the poem, in the meafure of Mowlani Jami. The King recovered from his diforder about the eighth of the firft Ribbi. He offered up public thanks to God for the reftoration of his health, and made a great feaft upon the occafion. He diftributed magnificent prefents among the omrahs and foreign ambaffadors, and beftowed large fums to gladden the hearts of the poor. During. During this feftival, Chandamire, the author of the Habib al Sier, A. D. 1528. Mowlana Mammai, and Mirza Ibrahim Canooni, who came from Herât, and were esteemed the greatest men for literature in that age, were introduced to the King : He loaded them with his favors, and ordered them places near his own perfon.

The Emperor's relation Afhkari, who governed Moultan, was, this year, ordered to court, and having exhibited the tokens of obedience, he was commanded to go against Nuferit, one of the Patan chiefs, on the borders of the Decan. Nuferit, hearing of the approach of the Moguls, fent an ambaffador to the King, fubjecting himfelf to the royal authority. Nizam Beri, prince of Ahmednagur, at the fame time fent to congratulate Baber on his good fortune, and proffered obedience. Baber, towards the close of this year, received advices that Mahmood, the fon of the Emperor Secunder Lodi, had possefield himself of the province of Behar, and that one Bellocha had erected the flandard of rebellion in Moultan. The King fent orders to his omrahs in the north-weft, concerning the affairs of Moultan, and marched in perfon towards Behar. When he arrived at Kurrah, Jellal, defcended of that dynafty of Patans, who ftiled themfelves Emperors of the Eaft, prepared a royal entertainment for him, and was honored with his prefence. Zeman was detached from Kurrah to the conquest of Behar. He soon drove Mahmood out of the field.

But a few months after, the Afghans of Behar, collecting themfelves together a fecond time, advanced to the Gang, oppofite to Hideri. The King detached Ashkari with a division of the troops to oppofe them, and next day followed that officer with the whole army. When he came to the banks of the river, and faw the ene-

As foon as he made his landing good with eighty horfe, Afhkari, who had croffed at another place, appeared in the enemies rear; and they immediately took to flight. The King, after this action, left Junied Birlafs to profecute the war in conjunction with Nuferit, and returned to pafs the rainy feafon in Agra. Transactions in Cabul.

The prince Humaioon having left his brother Hindal to govern in his absence, returned about this time from Cabul to visit his father. Seid Chan of Argund, took this opportunity of invading Buduchshan, and fent a force to attack Minkilla. Hindal, upon the approach of the enemy, retreated into the fort of Ziffer, where he was befieged. Seid of Argund, finding that he could not reduce the place, and that the inhabitants would not join him, ravaged the country, and returned home. But as the news of his retreat had not reached Agra, the government of Buduchshan was bestowed upon Soliman, one of the race of Timur, who fet out immediately for that province with a letter from the King to Seid, expreffing his furprize at hoftilities, for which he could not account, but by fome mifbehavior of his fon Hindal; that, therefore, he had fent another perfon, who was allied to them both, to fupply his place. When Soliman arrived, he found the country in perfect tranquillity, and took poffeffion of the government, which his family have kept to this day. The prince Hindal returned to Agra. According to his will, his body was carried to Cabul, and interred in a holy fepulchre.

What shall we fay of Baber, the wonder of the age in which he His characlived! He mounted a throne at twelve years of age, and, with various turns of fortune, reigned thirty eight. He was a prince of great humanity, and carried his generofity to fuch excefs, that it bordered upon prodigality. With refpect to the first, he fo often pardoned ingratitude and treafon, that he feemed to make a principle of rendering good for evil. He thus difarmed vice, and made the wicked the worfhipers of his virtue.

He was of the fect of the Hanifites, in whole doctrine and tenets His religion! he was perfectly verfed ; yielding more to the evidence of reason, than to the marvellous legends of fuperflitious antiquity. He was not, however, forgetful of that rational worship which is due to the great Creator, nor a defpifer of those laws and ceremonies which are founded on found policy for the benefit of the fuperficial judges of things. He was a mafter in the arts of Poetry, Wri- His genius ting, and Mufic. He wrote his own Commentaries in the Mogul for the fine language, with fuch elegance and propriety, that they are univerfally admired. This work was translated, in the reign of Ackbar, by Chan Chanan, into the Perfian language, and from it we have abridged the preceding hiftory of the life of Baber. The prive ton of auto

His juffice.

To eftablish his reputation for justice and honor, we shall relate one instance out of many. When he was prince of Firghana, a rich caravan of Chitta and China, which was croffing the mountains of Indija, was buried in the snow. He ordered all the goods to be collected, and sent messengers to China to proclaim the accident, and bring the owners, or their heirs, to his court. Upon their arrival, at the end of two years, he entertained them hospitably, and returned them all their goods, not only refusing to accept a present, but even to be reimbursed for his expences.

Addicted to pleafure.

Notwithstanding his great vigor in war, he was much addicted to wine and women, and all the fashionable pleasures of courts. He fometimes used, when he had an inclination to make merry, to fill a fountain with wine, upon which was inferibed a verse to this purpose: "Jovial days! Blooming springs! Old wine, and "young maidens! Enjoy freely, O Baber, for life is not twice "to be enjoyed!" He then would fit down in the midst of his friends, drink freely, and feast his eyes on the daughters of beauty who danced before him.

Whitherfoever he marched, or rode, he always had the road meafured after him. This cuftom obtains with the emperors of Hindoftan to this day. He made a flatute concerning the meafurement of diffances, which has hitherto remained in force. He appointed a hundred tinnabs to one crore, each tinnab being forty guz *.

With refpect to his military character, he feems to have had few that could equal him. He rendered the most dangerous enterprizes eafy, by his undaunted courage and perfeverance, which role above all difficulties, and made him much more the object of admiration in his advertity, than in the height of his profperity. Nor did he forget himfelf in the latter, but always behaved with that moderation and equanimity which characterizes a great foul.

We have already traced Baber's descent from Timur; but as he His geneawas the founder of a great dynafty, it will be proper to follow his genealogy further back into antiquity. The great Zingis Chan, the fon of Piffuka, the fon of Pirna, had four fons of renown, who were all Kings, and the fathers of nations. Their names were Oktai, Zagatay, Zuzi, and Tuli. Though Oktai was not the eldeft fon, yet he was, by his father, appointed his fucceffor, and ruled over the extensive empire of Asia, in the city of Caracorum, the original capital of his father's hereditary dominions. Oktai died, by excefs of wine, in the year fix hundred and thirty nine.

Zagatay, the fecond fon of Zingis, poffeffed the kingdoms of The family Maverulnere, Tirkeftân, Balich, and Buduchshan, in fubordination Tamerlane. to his brother Oktai. Kirachar Nevian, who was the fifth anceftor of Timur, was one of his nobles, and, at length, captain general of all his forces. The genealogy of Kirrachar runs thus : Timur, the fon of Jiraga, the fon of Birkit, the fon of Alingar, the fon of Abil, the fon of Kirrachar, the fon of Sagungi, the fon of Ibumgi Berlafs, the fon of Katchuli, the fon of Jumnai, the fon of Bafinker, the fon of Kidu, who, by the mother's fide, was descended from Basinger, a princess, from whom Zingis derived his pedigree. HE Prince HUMAIOON, by the title of Nafir ul Dien Ma- A. D. 1530. hommed, immediately after the death of Baber, mounted the throne of his father, in India. He was a great afronomer, and took much delight in judicial aftrology. He fitted up feven houses of entertainment, and named them after the feven planets. In each he gave public audience, according to the ruling planet of the day, ordering all the furniture, paintings, and also the dreffes of those who waited upon him, to bear fomething that was an emblem of the tutelar flar of the houfe. He even endeavoured to fuit the people, who came to pay their refpects, to the supposed influence of the planet, which prefided over the time of their attendance. In the houfe of the Moon met foreign embaffadors, travellers, and poets. Military men attended him in the houfe of Brifput *, and judges, lawgivers, and fecretaries, were received in that of the Recorder of Heaven †.

But the urgency of important affairs did not permit Humaioon to follow long these innocent whims. Such only fuited the days of peace, when the mind might enjoy her harmlefs follies. He fcarcely had afcended the throne, when his brother, Camiran, who was then in Cabul, formed a defign of making himfelf master of Punjab. To conceal his intentions, he gave out, that he was going into Hindoftan, to congratulate Humaioon upon his acceffion. The king being, however, apprized of Camiran's views, by his behavior in those countries through which he paffed, and being extremely unwilling to make war upon his brother, confented to let him govern the provinces from the most fouthern branch of the Indus to Persia, holding them of the empire. This effectually stopped the progress of Camiran. The king, in the mean time, conferred the government of Mewat upon Hindal, his brother, and appointed his relation Askari to that of Simbol, the other provinces being left in the possibility of the former states.

Befieges Callinger. Humaioon, in the year nine hundred and thirty eight, led an army against the firong fortress of Callinger, and invested the place. While the king carried on the fiege, Mahmood, the fon of the emperor Secunder Lodi, in conjunction with Bein the Afgan, took possession of Jionpoor, and kindled the flames of war in the eastern provinces. Humaioon, having received intelligence of these commotions, decamped from before Callinger, marched to Jionpoor, in a pitched battle overthrew the Afghans, and reinflated Juneid Birlass in his former government of that province.

Demands possession of Chinar. The emperor, after this fignal victory, returned to Agra, and beflowed honorary dreffes upon above twelve thoufand of his courtiers. He, in the mean time, difpatched a herald to Shere Chan, and demanded poffeffion of the fortrefs of Chinâr *, which being refufed, Humaioon marched his army that way. When the King lay before Chinâr, he was informed, that Bahadur, King of Guzerat, had turned towards him the points of his fpears. This obliged him to patch up a kind of a peace with Shere, and to return towards Agra. Cuttub, the fon of Shere, whom the emperor had taken as an hoftage, found means, on the way, to make his efcape, and to return to his father at Chinâr.

Mahommed Zeman of the race of Timur, the grandfon of Huffein afpired to the throne, and was fupported in his pretenfions by the omrahs of Chigittai. The plot was discovered, and the leader of the confpiracy pardoned : But Humaioon finding him, a fecond time, meditating treafonable practices, he ordered him to be confined in the fortrefs of Biana. Orders were given to put out the eyes of Mahummud Sultan and Nuferit Mirza, for being the principal abettors of the prince's ambitious defigns; but the perfon to whom it was intrufted to inflict this punishment, faved the eyes of the former, while the latter found means to escape to Guzerat. Sultan, by the aid of his fons-Ali Mirza and Shaw Mirza, who formed a party, was carried away to Kinnoge, where he was joined by about fix thousand. Moguls, Afghans, and Rajaputs.

Humaioon fent to Bahadur, under whofe dominion was the city Rebellion at of Kinnoge, and commanded him to deliver up Mahommed, but he rejected the orders in an infolent manner, which obliged the emperor to march against him. Bahadur king of Guzerat had, about this time, refolved to wreft the fort of Chitor from the Rana. Rana threw himfelf under the protection of Humaioon; but the emperor, for what reafon is not known, having advanced as far as Gualier, encamped there for two months, and returned, without effecting any thing, to Agra. Rana, defpairing of relief, fent a crown, and a confiderable fum of money, to Bahadur, which induced him to raife the fiege.

Bahadur, whofe affairs were now in a very profperous fituation; Bahadur by the reduction of Mendu, and other places, began to fhew his contempt of Humaicon, by advancing the confpirator Mahommed to great honors. This preffing danger awakened the king from his lethargy. He immediately fent his brother, the prince Hindal, with a force, to oppose Tatar. When the armies approached one another, there was fo great a defertion from Tatar's troops, that, in the fpace of ten days, ten thoufand horfe fcarce remained to him. Bahadur ma ches againft Chitor.

Bahadur, in the year nine hundred and forty, marched, a fecond time, towards Chitor; and, in the mean time, Humaioon ordered a fort to be built in Delhi, on the banks of the Jumna, which he called Panna. He, foon after, marched towards Saringpoor, which then held of Bahadur, as King of Guzerat, and wrote to him a punning couplet, unworthy of the dignity and majefly of a king. Chitor, in the Persian language, fignifies, in what manner; and upon this was founded the miferable witticifm contained in the verfes. The words were, " O thou plunderer of the city of Chi-" tor ! in what manner canft thou conquer the idolaters ? For when " thou wouldft with to conquer Chitor; thou know'ft not in what " manner the king comes to conquer thee." Bahadur anfwered Humaioon in his own firain, and in the following words : " I, " who am the plunderer of Chitor, will conquer the idolaters sample of to 13 an ashing of them will of illes and the by Bahadur, after fending the above billet to Humaioon, called a Calls a councouncil of war. It was the open opinion of the majority, that as Humaioon had all his force with him, it were better to raife the fiege, and march against him, and thus to take up the war by the roots. Others urged, that Humaioon was fo rigid in his religious principles, that he would not diffurb them in their war with idolaters ; that therefore it was most adviseable to finish the fiege, which was now far advanced, and afterwards to think of other matters. Bahadur himfelf favoured the latter opinion. The fiege was accordingly continued; and Humaioon, piquing himfelf upon his religious principles, continued loitering at Saringpoor, till Bahadur had taken the fort. Bahadur, in the year nine hundred and forty one, marched with great expedition against Humaioon, who, hearing of his approach, marched forward to meet him. The two armies appeared in front of each other, near Munfoor. Bahadur, who had collected a great train of artillery, by advice of his engineer, Rumi Chan, entrenched his army, and placed his cannon in redoubts, in his front. This prevented Humaioon from rifquing an attack, and both armies continued in fight of one another for the fpace of two months. Daily fkirmishes were, in the mean time, fought, with various fuccefs.

Humaioon, finding that he could not draw Bahadur out of his trenches, employed all his attention to cut off his fupplies. He ordered his horfe, in fucceffive bodies of five or fix thousand, to fcour the rear of the enemy, by which means famine began foon Cowardice and flight of Bahadur. Bahadur, inftead of making one brave effort to relieve himfelf, permitted bafe fear and defpair to feize upon him; and, with only five friends, left his camp in the night, and fled towards Mindu. This was no fooner known, than the flight became general; the chiefs difperfing themfelves, with their adherents. Humaioon, in the morning, ordered the purfuit to commence, which was continued, as far as Mindu, with great flaughter of the unfortunate wretches, who had neither the power to cfcape, nor the means to defend themfelves. Bahadur threw himfelf into Mindu, and the place was clofely invefted.

Mindu taken by furprize. In a few days, three hundred Moguls fealed the walls of Mindu, in the night; and though the garriion confifted of many thoufands, fuch was their panic, that they all betook themfelves to flight. Bahadur efcaped to Chapanier, which was then the capital of Guzerat, while Sidder Chan, his captain general, who was dangeroully wounded, not able to proceed farther, fhut himfelf up in the fort of Sunkar, where, being befieged, he capitulated the fecond day, and was, on account of his excellent character, received into great favor. Sidder, during the purfuit, faved Bahadur, when almost taken by Humaioon, by throwing himfelf in between the kings, till his master had an opportunity of making his efcape. But he himfelf was attacked with fuch violence by Humaioon, in perfon, that, after receiving many wounds, he got off with great difficulty.

The king, giving up the city of Chapanier to plunder, and committing the fiege of the citadel, which still held out, to Dowlat Birlafs, continued to purfue Bahadur. The unfortunate Bahadur, hearing of his approach, fled to Cambait, but Humaioon purfuing him thither, he retired to the island of Deo, Humaioon arriving in Cambait the very evening of the fame day in which Bahadur forfook it.

Humaioon remained a few days in this place, but hearing that Returns to Bahadur's wealth was mostly in the citadel of Chapanier, he returned to carry on that fiege. Achtiar, who commanded in the place, defended it with great bravery. But though he had fome years provision in the fort, he was covetous of more, and took in daily supplies by a certain part of the citadel, which was covered by a thick wood. The king, one day, reconnoitring the place, obferved the proceedings of Achtiar, with regard to the provisions. He immediately feized upon a party of country people who carried the fupplies through the woods. He perfuaded, or rather commanded them, to carry him, in difguife, to the place. They had admittance. The king made the necessary remarks, returned to his camp, and the fame night ordered a parcel of iron. fpikes to be made.

He himfelf, with three hundred felect men, went to the place, while feigned attacks were made upon every other quarter of the fort. As the access to this part of the fortress was extremely difficult, the attention of the enemy was entirely drawn towards the different affaults. This furnished the king with an opportunity of fixing his iron fpikes in the wall, by which means thirty-nine officers mounted, and the king himfelf made the fortieth. The great firength of this place, the numerous garrifon, and the boldnefs of the attempt by which it fell, rendered this action of the king, equal, in the opinion of all mankind, to any thing of the like nature recorded in hiftory. Here the treasure of Guzerat, which had been collected in the course of many years, was distributed among the troops. Humaioon, having marched into the eaftern provinces, invefted Chinar, and reduced it, after a fiege of fix months. Having then gained the paffes, he entered Bengal. Shere, in the mean time, carried away the treafure of the princes of Gour and Bengal, whom he had reduced, and fled to the mountains of Jarcund. When they had reached the environs of that city, the jealoufy, which the brothers naturally entertained of each other, the eyes of both being turned towards the throne, broke out into open war. Hindal, being deferted by many of his party, fled to Alwir, with five thousand horse, and three hundred elephants; and Camiran, entering Agra, affumed all the imperial enfigns.

Humaioon endeavoured, by every poffible argument with his brothers, to bring about a coalition of interefts against Shere, telling them, that their family quarrels would certainly, in the end, lofe them that mighty empire, which had coft their father fo much pains to conquer, and involve the family of Timur in one common ruin; that it was, therefore, adviseable to join against the common enemy, and afterwards divide the empire amongst themfelves. These arguments had no weight with his brothers, who were fo blinded with ambition, that they were determined rather to lofe all, than be contented with a part. They vainly hoping that after Shere had defeated Humaioon, they fhould be able to fubdue Shere; and each had the folly to fuppofe, that he would be able to exclude the other, and fo reign alone.

At this juncture, Shere fent the learned Chelili, a dervish of great reputation, to Humaioon, to treat about a peace, which the king accepted, with gladnefs, upon the following conditions : That Shere should content himself with Bengal and Behar, which he was to hold in the king's name, paying a fmall acknowledgment.

This was what the perfidious Shere aimed at by the peace. He accordingly, next morning, furprized the emperor's camp, before day-break, and totally defeated him. As the bridge of boats, which the king had been preparing, was not finifhed, there was no way of efcape left, but by plunging into the river ; all the boats being feized by a party of the enemy, who had turned the rear of the emperor's army. Humaioon, his nobles, and a great part of his army, were forced into the ftream, where eight thoufand Moguls, exclusive of Hindoos, were drowned, among whom was the prince, Mahommed Zeman. This terrible overthrow happened to Humaioon in the year nine hundred and forty-fix.

The king, by the affiftance of a waterman, having with great difficulty fwam acrofs the river, with a few who had furvived the flaughter of this dreadful day, fled to Agra. Prince Camiran hearing of this defeat, haftened from Agra to Alwir, to confult with his brother Hindal. Finding that now the Afghans were likely to prevail, they were afhamed of their behavior to their brother, and, when it was too late, thought proper to fupport him. In the mean time, all the mogul omrahs who were difperfed in the provinces, feeing that the power of their nation had fuftained fuch a violent flock, found it alfo neceffary to unite their ftrength. interefts, brought all their councils to nothing, and proposed to return to Lahore, to which refolution he was very much infligated by the famous Chaja Callan. Humaioon ufed every argument to prevent his departure; but the ambitious Camiran was determined to be every thing himfelf, or to give no affiftance to his brother.

These impolitic disputes had lasted fix months, when Camiran was feized with a falfe appetite, which he too much indulged, and king. confequently became afflicted with a lientery, which he imputed to poifon given him by his brothers. He immediately fet out for Lahore, leaving a thousand horse with Secunder, one of his chiefs, under pretence of affifting his unfortunate brother. The inhabitants of Agra were greatly difcouraged at Camiran's departure, fo that many of them, fearing the islue of the war, accompanied him. Hyder, one of the pofterity of Timur, difgufted with this behavior, flaid behind, and joined Humaioon, to whom. he was of great fervice.

Shere, who had remained quiet during thefe difputes, now advanced with an army to the banks of the Gang, and detaching his fon Cuttub over the river, poffeffed himfelf of the adjacent provinces. Humaioon having received intelligence of thefe motions, ordered Huffein the Ufbeck, in conjunction with Eadgar and Secunder, against him, with a great army. They met the enemy near Calpie, where an obflinate engagement happened, in which victory declaring for the moguls, Cuttub, with a great part of his army, was cut off, and his head fent to Agra. In the mean time, Mahommed Mirza, and his fons, who were remarkable for their treachery and ingratitude, fled to the enemy, with all their adherents, drawing many more after them, which again plunged the king into diftrefs; for his army being difpirited, began to defert by thoufands. To complete his misfortunes, the rainy feafon now commenced, and his camp was quite overflowed with water, infomuch that the tents feemed afloat. The king therefore refolved to move his camp to higher ground.

and is overthrown. On the tenth of Mohirrim, nine hundred and forty-feven, he put his army in motion. He was attacked by Shere on his march, and defeated with great flaughter. Having unfortunately, as in the former action, the river then close to his rear, the flight turned that way, and fome thousands, to avoid the fwords of the enemy, chose a more ignominious death in the water. A few only escaped with the king over the river, with whom he fled to Agra; the reft fubmitted themselves to the conquerors, or dispersed by various routs.

Shere advances to Agra. Shere, immediately after this victory, advanced towards Agra. The king was forced to retreat to Lahore, and on the firft of Ribbi, the firft of that year, joined the greatest part of his mogul omrahs, who had been disperfed fince the action. Shere still continuing the pursuit, to make the best use of his victory, crossed the river of Jullanpoor, upon which the king, upon the first of Rigib, passed the river of Lahore, and retreated towards Tatta and Bicker, upon the Indus. Camiran, now fensible of his ungenerous and impolitic behavior, was himself obliged to fly towards Cabul, and faw an empire wrested from his family, by the effects of that base envy, envy, which could not behold even a brother's greatness without A. D. 1541. Hig. 948.

Humaioon having croffed the Indus, on his way to Bicker, halted at Lori, and fent an embaffador, with a horfe and drefs to his coufin Huffein, governor of Tatta, to requeft his aid, that he might be able to poffefs himfelf of Guzerat. Huffein feeming to liften to his requeft, detained the king, by various artifices and excufes, for five months, by which means his fmall army, diftreffed for want of pay, daily diminifhed in numbers. The prince Hindal, his brother, in the mean time, left him, and went to Kandahar, being invited thither by the governor of that province. Eadgar Nafir propofed, at the fame time, to quit Humaioon, but the unfortunate king, took great pains to keep him firm to his intereft, giving him the government of Bicker. But he had no fooner taken poffeffion of that place, than he began to ftrengthen himfelf againft his fovereign.

Humaioon, in the mean time, had, with his little army, laid fiege to Sewan for feven months, without effect, when Huffein, defirous of getting the place into his own hands, advanced, with a great force, from Tatta, and furrounding both the garrifon and the beliegers, prevented fupplies from being carried to either. Humaioon's army were foon greatly diffreffed, as well as the garrifon. The king, driven to extremities, requefted Eadgar to join him with what forces he had in Bicker; but this ungrateful man chofe rather to be prevailed upon to join Huffein, who promifed him his daughter, and to fecure him in his government. He immediately deferted the king's intereft, at this dangerous crifis, and Humaioon was obliged to retreat precipitately from before Sewan, towards Bicker. He could not even obtain, in X that VOL. Eadgar fubmits, Notwithstanding this accumulation of misfortunes, Humaioon had firength enough left to firike terror into Eadgar, who, to avoid his refentment, came and made his fubmiffion. The neceffity of the times obtained his pardon; but, in return for Humaioon's elemency, he began to raife fedition among his troops, and privately to draw them over to his own intereft. This treafon being communicated to the king, the traitor, upon being taxed with it, appeared at the head of his troops, in open rebellion. But the principal officers of the rebellious faction refused to attack their king, fo that an action was prevented, when both parties were formed in order of battle. The king being in no condition, at that juncture, to contend with the rebel, thought it high time to provide for his own fafety elfewhere. He therefore marched, by the way of Jaffelmere to Maldeo, then the most potent Hindoo prince in Hindoftan, having before received an invitation from him. But as he was paffing through the territories of Jaffelmere, the prince of that country fent a force to oppofe him. The king defeated them, and paffed on to the boundaries of Maldeo, where he halted, and fent a meffenger to that prince.

Raja Maldeo plots againft Humaioon. But few keep faith with a king, when he is under the cloud of misfortunes. Maldeo, feeing he had nothing to fear from Humaioon, found in his own mind no principle to love him; he therefore refolved, if poffible, to feize the king, and fend him to the ufurper Shere. Humaioon mounted his horfe, at midnight, and fled towards He flies. Amercot, which is about one hundred crores from Tatta. His horfe, on the way, falling down dead with fatigue, he defired Tirdi Beg, one of his chiefs, who was well mounted, to let him have his; but fo ungenerous was this man, and fo low was royalty fallen, that he refused to comply with his fovereign's request. Some ran mad, others fell down dead; nothing was heard but dreadful fcreams and lamentations. To add, if poffible, to this calamity, news arrived of the enemy's near approach. Humaioon ordered all those who could fight to halt, and let the women and baggage move forward. The enemy not making their appearance, the king rode on in front, to fee how it fared with his family. Night, in the mean time, coming on, the rear loft their way, and in the morning were attacked by a party of the enemy. One of the omrahs, who adhered to the king's fortunes, named Ali, with about twenty brave men, refolved to fell his life dear. Having repeated the creed of martyrdom, he rushed upon the enemy, and the first arrow having reached the heart of the chief of the party, the reft were, by the valor of this handful, put to flight. The king's dreadful fituation for want of water.

Marching forward, the next day, from this well, they were more diffreffed than before, there being no water for two days. journey. On the fourth day of their retreat, they fell in with another well, which was fo deep, that the only bucket they had, took a great deal of time in being wound up, and therefore a drum was beat to give notice to the people when the bucket appeared. that they might repair by turns to drink. The unhappy men were fo impatient for the water, that as foon as the first bucket appeared, ten or twelve of them threw themfelves upon it, before it quite reached the brim of the well, by which means the rope broke, and the bucket was loft, and feveral fell headlong after it. When this fatal accident happened, the fcreams and lamentations of all became loud and dreadful. Some lolling out their tongues, rolled themfelves, in agony, on the hot fand ; while others, precipitating themfelves into the well, met with an immediate, and confequently an eafier death. What did not the unhappy king, feel, when he faw this terrible fituation of his few faithful friends! The next day, though they reached a brook, was not lefs fatal than the former. The camels, who had not tafted water for feveral days, now drank fo much, that the greatest part of them died. The people alfo, after drinking, complained of an oppreffion of. the heart, and in about half an hour a great part of them expired.

A few, with the king, after this unheard of diffrefs, reached Amercot. The raja being a humane man, took compafiion on their misfortunes. He fpared nothing that could alleviate their miferies, or express his fidelity to the king.

But a Humaioon mutiny arifing among the troops, they difperfed, fo that nothing ed, fies tocould be effected. Some of the king's own omrahs deferted him, wards Kanand the gallant Ali, one of his principal adherents, was killed im an action in which Humaioon was defeated. The king fled towards Kandahar, and was, on his way, joined by that gallant mogul chief, Byram Chan, from Guzerat. The prince Camiran had, at that time, taken the fortress of Kandahar from his brother. Hindal; and Afhkari governed there by his appointment. Huffein, who governed at Tatta, changing his mind with the increase of Humaioon's misfortunes, wrote to Afhkari, that the king was in the utmost distrefs, and that if he would now favor him, fomeritorious an action could not be forgot. Ashkari, instead of liftening to this requeft, attacked the king when he approached, obliging him to leave behind him his young infant fon, Akbar, and fly himfelf, with the Sultana Mariam, and only twenty-two .

The king, by repeated trials, found that he could place no faith Is received in his brothers. When he arrived upon the frontiers of Seiftan, he was met by Shamlu, who was there governor on the part of Tamasp, king of Persia. He brought Humaioon to the capital of Seiftan, and treated him with the greateft refpect, prefenting him with all the money of which he was poffeffed, and furnishing the Sultana with flaves. The king received just what fupplied his occafions, and returned the reft. He from thence fet out for Herat, and was, in that city, met by the prince Mahommed, the king of Perfia's eldeft fon. HE original name of Shere was Ferid. His father was Huffein, of the Soor tribe of the Afghans of Roh, a mountainous country on the confines of India and Perfia. When Beloli placed his foot on the throne of the Indian empire, the grandfather of Shere, Ibrahim, came to Delhi in quest of military fervice. The original feat of the Afghans was Roh, which, in their language, fignifies a mountainous country. It extended, they fay, in length, from Sewad and Bijore, to the town of Sui in the dominions of Buckuraft, and in breadth, from Huffin to Rabul. This tract, in its fertile vallies, contained many feparate tribes; among the number of thefe was that of Soor, who derive themfelves from the princes of Ghor, whole family held the empire after the extinction of the race of Ghizni. Ibrahim, the grandfather of Shere, arriving at Delhi, engaged Ibrahim arhimfelf in the fervice of an omrah of the court of Beloli. When the empire fell to Secunder, the fon of Beloli, the noble Jemmal, a chief of high renown, was appointed fuba of Jionpoor, and. he took Huffein, the fon of Ibrahim, in his retinue. He found him a youth of parts, and favored him fo much, that, in a thort time, he gave him the diffricts of Schfaram and Tanda, in jagier, for which he was to maintain five hundred horfe. Ferid flies from his father's house. Huffein had no great love for his wife, and he therefore neglected her fons. Ferid, upon this, left his father's houfe, and enlifted himfelf a foldier in the fervice of Jemmal, the governor of Jionpoor. Huffein wrote to Jemmal upon this occafion, requefting him to fend back his fon, that he might be educated. But all that Jemmal could fay had no effect upon Ferid. Jionpoor, he faid, was a better place for inftruction than Schfaram; and he affirmed that he would attend to letters of his own accord. This he did to fo much purpofe, that he foon could repeat the works of the celebrated poet Sadi, and was, befides, a proficient in all the learning of the country. He, however, employed moft of his time in hiftory and poetry, being fupported by the liberality of Jemmal.

Is reconciled with his father, After three or four years had elapfed, Huffein came to Jionpoor, and, by the mediation of friends, the father and fon were reconciled. Huffein gave Ferid the charge of his effate, and remained himfelf at Jionpoor. Ferid, when he took leave of his father, faid, " That the ftability of government depended on juf-" tice, and that it would be his greateft care not to violate it, " either by opprefing the weak, or permitting the ftrong to in-" fringe the laws with impunity." When he arrived at his jagier, he actually put this refolution in practice, by rendering juffice to the poor, and reducing to order fuch of his zemindars as oppofed his authority. He, by this means, had his revenues punctually paid, and his country well cultivated. His reputation grew apace ; for all his actions difcovered uncommon genius and refolution.

Huffein coming to visit his estate, was extremely well pleased A.D. 1542. with the management of his fon, and therefore continued him in his office. But the father had a favorite flave by whom he had three fons, Soliman, Ahmed, and Mudda, and the old man was extremely fond of her. She told him, that now her fon Soliman was grown up, and that he ought to provide for him. She, day after day, continued to teaze Huffein for the fuperintendency of the pergunnahs for Soliman. This gave the old omrah great concern, knowing the fuperior abilities of Ferid. The fon, hearing that the domeftic peace of his father was deftroyed, by the importunities of his favorite, made a voluntary refignation of his truft, which was accordingly conferred upon Soliman.

Ferid, and his brother Nizam, fet out immediately for Agra, and entered into the fervice of Dowlat, one of the principal omrahs of the emperor Ibrahim. Ferid, by his good behavior, foon infinuated himfelf into his master's affection. Dowlat, one day, defired him to tell him what he was most defirous to obtain, and that he would use his interest with the king in his favor. Ferid replied, That his father was now in his dotage, and wholly guided by an artful miftrefs, who had deprived both himfelf and his brother of their patrimonial inheritance, and had procured their eftate for her own fpurious offspring. That if Dowlat would, therefore, by his intereft at court, procure the royal grant of the eftate in his name, he would promife to provide for his father, and maintain five hundred good horfe for the fervice of the empire. Dowlat accordingly preferred this requeft to the emperor Ibrahim, who replied, That he must be a bad man indeed, who reviled and undermined the interest of his own father. Dowlat retired in filence, and informed Ferid of the anfwer he had received, but comforted him with a promife of taking another opportunity VOL. II. Y

His brother Soliman complains of him to Mahommed Soor,

Soliman, upon the arrival of his brothers, evacuating the country, went off to Mahommed, one of the Afghan family of Soors. and his relation, who held the diffrict of Chond, and kept up a force of fifteen hundred horfe, and complained of the behavior of Ferid. Mahommed told him, that Baber, intending to invade Hindoftan, a war between him and the Emperor Ibrahim was unavoidable. That, therefore, if he fhould accompany him when called to the imperial army, he would endeavor to get him redrefs. Soliman was too impatient to wait fo long in fufpenfe. Mahommed, therefore, fent a perfon to Ferîd, to treat about a reconciliation. Ferîd replied, That he was willing to give him a proper fhare of his father's inheritance, but that he must be excused from parting with any of his power; repeating, at the fame time, the old adage, That two fwords could never reft in one fcabbard. Soliman could not be fatisfied with a fhare of the government, and therefore nothing was fettled between the brothers. This irritated Mahommed fo much, that he refolved to compel Ferid to the measures which he himself had proposed. Ferid being informed of this refolution, began to provide for his own fecurity; but news arriving of the Emperor Ibrahim's defeat and death, the whole country was thrown into confusion.

He obtains the title of Shere Chan. Ferid refolved not to lie idle in the midft of the troubles which enfued. He joined Pâr Chan, the fon of Diria Lohani, who had fubdued Behar, and affumed the royal dignity, under the name of Mahommed, or Mahmood. As that monarch was one day on a hunting party, he roufed an enormous tiger; which Ferid immediately immediately attacked and killed with one blow of his fabre. For this bold action, which was done in Mahmood's prefence, he was honored with the title of Shere Chan *. Shere role gradually to great influence and favor, in Mahmood's fervice. He was even appointed tutor to his fon, Jellâl. He, in the mean time, requefted permiffion to go to his effate, but he was detained there by bufinels, till his leave of abfence expired. Mahmood, diffatisfied with this behavior, reproached him, one day in public, with breach of promife; and Mahommed, of the family of Soor, being prefent, took that opportunity of accufing him of treafonable defigns, and with favoring the intereft of Mahmood, the fon of the Emperor Secunder. The Sultan was, by this means, fo incenfed against him, that he intimated, at the time, a defign to deprive him of his eftate, and to confer it upon his brother Soliman, as a just punishment for his offence, and the only thing that could bring him to a proper fenfe of his duty.

Mahmood, however, having a great effeem for Shere, againft whom nothing was yet proved, laid afide the violent measure to which he was infligated by Mahommed. He, at the fame time, by way of alarming him, gave orders to his accufer to inquire into his father's effate, and make an equal division of it among all the brothers. Mahommed, glad of this order, fent one of his fervants to Shere to acquaint him, that his brothers, according to the King's commands, were to have their proportionable dividends of the effate which he had hitherto fo unjuftly with-held from them. Shere returned for answer, that Mahommed was very much missing in this matter. That there were no hereditary effates in India, among Mahommedans, for that all lands belonged to the Shere attacked.

When the meffenger returned with this anfwer to Mahommed, who was then at Chond, he was enraged at fo flat a denial, and raifing all his forces, fent them againft Shere, under the command of Shadi, his adopted flave, accompanied by Shere's brothers, Soliman and Ahmed. Shadi's orders were to take pofferfion of the country, and to leave a force with Soliman, to protect him in the eftate. This refolution being quickly taken, Shere had not time to collect his people; but, upon the first alarm, he wrote to one Malleck, his deputy in the diffrict of Chawafspoor Tandah, to harrafs the enemy with what troops he had, but to avoid an action till he joined him in perfon. But Malleck, defirous to diffinguish himfelf, gave them battle, and loft his life and the victory. This unexpected difafter weakened Shere fo much, that he was in no condition to oppofe Mahommed; he therefore evacuated the country, and fled to Juneid Birlafs, governor of Kurrah and Maneckpoor, on the part of the Emperor Baber. He made Birlafs a handfome prefent, was taken into favor, and obtained a body of troops to recover his country. With these he defeated Mahommed, who fied to the mountains of Rhotas, fo that he not only poffeffed himfelf of his own country, but added feveral other diffricts to his jagier, which he now held of the Mogul Emperor, Baber. Having rewarded the Moguls who had affifted him, he permitted them to return to their master. He, at the same time, levied troops, and was joined by his former friends, who had fled to the hills, which rendered him very formidable in those parts.

Defeats Mahommed.

Shere

Shere having thus eftablished himfelf in his eftate, performed an act of generofity, which, if it was not intended to deceive the world, does him much honor. He recalled his enemy Mahommed, who had fled, and put him in poffeffion of his former eftate. This generous treatment converted his greatest enemy into one of hisbest friends. Shere having fettled his affairs, left his brother Nizam in charge of his country, and paid a visit to his benefactor Juneid Birlas, at Kurrah. Birlass was then going to Agra, and Shere refolved to accompany him thither. He was, upon this occasion, introduced to the Emperor Baber, and attended that prince in his expedition to Chinderi.

After Shere had flaid fome time in the Mogul camp, and observed their manners and policy, he, one day, told a friend, that he thought it would be an eafy matter to drive those foreigners out of Hindoftan. His friend afked him, what reafon he had to think fo? Shere replied, " That the King himfelf, though a man of great " parts, was but very little acquainted with the policy of Hin-" doftan ; and that the minifler, who held the reins of govern-" ment, would be too much biaffed in favor of his own intereft, " to mind that of the public. That therefore if the Patans, who " were now at enmity among themfelves, could be brought to " mutual concord, the work was compleated ; and fhould fortune " ever favor him, he imagined himfelf equal to the tafk, however " difficult it might, at prefent, appear." His friend burft out into a loud laugh, and began to ridicule this vain opinion. Shere, a few days after, had, at the King's table, fome folid difhes fet before him, with only a fpoon to eat them. He called for a knife, but the fervants had orders not to fupply him with one. Shere, not to lofe his dinner, drew his dagger, without ceremony, and cutting up his meat, made a hearty meal, without minding

He privately withdraws.

Shere perceiving, by thefe words, that the King had been informed of his private difcourfe to his friend, fled the camp that night, and went to his own eftate. He wrote from thence to his benefactor Juneid Birlafs, that as Mahommed had prevailed on Mahmood, King of Behar, to fend troops againft his jagier, he had in hafte left the King's camp, without waiting upon him for leave. He, by this means, amufed Juneid Birlafs, prevented his chaftifing him, and at the fame time made up matters with Mahmood, with whom he became a greater favorite than before.

Shere manages the government of Behar. Mahmood of Behar dying a fhort time after, was fucceeded by his fon Jellal, a minor. The young prince's mother, the Sultana Dudu, acted as regent, and conferred the principal offices in the government upon Shere. The Sultana dying foon after, the administration fell wholly into the hands of Shere. Allum, the governor of Hadgipoor, on the part of Mahmood, King of Bengal, being guilty of fome mifdemeanor, threw himfelf under Shere's protection. Mahmood, to revenge this infult, ordered Cuttub, governor of Mongier, with a great force, againft Behar. As the forces of Behar were inconfiderable, in comparifon of those of Bengal, Shere made many overtures for accommodating differences, but to no effect. Finding no arguments could prevail but the fword, he resolved to ftand the unequal encounter, in which his fuperior fkill and bravery acquired him a complete victory. Cuttub was was flain, and all his treasure, elephants, and camp equipage taken, which greatly advanced the political defigns of Shere.

After this victory, the Patan tribe of Lohani, the coufins of Tellâl, the young King of Behâr, envying the fortune of Shere, formed a confpiracy to take away his life. Shere difcovered the plot, taxed Jellal with it, who was privy to the confpiracy, being very jealous of the great influence of his minister. He told, one this occasion, to the young prince, that there was no necessity of taking fuch a bafe method of getting quit of his fervant, for that if he fhould but once fignify his inclination, Shere was ready to refign that government, which he lately fo fuccefsfully protected. The prince, either fulpecting his funcerity, or being equally fulpicious of the other omrahs, would, by no means, confent to hisv refignation. This fo much difgusted the confpirators, that they took every poffible meafure to make a breach between the prince and his minifter. Shere, finding that he had no fecurity, but in: maintaining his power, by the unlimited use he made of it, juftly excited the prince's jealoufy to fuch a pitch, that, one night, accompanied by his omrahs, he fled to Mahmood, of Bengal, and implored his aid to expel Shere, who had usurped his throne.

Mahmood, joining his compation for the young prince, to his Mahmood of perfonal hatred to Shere, fent Ibrahim, the fon of that Cuttub tacks Shere. whom Shere had formerly defeated, with a confiderable army against the usurper. The Bengalians befieged Shere in a mud fort, for a long time, without fuccefs; fo that Ibrahim was obliged to fend home for fuccours. Shere, being informed of this circumstance, came out, offered battle, and, by means of a common stratagem, ordering his troops to fly at the first onfet, to draw the enemy into an ambufh, defeated them, and took all their guns and elephants-

Shere, by this victory, became lord of all Behar, and grew daily more and more formidable. One Taji was, at this time, governor of the ftrong fort of Chinar, which he had held for himfelf ever fince the death of Ibrahim Lodi, Emperor of Hindoftan. His wife Ladi Malleki, who was barren, yet for whom he had a very great affection, being envied by his other wives, by whom he had children, they inftigated their fons to make away with her. But one of the fons, who had undertaken the murder, miffed his blow, and only inflicted a flight wound. Taji, alarmed by her cries, came to her affiftance, and drew his fword to kill his fon. The fon, feeing no means to efcape, affaulted his father, and flew him. The fons of Taji were yet too young to be entrufted with the government, and Ladi Malleki drew the reins into her own hands, by her address among the chiefs and zemindars. Shere, informed of these transactions, set a treaty of marriage on foot with Ladi Malleki, which was foon concluded. Shere feized upon Chinar and the dependant diffricts, which was a great acquifition to his power, there being a confiderable treafure in the place.

Much about this time, Mahmood, the fon of the Emperor Secunder Lodi, having taken protection with Rana Sinka, by his affiftance, and that of Haffen of Mewat, advanced againft the Emperor Baber, and was defeated, as we have already feen, at Janveh. Mahmood, flying to Chitor, was from thence invited by the chiefs of the tribe of Lodi, who were gathered together at Patna, and by them proclaimed King. He made himfelf foon mafter of all Behar. Shere perceiving that he could not draw the omrahs over from Mahmood's intereft, and that he had not fufficient cient force to oppose him, fubmitted to his authority, and, by that means, faved a part of Behar, which the Sultan permitted him to retain. Mahmood told him, at the fame time, that if he fhould effectually affift him in recovering Jionpoor from the Moguls, he would return Behar to him; and a contract to that effect was drawn up and executed between them.

Shere, fome time after, obtained leave to return to Schffaram, Shere obtains to levy troops, and Mahmood marching, with an army, against his jagier. the Moguls, fent him orders to join. But as Shere delayed for fome time, the Sultan, perfuaded by his omrahs that he was playing a loofe game, marched his army through Shere's effate, on his way to Jionpoor. Shere came out to meet him, had an elegant . entertainment provided for his reception, and then marched with him to Jionpoor. The troops of the Emperor Humaioon evacuated the province upon their approach, fo that the Afghans took poffeffion of the country as far as Lucknore.

Humaioon lay, at this time, before Callinger, and having heard of the progress of the Afghans, he marched against them. Mahmood having, on this occafion, given a fuperior command to Bein Baezîd, Shere, who thought himfelf ill-ufed, betrayed his mafter, and wrote a private letter, the night before the action, to Hindoo Beg, one of the Mogul generals, acquainting him, "That he " efteemed himfelf a fervant of Baber's family, to whom he owed " his advancement, and that he would be the caufe of defeating " the Afghans next day." He drew off his troops in the action, which occafioned Mahmood's defeat, for which fervice he was greatly favored by Humaioon. Mahmood, after this defeat, retreated to Patna, retired from the world, and, in the year nine hundred and forty nine, died in Oriffa.

Refufes to give up Chinâr to Humaioon.

Humaioon, after this victory, returned to Agra, and fent the noble Hindoo Beg to Shere, to take polleffion of the fort of Chinar. Shere excufed himfelf, and obliged Hindoo Beg to retreat. Humaioon returned immediately with his whole army to beliege Chinar, and, having invefted it, he received a letter from Shere, acquainting him, " That he efteemed himfelf one of the fervants " of the houfe of Baber, from whom he first obtained a govern-" ment; and that he had expressed his fidelity, by being the " occafion of the late victory. That, therefore, if the King would " permit him to retain the government of the fort, he was willing " to pay him the proper revenues of the lands which he held, and " would fend his fon, Cuttub, with five hundred horfe, to be main-" tained at his own expence, in the emperor's fervice." As at this juncture the affairs of Guzerat, by the conquefts of Bahadur, required the King's prefence, and confidering alfo the ftrength of Chinar, Humaioon confented to thefe terms, and, accordingly, being joined by Cuttub, the fon of Shere, with five hundred horfe, he marched towards Bahadur. The King, however, had fcareely reached Guzerat, when Guttub deferted with his horfe, and returned to his father. Shere immediately raifed what forces he could, and reduced Behar. Not fatisfied with his fuccefs, he purfued his fortune, and penetrated into the heart of Bengal, having fought with the omrahs of that country feveral sharp battles, before he could make himself master of the passes, which were defended a whole month,

Mahmood of Bengal flut himfelf up in Gour, the capital, which Shere for a long time befieged. One of the zemindars of Behar having raifed a diffurbance, he left Chawaís to carry on the fiege, and returned himfelf to Behar. Provisions becoming at length very fearce in Gour, Mahmood fled in a boat to Hadjipoor;

and

und Shere, having fettled affairs in Behar, returned and purfued him. Mahmood being neceffitated to give battle, was defeated, and being wounded in the engagement, fled his kingdom, which immediately fell into the hands of the conqueror.

Humaioon, returning from his expedition to Guzerat, thought it neceffary to put a ftop to the rifing power of Shere. He for that purpose turned towards the reduction of Chinar. Jellal, a fon of Shere, who commanded there, left the defence of the place to Ghazi, of the Soor tribe of Afghans, and retired to the hills of Bercundah, from whence he very much annoyed the befiegers. The fiege had been carried on fix months, when Rumi Chan, who commanded the King's artillery, by fome kind of a floating battery, which he fent down the river close to the wall, reduced the place. Humaioon left two hundred foldiers in garrifon there, and marched towards Bengal. Mahmood, who, as we have already observed, was wounded in the action with Shere, threw himfelf under the protection of Humaioon. When the King had advanced to the pafs of Gurhi, which is the frontier of Bengal, he found that Shere had fent his fon Jellal, Chawafs, and a good detachment, to guard that defile. The King fent Kulli, and fome other chiefs, to diflodge them ; but they were repulfed in feveral attacks. Being, however, fupported by more troops, and the whole army appearing in fight, a fuccefsful affault was made, and the Moguls became mafters of the pais. Jellal fled to his father Shere at Gour, who, being in no condition to engage fo fuperior a force, evacuated that capital, carried off all his wealth to the mountains of Jarcund, and begun to project a fcheme for poffeffing himfelf of Rhotas, that he might there lodge his family and wealth in fecurity.

To take Rhotas by open force was an impoffible attempt. It was therefore neceffary to devife fome ftratagem, by which fuccefs might be hoped. Shere, for this purpofe, fent a meffage to Raja Berkis, who was in posseffion of this impregnable fortrefs, and told him, " That as he himfelf was going to attempt the recovery of Bengal, he hoped, from their former friendship, that he would permit him to fend his family and treasure into the place, with a few attendants." Berkis at first rejected this request, but Shere fent an artful embaffador to him, a fecond time, with fome handfome prefents, acquainting him, " That it was only for his women and treasure he requested his princely protection : That should he be fortunate enough to conquer Bengal, he would make proper acknowledgements for the favor on his return; but if he should lofe his life in the conteft, he rather chofe that his family and wealth fhould fall into the hands of Berkis, than into those of the Moguls, his inveterate enemies." Berkis, fuffering himfelf to be deluded by his avarice, determined, when once in poffeffion of the treasure, to keep it, and therefore confented to Shere's request. The Afghan having provided covered chairs *, filled them all, except two or three, which were to go first, with armed men and arms. He, at the fame time, filled five hundred money bags with leaden bullets, and appointed fome of his best foldiers to carry them, in the difguife of flaves, with flicks in their hands, who were deflined in appearance to help to carry the treafure up the mountain. The men, who carried the clofe chairs, were difguifed in the fame manner. This train accordingly fet out, and the first and fecond chair being examined at the gate, were found to contain only old women, fo further examination was neglected. The raja was, in the mean time, bufy in counting the bags, which he now reckoned part of his own fortune. When the chairs had

The porters used their staves, till they supplied themfelves with arms from the chairs. They eafily maftered the garrifon, who were off their guard, and admitted Shere, who was encamped at a fmall diftance. Berkis himfelf, with a few followers, found means to escape into the woods, by a private paffage behind the fort.

Thus fell one of the most impregnable fortreffes in the world into the hands of Shere, together with much treasure, which had been accumulating there for ages. The merit of the invention of this ftratagem is not due to Shere. The fort of Afere, in the Decan, was, long before, taken in the fame manner by Nafir Faroki, the imperial governor of Chandez.

Rhotas is built upon the level top of a mountain; the only en- Descriptional trance to it is a very narrow road, through a fteep afcent of two miles, from the foot of the hill to the gates, which are three in number, one above another, defended by guns and rolling-ftones. The fquare contents of the fortified table land, on the top of the mountain, is more than ten miles. In this fpace are contained towns, villages, and corn fields, and water is found a few feet from the furface. On one fide runs the river Sone, under an immense precipice, and another river, in the same manner, passes close to the other fide, and both meeting a little below, form the hill into a triangular peninfula. There is a very deep valley on the third fide, full of impervious woods, which fpread all over the mountains, and render access that way next to impossible.

Shere had now a fecure retreat for his family, and his friends Shere began to acquire fresh spirits by this piece of success. Humaioon, in the mean time, fpent three months in luxurious pleafures, in Gour, the capital of Bengal. He there received advices that his brother prince Hindal, had revolted in his governments of Agra and Mewat; that he had put to death Shech Phoul, the only man of confequence, who would not break his allegiance to the emperor, and coined money in his own name. Humaioon therefore left Kulli, with five thoufand horfe, in Gour, and returned towards Agra.

Overthrows Humaioon.

By the exceffive rains and bad roads, the king's cavalry and beafts of burthen perifhed in great numbers, on his march, through fatigue and want of forage. Shere, who had now raifed a numerous army, entrenched himfelf on the banks of the Joffa, in a place by which the king muft of neceffity pafs, and, by treachery, defeated him with great flaughter, in the manner which we have already related. Shere did not immediately pufh forward to the capital. Anxious to leave no enemy behind him, he returned to Bengal, engaged Kulli in feveral battles, defeated him, and, at length, cut him and his army to pieces.

Affumes the imperial title.

Shere, immediately after the reduction of Bengal, affumed the imperial title of Shaw, flruck the coin, and read the chutba, in his own name. He marched, the next year, with a great army, towards Agra. The unfortunate Humaioon was, by this time, deferted by his brother the prince Camiran, and hated by his Mogul omrahs, on account of his attention to his Turkuman mercenaries. He, however, croffed the river with one hundred thoufand horfe, and met Shere, who had but fifty thoufand. Shere, as we have already mentioned, defeated Humaioon, and purfued him to Agra, Lahore, and Chofhâb; from which place the king retreated towards the Indus.

In his progrefs, obferving a hill, among the mountains of Balnat, proper for a fortrefs, he ordered one to be built, which he named Rhotas. Chawafs Chan, his faithful fervant, to whofe bravery and conduct he owned himfelf greatly indebted for his fortune, was now made captain general, with a penfion of a tenth of the royal revenue.

Having left the captain general, and Hybut Neazi, with a Reduces the great army, in the north weft, the emperor Shere returned to- gal. wards Agra. He was in that city informed, that Chizer, whom he had left in the government of Bengal, had married the daughter of Mahmood, the former King of that province, and held the ftate of a fovereign prince. Having experienced, in his own fortune, the danger of permitting fuch behavior to go unpunished, he marched immediately to Bengal. Chizer being unexpectedly furprized, fubmitted without trouble, and was imprifoned. Shere very prudently divided the kingdom of Bengal among a number of chiefs, independent of one another, and appointed Kali Fazilit, a native of Kurrah, famous for his learning and policy, to superintend the whole. He himfelf, after these transactions, retired to Agra. And an analysis but the second i he foge being materialled they's have three, Furster being to theat

In the year nine hundred and forty nine, Shere made a motion Reduces Matowards Malava. Having advanced as far as Gualier, Suja the Afghan, who had before invefted the place, on the part of Shere, found means to fettle matters with Abul Cafim, governor of Gualier for Humaioon, and he delivered up that firong fortrefs into his hands. Shere having entered Malava, Mullu the Mogul, governor of that province, fubmitted without a blow. Being, however, a few few days after, alarmed by fomething, he fled from the king's camp, and Hadjee Chan was appointed to that government; Suja had alfo a jagier conferred upon him in that country. Shere having marched from thence to Rintimpore, Mullu fell upon the governor of Malava, and upon Suja, but he was defeated. Suja having acquired all the honor of the victory, Hadjee was fuperfeded and recalled, and the government conferred upon Suja.

Takes Rintimpore. Shere arriving before Rintimpore, had the address to get possififion of that important fortress, from the governor, on the part of the pretended emperor Mahmood, who had still kept it. The emperor, after taking Rintimpore, returned to Agra. He remained in that city a whole year, fettling the internal police of the empire, and regulating his army. He, in the mean time, ordered Hybut to wrest Moultan from the tribe of the Bellochies. This Hybut foon effected by defeating Fatti Bellochi, and entirely fubduing that country. He had, on account of this exploit, the title of Azim Humaioon conferred upon him.

He marches againft Raja Paran, for keeping two thoufand soncubines.

The line

In the year nine hundred and fifty, Paran Mull, the fon of Sucdeo Parbia, having reduced fome neighbouring diffricts, kept no lefs than two thoufand concubines and dancing girls in his haram. The king, refenting this incroachment upon the privileges of royalty, marched and invefted him in the fort of Rafein. The fiege being protracted for a long time, Paran began to treat about a capitulation. This was granted to him upon the honorable terms of marching out, with all his arms, treafure, family, garrifon, and effects. Paran accordingly marched out with four thoufand rajaputs, and, trufting to the faith which had been pledged, encamped at a fmall diftance. But Shere, who never kept the faith of treaties, was cafily perfuaded, by his bafe minifters, particularly cultly by Amir Ruffi a Perfian, infamoufly to violate his honor. A. D. 1543. He furrounded the rajaputs, and ordered them all to be maffacred. He, however, paid very dear for this horrid piece of cruelty and treachery. The rajaputs, placing death in one eye and revenge in the other, fought till every man of them was laid dead on the plain, and above double their number of the affaffins.

Shere, after this infamous transaction, returned to Agra. Having remained there a few months, to refresh and recruit his army, he marched towards Marwar. During his march he intrenched himfelf every night, as well for fecurity, as to exercife his troops, and to make them expert in this neceffary fervice. When he came to crofs the fands, he formed redoubts all round him with gabions. In this manner he entered the country of the raja of Nagor and Todnoor, whofe name was Maldeo, and efteemed the most powerful Hindoo prince in India. He opposed the king, with fifty thousand rajaputs, and both armies lay thirty days in fight of one another. Shere would now have been glad to retreat quietly. But the danger was too great, at the fame time the enemy was fo advantageoufly posted as to render an attack too hazardous. In the midft of this alarming fituation, a fuccefsful flratagem fuggefted itfelf to the king. Maldeo having conquered that country, to which he had no right by inheritance, Shere forged a letter, in the Hindoo language and character, in the name of the raja's generals, addreffed to himfelf, fetting forth, " That, being conquered by the raja, they had, through neceffity, ferved him till then with fidelity; but that they were, in fecret, very weary of his yoke. That if Shere would, therefore, reinftate them in their former poffeffions, they were willing to make him a due acknowledgement for the favor." On this letter Shere fuperfcribed, as ufual, in Perfian, that they fhould fear nothing, defiring them to perfevere A a VOL. II.

Gallant propofal of a Rajaput omrah. This letter was purpofely thrown into the way of Maldeo, who, being always in dread of his chiefs, was eafily deceived. He therefore declined the battle, which he intended to give that day. He was even more and more confirmed in his unjuft fufpicion, by the eagernefs which they expressed to engage. Upon the fourth day he ordered a retreat; but Cunia, one of his principal omrahs, having found out in what manner Maldeo had been deceived by these forgeries, endeavoured to perfuade him of his mistake. Having found that the raja's fuspicions could not be removed, he told him, That the fuspected treachery was unprecedented among true Rajaputs, and that he was determined to wipe off the ftain which Maldeo had thrown upon their reputation, with his own blood, or the conqueft of Shere, with his own tribe.

With his own tribe and attacks Shere, Maldeo continued to retreat, but the gallant Cunia, with a few other chiefs, and ten or twelve thoufand men feparated themfelves from their prince and turned back, with an intent to furprize Shere's camp. They, however, by fome miftake, loft their way, and it was fair'day light before they faw the enemy. Shere immediately formed, and came out againft them. Though the king's army, by the finalleft computation, confifted of eighty thoufand fighting men, this handful of brave Rajaputs repulfed them repeatedly, and would have certainly defeated them, if Jellal Selwani had not at that inftant arrived with a frefh reinforcement, to join the imperial army. Shere falling upon the Rajaputs with renewed vigor, broke them; and the brave Cunia, with almoft his whole army, were tut to pieces.

Shere

Shere, finding himfelf in possession of a victory of which he had at one time defpaired, exclaimed, " That, for a handful of " barley, he had almost given the Empire of India to the wind." This grain, it feems, was all the fcanty produce of that fandy country, for which the inhabitants fought with fo much obflinacy. Maldeo having heard of this action, and the lofs of fo many brave men, fell into deep affliction; and being, for his pufillanimity, deferted by the greatest part of his army, he retreated among the mountains of Sodpoor.

Shere, after this bloody victory, turned his army towards the fort of Chitor, which was furrendered to him by capitulation. He then directed his march to Rintimpore, and gave that country in jagier to his fon Adil Chan, who fixed his refidence there. The King, in perfon, moved towards Callinger, which is effeemed one of the ftrongest forts in Hindostan. The Indian prince of Callinger, on account of the king's treacherous behavior to Paran Mull, would make no fubmiffion, but prepared himfelf for hoffilities. Shere, having drawn a line of circumvallation, begun to carry on his approaches to the place; he raifed mounds of earth for his artillery, and funk mines under the rock. The royal batteries were now advanced very near the walls, breaches were made, and a general affault ordered, when a live fhell, which had been thrown against the fort by the imperialists, rebounded back into the battery in which the king flood. The shell burft in the midst of a quantity of powder, which had not been properly fecured. Several gunners were blown up; the king, and many of his omrahs, were Burnt by the burnt in fo terrible a manner, that they were carried for dead to their tents.

The death of Shere happened on the twelfth of the first Ribbi, in the year nine hundred and fifty two. He fpent fifteen years in a military life before he mounted the throne; and he fat upon the musual five years, as emperor of Hindostan.

His charac-

The character of Shere is almost equally divided between virtue and vice. Public juffice prevailed in the kingdom, while private acts of treachery dishonoured the hands of the king. He feemed to have made breach of faith a royal property, which he would by no means permit his subjects to share with him. We ought, perhaps, to afcribe this vice to the ambition of Shere. Had he been born to the throne, he might have been just, as he was valiant and politic in war : Had he confined his mind to his estate, he might merit the character of a virtuous chief; but his great foul made him look up to the empire, and he cared not by what sheres he was to as a feend.

His magnificence. Shere left many monuments of his magnificence behind him. From Bengal and Sennargaum, to that branch of the Indus called the Nilâb, which is fifteen hundred crores *, he built caravanferais at every flage, and dug a well at the end of every crore. Befides, he raifed many magnificent molques for the worfhip of God on the highway, wherein he appointed readers of the Koran and Priefts. He ordered that at every flage, all travellers, without diffinction of country or religion, fhould be entertained, according to their quality, at the public expence. He, at the fame time, planted rows of fruit trees along the roads, to preferve travellers from the fcorching heat of the fun, as well as to gratify their tafte. Horfe-pofts were placed at proper diffances, for forwarding quick intelligence to government, and for the advantage of trade and correspondence. This eftablishment was new in India. Such was the public fecurity during his reign, that travellers and merchants, throwing down their goods, went without fear to fleep on the highway.

It is faid that Shere being told that his beard grew white, replied, It was true, that he had obtained the empire towards the evening. He divided his time into four equal parts: One he appropriated to the diffribution of public juffice, one to the regulations of his army, one to worfhip, and the remainder to reft and recreation. He was buried at Seffaram, his original effate, in a magnificent fepulchre which he had built in the middle of a great refervoir of water *.

Jellal mounts the throne by the name of Selim.

THEN Shere became numbered with the dead, his eldeft V fon, Adil, whom he had appointed his fucceffor, was at Rintimpore, and his younger fon, Jellal, in the village of Rewin, near Pheta. The omrahs, who favored Jellâl more than his brother, then at fo great a diftance, pretended the necessity of filling the throne as foon as poffible. They, for that purpose, dispatched exprefies to Jellal, who arrived in five days in the camp. Jellal, by the influence of Ifah Chan, and his party, mounted the throne, in the fortrefs of Callinger, upon the feventeenth of the first Ribbi, in the year nine hundred and fifty two, and affumed the title of Iflam Shaw, which, by falle pronunciation, was turned to that of Selim, by which name he is more generally known. Sclim, having taken upon him the imperial dignity, wrote to his elder brother, in the following words : " Adil being at fo great a diffance, and I " fo near, to prevent diffurbance, I took upon me the command " of the army till his return. But my intentions are only to for-" ward my brother's intereft, and to fupport his authority." Jellal, after writing this letter, marched from Callinger towards Agra, and at Kurrah was met by Chawafs, captain general of his father's forces, who renewed the ceremonies of royalty, and placed Selim a fecond time on the throne, holding a magnificent feftival upon that occasion. From Kurrah, Selim wrote another letter to his brother, begging in the most affectionate terms, that he would come and fee him.

His elder brother writes about the fuccefion. Adil wrote to the chiefs in the court of Selim, particularly to Cuttub, Ifah, Chawafs, and Jellal Selwani, to know to what purpofe he was invited, and what he was to hope from them. He, at the fame time, returned to his brother for answer, " That, if he A. D. 1545-" would fend thefe four chiefs to him, with proper affurances, he " would come." Selim fent accordingly the four omrahs to Adil, to affure him, in the most folemn manner, that he would permit him, if he pleafed, to depart after the first interview : But that, as the omrahs had invefted him with the imperial power, he could not be fo ungrateful as to defert them. However, to make fome compensation to Adil, for the empire, he was determined to give him his choice of any of the provinces in free jagier. Adil, upon these affurances, proceeded to Agra. When he had reached the village of Sikri *, Selim was out on a hunting party, near that place, and appointed carpets to be fpread for their interview. Here the brothers diffembled the greatest affection for one another, and after fome difcourfe fet out for Agra. Selim, who wanted to feize his brother, gave private orders, that only a few of his retinue fhould be admitted into the citadel; but Adil had alfo given orders to his people to prefs in, at all hazards, which they accordingly did, in fpite of every opposition.

at

Selim faw, that, without running a great rifque, nothing could be effected against his brother, who was fo much upon his guard. He, therefore, had recourse to flattery and diffimulation. He even proceeded fo far, as to lay hold of Adil's hand, to place him upon the throne. Adil, who was naturally a timorous and indolent man, rejected this propofal, knowing how little he had to truft from the omrahs, and a deceitful, ambitious brother. Selim was well aware of all this before he made this extraordinary offer.

Transactions in the palace.

A. D. 1545. Hig. 952. refignation of his birthright, and placing Selim on the throne, faluted him emperor. This was inftantly followed by all the court, who were waiting with impatience the iffue of this extraordinary farce. They immediately advanced to the throne in fucceffion, and, according to their rank, prefented their nazirs *, while others exhibited the ceremony of the ifar †, crying out aloud, "We offer " our lives and fortunes to the king." The ceremonies being ended, Cuttub, and the other omrahs, who had paffed their words to Adil, requefted, that, as he had pitched upon Biana for his effate, he, according to promife, fhould be regularly invefted with that province, and permitted to depart. Selim confented, and all matters being fettled, he gave Adil leave to quit Agra, accompanied by Ifah and Chawafs.

Chawafs kindles a rebellion in favor of Adil. But after two months, Selim gave to Ghazi Mahli, one of his eunuchs, a pair of golden fetters, to go and bring Adil prifoner to court. Adil, having timeous intelligence of this defign againft him, fet out for Mewat, where the captain general then refided. He acquainted that omrah, with tears, of his brother's bafenefs. Chawafs, whofe honor was concerned in this affair, was rouzed with compafion for the unfortunate prince. He feized upon Ghazi Mahli, placed his fetters upon his own legs, and exalted the fpear of rebellion againft Selim.

The interest of Chawass was great among the omrahs. He wrote to them private letters, and brought many over to his party. A great army was soon raised, and Chawass, with Adil and Ifah, marched towards Agra. He, upon his way, neceived letters from A. D. 1545. Cuttub and Jellal, who thought themfelves difhonored by the king's behavior towards his brother, affuring him of their affiftance.

When the confederate chiefs arrived before Agra, Selim, at the unexpected vifit, was thrown into the utmost perplexity. He called Cuttub and Jellal to his prefence, and reproached them fornot diffuading him from that impolitic flep which had drawn upon him fuch dangerous confequences. Cuttub replied, " That the bufinefs was not yet irremediable; that he would undertake to fettle every thing in an amicable manner." Selim not fufpecting the fidelity of the two omrahs, immediately defired that they fhould go to Adil, and compromife affairs. When they were gone, Selim difcovered to his friends his intentions of flying to Chinar, where the treasure was lodged, and there to raife an army to reduce his brother, whom he was not at prefent in a condition to oppose. Ifah Hujab diffuaded him from this refolution. He told him, " That he had with him ten thousand Chermalli Patans, who had ferved under him before he afcended the throne, whom he could not fuspect of difaffection, befides many other faithful fervants. That therefore, it was the height of folly, to trust the empire, which God had given him, to the future caprice of fortune, when he had it in his power to defend it inftantly in the field. Do not, faid Ifah, throw away the friends whom you have acquired in your profperity, with a vain hope to pick up others in the feafon of distrefs. The wifest course for you, continued the omrah, is to appear at the head of your troops, and to fix the foot of refolution on the field of war. This will fecure your wavering troops, and . intimidate the enemy."

Selim, encouraged by this bold advice, refolved to ftand his Overthrows ground. He immediately difpatched a meffage to Cuttub, and the Bb VOL. II.

the other omrahs, who had not yet fet out, to accommodate matters with Adil, and commanded them to his prefence. He told them, That having altered his mind, he was refolved not to truft his faithful omrahs in the hands of his enemies. He forthwith ordered his troops to their arms, marched out of the city, and formed his army on the plain. The omrahs, who had promifed to favor the prince Adil, feeing their king in the field, afhamed to betray him, were neceffitated to fight, which greatly difconcerted Chawafs, who, every minute, expected they would join him. He, however, fought with great bravery, but he was overthrown.

Adil difappears.

Adil, after this unfortunate battle, fled towards Patna, but he foon difappeared, and was never heard of afterwards. Chawafs and Ifah, fled to Mewât. Selim fent an army in purfuit of those omrahs, but they came off victorious, at Firofpoor. The imperial army being foon after reinforced, the rebel chiefs were obliged to retreat among the mountains of Cumaoon. Selim fent Cuttub in purfuit of them, and he phindered all the countries lying about the fkirts of the hills, without effecting any thing against them. Selim, after these transactions, marched to Chinar. On the way, he was informed of the treafonable correspondence of Jellal with the prince Adil, before the late decifive battle, and ordered him to. be put to death, together with his brother, who was concerned in the confpiracy. The king having arrived at Chinar, he took out of that fortrefs all the treasure, fent it to Gualier, and returned himfelf to Agra. Cuttub, finding that Selim was no ftranger to the part which he had acted in the late diffurbances, was afraid to return to court. He fled, therefore, to Hybut governor of Lahore, known by the title of Azim Humaioon, and claimed his protection. The emperor difpatched orders to Lahore, to fend Cuttub to Agra, with which Azim Humaioon complied. The unfortunate Cuttub, upon his arrival, was fent prifoner to Gualier, with many other fulpected pected perfons, particularly Shebas Lohani, the king's brother-inlaw, whofe eyes were put out. The governor of Lahore and Suja, who ruled over the province of Malava, were, much about this time, called to court. The first excufed himfelf, and the latter, obeying the fummons, had the address to clear himfelf of what he was accufed, and fo was reinftated in his government.

The king, after these transactions, moved towards Rhotas, to bring the treasure, which his father had deposited in that place, to Agra. Seid, the brother of Humaioon, governor of Lahore, deferted him on the way, and fled to Lahore. The king, from this circumftance, concluded that a rebellion was in agitation, which determined him to return immediately to Agra. He foon affembled his forces from all quarters, and marched to Delhi, where he ordered the new city which the emperor Humaioon had built, to be walled in with stone. At Delhi, Suja joined him with the army from Malava. The king remained only a few days in Delhi to regulate his army, and then took the rout of Lahore. Azim Humaioon, Chawafs, and other difaffected chiefs, with double the king's forces, came out before him at Ambatta. Selim arriving within fight of the rebels, difmounted, and, with a few friends, afcended a rifing ground for the purpole of reconnoitring; when he had for fome time viewed their difpolition, he faid : " It is not confiftent with my honor to have any patience with a rebellious army," and, at these words, he ordered his line to be formed, and to advance against them. It happened very fortunately for the affairs of Selim, that, upon the preceding night, there had arifen a difpute among the rebel generals, about the fucceffion to the throne. Chawafs still a friend to the family of his patron Shere, infifted that fearch should be made for prince Adil, and Azim Humaioon firenuoufly affirmed. " That the empire was no man's inheritance, but fhould always follow the fortune of the fword." This plainly pointed out his Bb2 OWI own views. On this head, animolity and faction arole, fo that as foon as the rebels had formed the line, Chawafs retreated, with all his troops, without firiking a blow. This circumftance fo much difcouraged the remaining part of the rebels, that their refiftance was faint, and an unexpected victory fell to Selim.

An attempt upon the life of Selim.

But, in the midft of this tide of good fortune, the emperor narrowly escaped with his life, from a daring attempt of Seid, the brother of Azim Humaioon. This gallant chief, with ten of his friends in armor, mixed, without difcovery, with the king's troops, and advanced towards him, as if they were about to congratulate him upon his victory. An elephant-driver, who ftood near the king, obferved and knew Seid, and ftruck him with his fpear: Yet, in fpite of all the guards, and the army which flood round, Seid and his party cut their way through, fword in hand, and efcaped. The rebels, who called themfelves the Neazies, being moftly of that family, retreated, after this defeat, to Dincot, near Rop, in the mountains, Selim purfuing them as far as the new fort of Rhotas, which his father had built. He, from thence, detached Chaja Serwani, with a ftrong force after them, and returned himfelf to Agra, and from thence foon after proceeded to Gualier. Suja, governor of Malava, going one day up to the fort before the king, one Ofman, a perfon whom Suja had deprived of his right hand fome time before, had concealed himfelf by the fide of the road, with a defperate intention to be revenged upon that omrah. The affaffin rushed out upon Suja, and inflicted a wound with his dagger. Suja, without enquiring into the matter, imagined that the whole was done by the infligation of the king, and therefore fled, with great precipitation, and made his way towards Malava, with all his forces. The king purfued him as far as Mundu, but hearing that he had fled to Banfwalla, he returned, leaving his own coufin, with twenty thoufand horfe, at Ugein, to obferve observe his motions. This happened in the year nine hundred A. D. 1548. and fifty four.

Chaja Serwani having been fome time before left to carry on the Chaja defeatwar against the Neazi rebels, engaged them near Dincot, and was Neazi rebels. defeated by Azim Humaioon, who purfued him as far as Sirhind. Selim hearing of this defeat, affembled a great army, and difpatched it, under proper generals, against the rebels. Azim Humaioon was obliged to retreat in his turn to Dincot. The rebels turned upon the imperial army at Simbollo, but were overthrown with great flaughter. Azim Humaioon's mother, and all his family, were taken prifoners. The Neazi rebels, after this defeat, threw themfelves under the protection of the Gickers among the mountains bordering on Cafhmire. Selim, finding that he could never have reft in peace without effectually quashing this rebellion, marched in perfon towards the Indus, and, for the fpace of two years, carried on a war with the Gickers who fupported the Neazies.

In this expedition a perfon concealed himfelf in the narrow An attempt path, by which the emperor one day afcended the mountain of life. Mannicot, and rushed upon him with a drawn fword. Selim, having time to draw, faved himfelf, and killed the affaffin, and perceived that his fword was one that he himfelf had formerly prefented to Eckbal Chan. The Gickers being driven from one place to another, without being in a condition to face the emperor, Azim Humaioon, with his followers, went into the kingdom of Cashmire; but the prince of that country, fcaring Selim's refentment, oppofed the rebels, and, having defeated them, fent the heads of Azim Humaioon, his brother Seid, and Shabafs to the king. Selim being now fecured against further diffurbance from that quarter, returned to Delhi. The prince Camiran, much about about this time, flying from his brother the emperor Humaioon, who was now on his way from Perfia, took protection under Selim. But he was very ill received by that prince, and he therefore fled to the mountains of Sewalic, among the Gickers.

Selim marches againft Humaioon, Sclim, after returning from his expedition, had only remained a few days at Delhi, when he received advices, that the emperor Humaioon had reached that branch of the Indus which is diffinguifhed, by the name of the Nilâb, or the blue river. The king was at that inftant drawing blood by cupping; he immediately flarted up, iffued orders to march, and he himfelf encamped, that evening, fix miles without the city. He there waited for his artillery, which was dragged by men, till the bullocks, which were grazing in the country, could be brought together. The artillery being very heavy, each gun was drawn by one or two thoufand men; yet, in this manner, he marched, with great expedition, towards Lahore. But, in the mean time, Humaioon retreated, as we fhall have occafion to mention in the fequel. Selim returned to Delhi, and from thence proceeded to Gualier, where he took up his refidence.

A plot againft Selim's life.

Selim taking, one day, the diversion of the chace, near Atri, a body of banditti, who had been fet on by some of the king's enemies, lay in ambush, to take his life. But he perceived them time enough to avoid the source. When they were feized and examined, they impeached many chiefs who were immediately executed, after which the king became extremely sufficients, and put numbers to death upon source finall prefumptions.

Chawals affaffinate l. Chawafs, the captain general of the armies of Shere, of whom frequent mention has already been made, a man juftly renowned for perfonal courage, flrict honor, great abilities in war, and extensive generofity, being long driven about from place to place, came to Taji Kirrani, who had owed his preferment to him, and A. D. 1551was now governed by Simbol. The ungrateful villain, in violation of his oath, and the laws of hospitality, to ingratiate himself with Selim, bafely affaffinated Chawafs. His body being carried to Delhi, was there interred. His tomb is frequented by the devout to this day, they numbering him among the faints.

Not long after this bafe affaffination, in which Selim was con- Selim dies. cerned, he was feized with a fiftula in ano, by which, in the year nine hundred and fixty, he bled to death, having reigned nine years. In the fame year, Mahmood the Patan King of Guzerat, and the Nizam of the Decan, who was of the fame nation died. Selim poffeffed not the abilities of his father, and confequently His charact carried neither his virtues nor his vices to fuch extremes. He, in fome meafure, fuited the times in which he lived; and was rather a neceffary than a good prince. A man of an upright mind might have staggered in the stream of corruption, which then prevailed, but Selim flood firm, by meeting the world in its own way. He possefied perfonal bravery, and was not unskilful in the field of war. Like Shere, he was magnificent, and fludied the convenience of travellers. From Bengal to the Indus, he built an intermediate ferai, between each of those which his father had erected ;: all who paffed along the great road being entertained at the public expence.

In the reign of Selim, Shech Allai, a philosopher of Biana, made a great noife in the world, by introducing a new fyftem of religion. He called himfelf Emam Mendi, who is believed by fome to be the last of the prophets, and will conquer the world. The impostor having raifed great disturbances in the empire, converted fome thousands by force and perfuasion. After being twice banished by Selim, he returned, and kindled fresh troubles, and Ferofe mounts the throne.

Is barbaroufly murdered.

When Selim travelled the road of mortality, his fon, Ferofe, was, at twelve years of age, raifed to the throne, by the chiefs of the tribe of Soor at Gualier. He had not reigned three days, when Mubarick, the fon of Nizam Soor, nephew to the late Emperor Shere, brother of Selim's wife, and the uncle of Ferofe, affaffinated the young prince. Mubarick affumed the title of Mahommed Adil *, to which his infamous treafon had no right, and usurped the empire. He perpetrated this barbarous deed with his own hand, in the Mahl. The villain's own fifter, Bibi Bai, defended, for fome time, her fon in her arms, prefenting her body to the dagger. In vain did fhe intreat and weep : the wretch was hardened against pity. He tore the young prince from her arms, and, in her prefence, fevered his head from his body. This was the return which he made to the unfortunate Bibi Bai, for faving his life, repeated times, when Selim, forefeeing his villainies, would have put him to death.

MAHOMMED VI.

HE infamous Mahommed, having always given himfelf up A. D. 1552to pleafure, neglected even the common accomplifhment of reading and writing. He hated men of learning, and kept illiterate. company with illiterate fellows like himfelf, whom he raifed to the highest dignities in the empire, among whom one Himu, an Indian fhop-keeper, whom the Emperor Selim had raifed to be fuperintendant of the markets, was now entrusted with all the weight of the administration.

The King, in the mean time, heedlefs of what paffed, fpent his His foolight time in all the luxurious debaucheries of the Haram. Having heard much in praise of fome of the former Emperors, particularly Ferole, for their great generofity, he miftook prodigality for that virtue, and to outdo them all, opened the treasury, and lavishedit on good and bad, without diffinction. When he rode out, he ufed to head arrows with gold, which he fhot among the multitude. This foolifh extravagance foon made away with the great treasures of his predecessors; and all his reward from the people. was the nickname of Adili; which, in the Indian language, fignifies literally the Blind, and metaphorically, the Foolifh.

When Himu found himfelf invefted with the whole executive power of the empire, his pride and infolence, though otherwife a man of good parts, exceeded all bounds. This naturally made The omrails all the Patan chiefs his enemies. They began to confpire for his destruction, and to revolt from his authority. The King became more and more defpicable, every day, in the eyes of the people, while all order and government totally declined. Mahommed giving, one day, public audience, and diffributing eflates and governments among his omrahs, he ordered the province of Kinnoge to be taken from Firmalli, and given to Sermuft Sir-[Cc] bunna_ VOL. bunna. Secunder, the fon of Firmalli, a brave young man, being prefent, faid aloud to the Emperor, " Is my fortune, then, to be " conferred on a feller of dogs?" for it appears that Sermuft was defcended of one of that low occupation. The elder Firmalli, who was also prefent, endeavored to check the impetuofity of his fon; but he only inflamed his paffion the more: He charged the King, in plain terms, with a bafe defign to extirpate his family. Sermuft, who was a man of uncommon ftrength and ftature, feeing this behavior to the King, and being also perfonally affronted, feized Secunder by the breaft; Secunder drew his daggers and killed him on the fpot. He then flew at all those who endeavored to oppose him, killed feveral chiefs, and wounded many more. He then made directly for the King, who leapt from the throne, and ran into the Mahl; Secunder purfuing him, had the door ftruck in his face, which ftopped his progrefs, till Mahommed drew the bolt, and fecured himfelf. The defperate youth, finding himfelf difappointed in his defign upon Mahommed, refolved to revenge himfelf upon his bafe minions, and rufhing back into the audience chamber, dealt death to all who oppofed him. In the mean time, Ibrahim of the tribe of Soor, the King's coufin and brother-in-law, attacked Secunder with fome of his people, and cut him to pieces. Dowlat Lohani killed, at the fame time, the good old man, Firmalli, who could not have been blamed for his fon's rafhnefs.

Taji withdraws from court. The unfortunate Firmalli having met Taji Kerrani, as he was going that day to the prefence chamber, he afked that omrah whither he was going; to which the other replied, "That affairs had taken fuch an extraordinary turn, at court, that he was determined to pufh his own fortune, and would be glad that Firmalli would partake it with him." Firmalli anfwered, "That he afpired to no fortune but what he poffeffed by favor of the crown, for which he was going to pay his compliments;" but fuch as we have feen was his reward. Taji, as foon as he got out of the fort, took the way of Bengal, with all his dependants. Troops were difpatched to purfue him; they came up with him at Chuppera Mow, about eighty miles from Agra, where he fought them, and made good his retreat to Chinâr. He, in his progrefs, feized the public money, and other effects belonging to the crown; and diftributed one hundred elephants among his brothers, and other relations, who had poffeffions in the province of Bujipoor. By their affiftance he raifed a formidable army, which obliged the King to take the field, and march towards Chinâr. The infurgents meeting him upon the banks of the Ganges, above Chinâr, they were defeated and difperfed.

The King, becoming jealous of the popularity of Ibrahim Soor, gave private orders to feize him; but his wife, who was fifter to the King, having heard of this defign in the Mahl, told her hufband of it. He fled from Chinâr to his father, Ghazi, governor ef Biana, and was purfued by Hah Neazi, who coming up with him at Calpee, an engagement enfued, in which Hah was defeated, and driven back from further purfuit. Ibrahim, foon after, raifed a great army, and poffeffed himfelf of the city of Delhi, where he mounted the throne, affumed the enfigns of royalty, marched to Agra, and reduced the circumjacent provinces.

Mahommed marched from Chinâr to fupprefs this ufurpation, and, on the way, received an embaffy from Ibrahim, promifing that if he would fend Huffein, and other chiefs, with affurances of forgivenefs, he would fubmit. The King was weak enough to comply with his requeft. The omrahs went; and Ibrahim, by prefents, promifes, and courteous behavior, foon drew them over to his own intereft. Mahommed, finding himfelf in no condition to oppofe fo ftrong a confederacy, fled towards Chinâr, and contented himfelf with the eaftern provinces. Ibrahim immediately erected the fpear of empire in the weft, by the title of Sultan Ibrahim.

IBRAHIM III.

A. D. 1552. Hig. 961. A competitor in Punjab affumes the royal title. BRAHIM had no fooner mounted the throne, than another competitor flarted up in the province of the five rivers, known by the name of Punjâb. This was Ahmed, a nephew of the Emperor Shere, and alfo brother-in-law to Mahommed, the expelled Emperor. Ahmed having attached to himfelf Hybut, and other chiefs raifed to the dignity of omrahs, by the late Emperor Selim, to his intereft, affumed the title of Secunder Shaw, and marching with ten or twelve thousand horfe towards Agra, encamped at Firrah, within four miles of that city. Ibrahim, with feventy thousand horfe, came out to meet him, having, in this army, two hundred omrahs who pitched velvet tents, and possified the dignities of the spear, drum, and colours.

Secunder, feeing this formidable army, began to repent of his invation, and made overtures of peace. The only condition he alked, was the government of Punjab. But Ibrahim, puffed up with the pride of his own fuperiority, would grant him no terms, and therefore both armies drew up and engaged. Secunder committed all the enfigns of royalty to one of his omrahs, and, with a choice body of horfe, took post among fome trees, where he could not be difcovered. Ibrahim, upon the first charge, broke through the army of Secunder; his troops quitted their ranks, and were intent upon nothing but plunder; when Secunder, rufhing out upon them, ftruck a panic into the whole army; they immediately took to flight, and were purfued by those whom they had fo eafily difcomfited before. The Emperor Ibrahim, after this defeat, abandoned his capital, and retreated to Simbol. Secunder took poffeffion both of Agra and Delhi; but he had not long en-.joyed joyed his fortune, when he was obliged to march to Punjab, to oppofe the Mogul Emperor Humaioon; for that monarch, having returned from a long exile, was now advancing to recover his dominions.

During the absence of Secunder, the Emperor Ibrahim marched Him towards Calpee; and, at the fame time, Mahommed, the expelled him. Emperor, difpatched Himu, his vizier, with a formidable army, well appointed in cavalry, elephants, and artillery, from Chinâr, with a view to recover his empire. Himu engaged Ibrahim at Calpee, and gave him a fignal defeat. Ibrahim, flying to his father at Biana, was purfued by Himu, who belieged him in that city, for three months.

In the mean time, Mahummud of the Afghan family of Ghor, governor of Bengal, rebelled against Mahommed, and led an army This circumftance obliged that prince to recall against him. Himu from the fiege of Biana; and the Emperor Ibrahim, emboldened by the retreat of the enemy, purfued them, and coming up with Himu at Mindakir, near Agra, gave him battle; but he was again defeated, and obliged to fly back to his father, at Biana. The reftlefs fpirit of Ibrahim could not, however, be flill : He marched towards Bhetah, and engaging the Indian prince of that country, was defeated and taken prifoner. He was used with the utmost respect, till the Patans of Miani obtained him from the Raja, and appointed him their chief. Under him they commenced a war against Bahadar, governor of Malava, who had affumed independance; but the bad fortune of Ibrahim fiill purfued him, he was beat, and fled to Oriffa. That province being conquered in the year nine hundred and feventy five, by Soliman Kerrani, one of the generals of the Mogul Emperor Akbar, the unfortunate Ibrahim was taken and put to death.

Himu defeats and flays the governor of Bengal.

To return from this digreffion; when Himu joined his mafter Mahommed at Chinar, he received advices that the Emperor Humaioon had defeated Secunder, the pretended Patan Emperor, and poffeffed himfelf of Delhi and Agra. Himu, however, marched against the revolted governor of Bengal, who gave him the flip, by croffing the hills near Rhotas, and entering the country of Bundeleund. He was purfued thither by Himu: The two armies came to action at the village of Chircut, thirty miles from Calpee, and the rebel was flain. Mahommed, after this victory, inflead of proceeding to Agra, returned to Chinar, to affemble more troops for carrying on the war with Humaioon. But he was foon after informed of that monarch's death; which induced him to fend Himu, with fifty thousand horse, and five hundred elephants, towards Agra, not daring to leave Chinar himfelf, on account of the violent factions which then fubfifted among his countrymen the Patans.

Drives the Moguls from Agra, and from Delhi. Himu arriving before Agra, the Mogul omrahs who were there, being too weak to oppole him, fled to Delhi. He purfued them thither, and Tirdi Beg, governor of Delhi, giving him battle, was defeated, and fled towards the Indus, leaving Himu in poffeffion of both the imperial cities of Agra and Delhi. The Indian meditated the conqueft of Lahore; but the celebrated Byram, of the nation of the Turkumans, a man of policy in the clofet, as well as abilities in the field, who had been left by the will of Humaioon, guardian of his fon Akbar, during his nonage, fent Zemân, a Mogul noble, with all expedition, towards Delhi. He himfelf followed, with the young King. Himu marched out to meet Zeman, drew up on the plains of Panniput, and charging the Moguls with great bravery, threw them into diforder. But the Patans, always more mindful of plunder, than of fecuring victory, vory, were again attacked by the Moguls, and defeated. Himu was furrounded, and taken prifoner, and being carried before the King, condemned to death.

After the death of the unfortunate Himu, who had certainly great abilities, notwithfanding his mean defcent, the fortune of his mafter Mahommed declined apace. In the mean time, Chizer, the fon of the governor of Bengal, who was flain in battle by Himu, to revenge the death of his father, raifed an army, and affuming the title of Sultan Bahadar, poffeffed himfelf of a great part of the eaftern provinces. He led an army againft Mahommed, defeated, and flew him. The anarchy and confusions in Hindoftan, at this period, rendered it impoffible to continue the direct chain of our hiftory in the order of time. We therefore muft turn back to what we have omitted of the hiftory of Secunder, who had affumed the imperial title at Agra, and afterwards to a detail of the adventures of Humaioon, during his exile:

Secunder, after having afcended the throne of Agra, in the year nine hundred and fixty-two, made a magnificent feftival, and calling together all his chiefs, fpoke to them to this effect : " I effcem myfelf as one of you, having thus far acted for the " common weal. They elect him King. " fwear allegiance to him; that with my life and fortune I may "fupport him, and endeavor to keep the empire of India in the "hands of the Patans, who have ruled it for fo many ages by "their valor." The omrahs, after hearing this fpeech, anfwered with one accord, "We unanimoufly elect you, the nephew of our "Emperor Shere, for our lawful fovereign." Calling then for a Coran, all fwore allegiance to Secunder, and to preferve unanimity among themfelves. However, in a few days, they began to difpute about governments, honors, and places. The flames of enmity were kindled higher than ever, and every one reproached his fellow with perfidy, of which he himfelf was equally guilty.

He is repeatedly defeated by the Moguls. Humaioon, in the mean time, marched from Cabul and the fide of Perfia towards the Indus. Tatar, who commanded for the Patans in Punjab, fled from the new fort of Rhotas, to Delhi, and the Moguls fubdued all the country as far as Lahore. Secunder, upon receiving thefe advices, fent forty thoufand horfe, under the command of Tatar and Hybut, to expel the Moguls. But this army was defeated, loft all their elephants and baggage, never drawing bridle, till they arrived at Delhi. Secunder, though fenfible of the difaffection and factious flate of his army, marched with eighty thoufand horfe towards Punjab, and engaging Byram, the tutor of prince Akbar, near Sirhind, was defeated, and fled towards the mountains of Sewalic. The empire of India, with this victory, fell again into the hands of the houfe of Baber, and flourifhed; while, in the mean time, the infamous Mahommed Adil died by the hands of his enemies, in the kingdom of Bengal.

HUMAIOON IN PERSIA.

WE have already feen that the emperor Humaioon, having arrived at Kizvi in Perfia, difpatched the noble Byram to the Perfian monarch at Ifpahan. That omrah accordingly waited upon Tamafp at the palace of Nilac, between the cities of Abher and Sultania *, and received an anfwer which teflified the king's great defire to have an interview with Humaioon. The unfortunate fugitive accepted, with joy, of the invitation, and in the month of the first Jemmad, in the year nine hundredand fifty one, had a conference with Tamafp, the fon of Ifinael Suffvi, emperor of Perfia, and was royally entertained.

Tamaíp, one day, in conversation, asked Humaioon, By what means his weak enemy became fo powerful ? Humaioon replied, "By the enmity of my brothers." The Persian then told him, "The political manner of treating brothers is not fuchas they received from you." And being, at that time, at table, as foon as he was done eating, the prince Byram, his brother, who attended, him as a fervant, came with the bason and ewer for him to wash †. When this was done, Tamasfp turned to Humaioon, and refuming the discourse, faid, "In this manner you ought to have treated your brothers." Humaioon, out of compliment to the king, seemed to assert to what he faid; which so much offended the prince, the king's brother, that he never as-

He took every opportunity to calumniate Humaioon to the king, and was ever harping in his ears, how much against the interest of Persia it was, that a prince of the line of Timur should fit upon the the throne of India. This maxim Byram took care to inculcate upon all who had the king's confidence, and that circumstance greatly retarded the affairs of Humaioon, and, at length, wrought so visibly upon the king's disposition, that the unfortunate mogul began to fear death or imprisonment.

The king's fifter and fome omrahs favor the caufe of Humaioon. In the mean time, Sultana Begum, the king's lifter, and Jehan, the high chancellor, in conjunction with Hakîm, one of the king's privy counfellors, taking compafiion upon Humaioon's diftreffed fituation, joined their interefts to work a reconciliation, and to reinftate him in the favor of Tamafp. The wit of the fultana had a great effect upon this occasion. She, one day, produced a stanza of verfes to the king, of her own composition, in the name of Humaioon, extolling his devotion and happy turn of expression in the praise of Ali. This greatly pleased Tamas, the fect whose tenets Humaioon followed. The Shiahs hold Ali to be the only affistant of Mahommed in his apostolic function, but the Sinnites believe in four, adding Ofman, Omar, and Abubecker to Ali.

The king, in fhort, told his fifter, That if Humaioon fhould become a Shiah, and enforce that doctrine in India, he would affift him to recover his empire. The fultana having acquainted Humaioon of these particulars, he was not fo much wedded to a sect, as to lose a kingdom for an immaterial difference in a point of religion. He accordingly returned for answer, "That he had always privately favored the opinions of the Shiahs, which was partly partly the occasion of the animofity subfifting between him and A D. 1545. Hig. 952.

Tamafp, foon after, had a private conference with the noble Byram, examined him concerning the policy and flate of Hindoftan; and when he had fatisfied himfelf upon that head, he promifed that his fon Murad, who was then but an infant, with his general Biddai, fhould accompany Humaioon, with ten thoufand horfe, to chaftife his brothers, and drive them out of Cabul, Candahar, and Buduchfhan. Every thing accordingly was, in a fhort time, got in readinefs, and Humaioon took leave of the Perfian king. He told him, that he had long propofed to take a tour through Tibrez and Ardebiel, to vifit the tomb of Shech Suffi, and then to proceed on his expedition. The king confented to this propofal, and iffued orders to all governors through whofe territories Humaioon was to pafs, to fupply him and his army with all neceffaries, and treat him in a manner becoming his dignity.

Humaioon having vifited and paid his devotions at the fhrine of Suffi, marched with the young prince Murad, towards Candahar. He invefted the fort of Garrimfere, took it, and read the chutba in his own name. Afhkari, who commanded at Candahar for the prince Camiran, hearing of these proceedings, sent the young prince Akbar, the son of Humaioon, to his uncle at Cabul, and prepared the sort of Candahar for a fiege.

Humaioon invefted it upon the feventh of Mohirrim, in the year nine hundred and fifty two. The fiege had been carried on for fix months, when Humaioon fent his general Byrâm with a meffage to Camiran, then at Cabul. A tribe of the Patans of C c 2: Hazara

But it was not to be expected that Camiran would as yet listen to such a demand, and so the ambassiador departed without affecting any thing.

The Perfians difcontented. The Perfian foldiers, in the fervice of Humaioon, were now beginning to be difcouraged by the length of the fiege, and difcontented at being commanded by Moguls. This circumftance might have obliged Humaioon to raife the fiege, had he not been joined by Mahummud, Huffein, Shere Afkun, Fufil Beg, and other omrahs, who, difgufted with prince Camiran, had left his fervice. Some of the befieged deferted alfo, and joined the king. Thefe favorable circumftances revived the finking fpirits of his army, and equally deprefied thofe of the befieged. Afhkari defired to capitulate; his requeft was granted upon honourable terms; he gave up the place, and, much afhamed of his former behavior, waited upon the king.

The fort of Candahar, as had been flipulated with the Perfian emperor, was given to his infant fon, Murad. The winter having now come on, the young prince Murad, and the Perfian generals Biddai, Abul Fatte, and Aridmullu, took up their quarters in the fort, without admitting the Mogul omrahs. This fo much difgufted them, that fome, having no quarters, went off to Cabul, while Afhkari, with a view of raifing more difturbance, alfo fled. Afhkari, however, was purfued, and brought back prifoner.

Humai-

Humaioon, finding inaction more dangerous to his affairs than war, marched towards Cabul. On the way he heard of the death of the young prince Murad, at Candahar, upon which he returned, with a view to retain that fort as a place of fecurity, till he fhould make further conquests. The Persian general would not hearken to this proposal, which filenced the king, who could not, confistent with gratitude, or his own promise, compel him to deliver up the place.

But the urgency of his affairs foon obliged Humaioon to depart from thefe punctilios of honor. He therefore tacitly permitted Byram, Ali, and Mahummud, to take what means they could to render themfelves mafters of the place. Thefe omrahs, accordingly, fent Mahummud and a few enterprizing men, difguifed like camel-drivers, among a ftring of camels, which was then carrying provifions into the fort. They fell upon the guards, and difpatched them, while Byram, and Ali, rufhed in with a chofen party of horfe, and poffeffed themfelves of the fort. The Perfian general returned, by the king's permiffion, to Perfia, and Byram was appointed to the government of Candahar.

The king marched immediately towards Cabul. The prince Eadgâr, the brother of Baber, flying, at this time, from Huffein Arghu, to Cabul, in conjunction with Hindal, the king's brother, joined Humaioon. The king, encamping in the enwirons of Cabul, before the army of his brother, was every day joined by fome of Camiran's troops, who deferted his standards. Even Kipla, one of Camiran's principal omrahs, came over, with all his adherents. This fo much weakened the prince's army, that he was necessitated to shut himself up in the city. Humai-

The king fent the prince Hindal in purfuit of his brother, and, on the tenth of Ramzân, nine hundred and fifty two, entered Cabul, where he found his fon Akbar, then four years old, with his mother Beguma, and, taking him in his arms, he repeated a verfe to this purpofe: "Jofeph, by his envious brethren, was caft into a well; but he was exalted by Providence to the fummit of glory."

The gates of Ghizni were flut againft Camiran, and he was therefore obliged to take refuge at Dawir, among the Patans of Hazara. Being very ill received there, he went to Bicker, to his coufin Huffein, who gave him his daughter in marriage, and prepared to fupport him. Humaioon, having left his fon Akbar under the tuition of Mahummud Ali, in Cabul, marched in perfon, in the year nine hundred and fifty three, to reduce Beduchfhan. Eadgar having attempted to flir up a fedition in the royal army, was, upon conviction, fentenced to death, though he was uncle to the king.

Humaioon having paffed Hinderkufh, and encamped at Neizikeran, Soliman, with the forces of Buduchfhan, came before him, but they were defeated in the first charge. The king from thence turned towards Talichan, where he fell fick. He, however, recovered, at the end of two months, and all the factions which had begun to prevail in his army, foon fubfided. Moazim, the brother of Chuli, one of the imperial fultanas, having had a quarrel at this time with Reshid, killed him, and fled to Cabel, where he was ordered to be imprisoned by the king.

HUMAIOON.

Camiran having heard that his brother had marched to Buduchshan, made an excursion to Ghorebund. On the way he fell in with a caravan of merchants, whom herobbed of all their camels, horfes, and goods; and, coming to Ghizni, raifed a faction among the populace, and cut off the governor, Zatrid. Making from thence forced marches towards Cabul, he arrived there as they were opening the gates in the morning, and took the place by furprize. He killed Ali, the governor, as he flood in the bath, and put out the eyes of Fasil and Vakila. The young prince Akbar, and the ladies of the Haram, were given in charge to fome eunuchs; Hisam Alli, the fon of Califa, was put to death.

Intelligence of these transactions coming to Humaioon, that monarch gave the government of Buduchshan to the prince Soliman, of the posterity of Timur, and that of Kunduz to his brother Hindal. He himfelf returned to Cabul, defeated the army of Camiran, which oppofed him at Ghorebund, came to the town of the Afghans, called Deh, where Shere, and all the army of Camiran had again affembled to oppose him. But the king overthrew them there alfo, and flew Shere in the action. He proceeded from thence to Cabul, and fat down before that city, fkirmishing every day with the enemy. Camiran, having received intelligence that a caravan was paffing, wherein there was a great number of fine horfes, fent one Shere, a bold enterprizing officer, with a ftrong detachment, to feize and bring it into the city. Humaioon marched round the walls, and cut off Shere's retreat, fo that, when he came to enter the city, he was attacked and defeated with great flaughter.

had now joined the king, while Kirrachi and Baboos deferted from the city to his army. Camiran, in the rage of defpair, bafely murdered the three fons of Baboos, and threw their mangled bodies over the wall. He, at the fame time, bound the young prince Akbar and Kirrachi's fon to a ftake, and raifed them up to view upon the battlements. But he was given to underftand, that if he put them to death, every foul in the place fhould be maffacred.

Camiran evacuates Cabul. Camiran thought proper to defift from his intended cruelty, and that very night, making a breach in the wall, evacuated the place, and fled towards the fkirts of the hills, leaving Humaioon a fecond time, in poffeffion of Cabul. In his retreat, he was plundered, and even ftript of his cloaths, by the inhabitants of Hazara; but when they difcovered him, they conducted him to his garrifon at Ghorebund. He, however, did not think: himfelf fecure there, and therefore he haftened to Balich, where Mahummud, who held that city, joined him, and affifted him in fubduing Buduchfhan. They drove Soliman and his fon. Ibrahim from that country.

Several omrahs defert Humajoon. Kirrachi, Baboos, and fome other omrahs, being, about this time, difgufted with the behavior of Ghazi, Humaioon's vizier, wanted of the king to difgrace him, and appoint Chafim to his office. Humaioon, fatisfied of the integrity of his minifter, would by no means confent, which irritated them fo much, that they left the king's fervice, and went over to Afhkari, who commanded under Camiran in Buduchfhan. The king purfued them in their flight, but not being able to come up with them, returned to Cabul, and called to him Ibrahim and Hindal from their respective governments. off, and brought his head to the king. Hindal having also met A. D. 1545. Shere, brought him back prifoner.

Camiran having left Kirrachi in Cufhom, went in perfon to Talickân. Humaioon detached Hindal and Koka, with a confiderable force, to drive Kirrachi from thence. That omrah having received intelligence of their coming, acquainted Camiran, who, with great expedition, returned to Cushom, and fell in with Hindal, in croffing the river Talikan, when his troops were divided. He defeated Hindal, cut off a great part of his detachment, and feized upon all his baggage.

Humaioon, in a few days, advanced with the army from Cabul, which obliged Camiran to fly towards Talickan, and leave all his plunder, as well as his own baggage. He was, the day after his retreat, invested in the fort, and, as he despaired of the affistance of the Usbecks, to whom he had applied, he requested leave of his brother Humaioon, to make a pilgrimage to Mecca. Humaioon, with a good-natured weakness, consented, and both the perfidious Camiran and Ashkari came out of the place, and proceeded about ten pharfangs on their way. When they found that Humaioon did not fend troops to feize them, nor attempt to detain them, as they imagined, they were ashamed of their own behavior, and thought it more elegible to truft to his clemency, than turn mendicant pilgrims. With this refolution they returned.

The king having heard of their return, fent perfons to congratulate, and treat them with great refpect. Humaioon, after these transactions, returned to Cabul. Humaioon arriving in the environs of Balick, an Ufbeck general came before him with only three thousand Ufbeck horse, and stopt his progress. The Ufbeck chief was, on the second day, reinforced by Pier Mahummud, and the princes of Hassar, and was thus enabled to march out with thirty thousand horse to give battle. Soliman, Hindal, the king's cousin and brother, defeated the advanced parties, and pressed fo hard upon Pier Mahummud that he thought proper to retreat within the city.

> The king was defirous of purfuing the enemy. This refolution, had it been followed, would certainly have had a good affect, as they were preparing to evacuate the place. But unfortunately the king fuffered his own better judgment to be over-ruled by his omrahs, who fuggefted their apprehenfions from Camiran, and advifed the king to incamp fomewhere near the city, which would fall into his hands in the course of things. This pernicious advice was accordingly followed. No ground proper for incamping being near, the king was obliged to retreat to a fmall diftance. The troops being ordered to move back, apprehended that danger was near; when the enemy actually conftrued the retreat of Humaioon into a real flight. By this double miftake the Moguls were intimidated, and the Ufbecks received fresh spirits. They immediately fell upon Soliman and Huffein, who brought up the rear, forced them upon the main body, where the king commanded in perfon. the attack. His brother Hindal, Tirdi Beg, and Tolic Chan fupported Humaioon with great bravery; but they foon found themfelves deferted by all their troops, and were obliged to fave themfelves by flight.

After this unfortunate action, the imperial army retreated towards Cabul. The king, on his way, was deferted by the perfidious Camiran and Ashkari, who had not joined in the action. Humaioon justly refenting their behaviour, wrote to Ali, one of Camiran's omrahs, and made him great promifes if he would feize his mafter, and fend him prifoner to court; difpatching, at the fame time, Soliman and Hindal in purfuit of him. Camiran, laying afide all his enfigns of state, attempted, by the way of Zohac and Bamia, to pass to the Indus. The king, informed of his motions, fent a party to intercept him; but Kirrachi and Huffein, who had remained with Humaioon, wrote privately to Camiran, and acquainted him with all that paffed. These perfidious chiefs, being now ashamed of no villiany, told Camiran, that, as the greatest part of the king's troops were detached from his perfon, if he would return, they would join him in the action. Camiran did not let this favorable opportunity flip through his hands. He returned, by the way of Kipoha, whither, the king, having intelligence of him, advanced to meet him. The battle was no fooner begun, than Kirrachi, and his perfidious abderents, went over to Camiran, and turned upon Humaioon, who, with a few faithful friends, fought with great refolution. Pier Mahummud, and Ahmed, the fon of Kulli, being flain by the king's fide, and he himfelf wounded in the head, as well as his horfe, he was forced to abandon the field, and fly to Bamia, and from thence to Buduchshan, leaving Camiran to poffels himfelf, a third time, of Cabul.

Humaioon was now in great diffrefs, for money to pay the few Humaioon in troops, who had continued faithful to his fortunes. He was obliged to borrow the horfes, camels, and merchandize of fome great caravans, with which he mounted and paid his troops. He privately fent Bidda, Toglich, Mudgnow, and others, to the number of ten perfons, to fupport his interest at Cabul, and to fend him intelligence of what paffed in that city. But of all these, Toglick alone remained true to his interest, which they now found was greatly declined. Soliman, Ibrahim, and prince Hindal, returning with their detachments to join the king, he found himfelf again in a condition to make an attempt to recover his kingdom; and he accordingly marched towards Cabul. Camiran, upon the approach of Humaioon, came out, and drew up on the banks of the Punger. Camiran was defeated with great flaughter, and in his flight he was obliged to fhave his head and beard, to escape, in the difguise of a mendicant, to the mountains of Limgan. Ashkari was taken prisoner, and the perfidious Kirrachi fell in the engagement.

Returns to Cabul.

Humaioon now returned in triumph to Cabul ; where he enjoyed a whole year in peace and festivity. Intelligence was brought to him, that the reftless Camiran was again at the head of fifteen hundred horfe, while fome omrahs fled from the royal prefence to Ghizni. The king marched against his brother, who fled towards the Indus; fo that Humaioon, without effecting any thing, returned to Cabul. Camiran no fooner heard of his brother's retreat, than he returned again among the Afghans to raife up more diffurbances. Humaioon was under the neceffity of taking the field a fecond time. He wrote to Byram, who still held the government of Candahar, to march against the omrahs, who fled to Ghizni, and had invited Camiran to join him at that place. Camiran, by the way of Peshawir, Bungish, and Curvez, was then on his march towards towards Ghizni: But before his arrival, Byram had come to A. D. 1551. Ghizni, and carried the revolted omrahs prifoners to Cabul. Camiran, difappointed of his ally, returned to Pefhawir, and the king directed his march to Cabul.

Before the arrival of Humaioon at his capital, Mahommed, one of the imprisoned omrahs found means to escape, a fecond time, to Ghizni, from whence he was perfuaded to return ; no doubt, upon the most facred affurances of pardon. Ashkari having preferred a petition to the king, foliciting his releafement from prifon, in order to perform a pilgrimage to Mecca, was now fent to Soliman, governor of Buduchshan, to proceed to Balich. Ashkari died in the year nine hundred and fixty one, in his way croffing the Arabian defarts.

Camiran was, in the mean time, levying troops among the Afghans, and carrying on a private correspondence with Mahommed at Ghizni. The treason was discovered, and the old traitor condemned to death. Humaioon had, by this time, marched against Camiran; but he was furprized in his camp, near Chiber, the twenty-first of Zicada, nine hundred and fifty eight, in the night; upon which occasion prince Hindal loft his life. Camiran, however, gained no advantage but the death of Prince Hindal his brother, being overthrown by Humaioon, and obliged to take shelter again among the Patans. The king, after this victory, returned to Cabul, and in gratitude to the memory of Hindal, who had fo well expiated his former difobedience, by his fervices and blood, he gave the daughter of that prince, Rixia Sultana, to his fon Akbar in marriage. He conferred, at the fame time, upon the royal pair, all the wealth of Hindal; and appointed Akbar to the command of his uncle's troops, and to his government of Ghizni.

The king marched into their country, which he laid waste with fire and fword. Finding, at last, that they got nothing but mischief to themselves by adhering to Camiran, they with-held their aid, and expelled him from their country.

He flies to Selim. The defolate Camiran fled to Hindoftan, and was reduced to folicit the protection of the emperor Selim, whom he beheld, by his own bafenefs, ruling his father's empire. But it was not to be expected that Selim would treat Camiran favorably. The unfortunate fugitive fled from the court of Delhi, and, like a poor vagabond, fought protection from the Indian prince of Nagercot. Being from thence driven by Selim, he fled among the Gickers.

Hyder, one of the posterity of Timur, reigned then in Cashmire. He requested the affistance of Humaioon, to quell some disturbances in his kingdom. The king accordingly marched towards India, and croffed the Indus. Adam, the prince of the Gickers, fearing the king's resentment, for giving protection to Camiran, imprisoned that unhappy man, and acquainted the king, that he was ready to deliver him over to any body he should be pleased to fend. The king dispatched Monim to Adam, and Camiran was accordingly given up to him, and brought to the royal prefence.

The Mogul chiefs, to a man, folicited that he fhould be put to death, that he might diftrefs them no more; but the king would, by no means, confent to embrue his hands in the blood of his brother, however deferving he was of death. He was, at last, though much against his will, neceffitated to permit them to render Camiran blind, by means of antimony. Some days after this fentence was executed upon the unfortunate prince, the king went to fee him. Camiran immediately role, and walked fome steps forward to meet him, faying : " The glory of the king will not be diminished by visiting the un-" fortunate." Humaioon immediately burfting into tears, wept very bitterly: Camiran endeavoured to comfort him, by confeffing the justice of his own punishment, and, by way of expiating his crimes, requefted leave to proceed on a pilgrimage to Mecca. His requeft was granted, and he went by the way of Sind. Having refided three years in Mecca, he died in that And dies place, in the year nine hundred and fixty four. He left one fon, Carem, who was fome time after his father's death affaffinated, by the order of Akbar, in the fort of Gualier; Camiran had alfo three daughters.

Humaioon being now delivered from the reftlefs fpirit of Camiran, began to extend his dominions. He first turned his arms towards Cashmire. Selim, the Patan emperor of India, having, at that time, advanced to the Indus, his omrahs reprefented to Humaioon, that, if he should enter Cashmire, as there was but one pass through which he could return ; that Selim might block up his rear, and reduce him to great diffrefs. The king, however, would not listen to their reprefentations; but marched towards Cashmire. Having advanced about half way, a mutiny arole in the army, and the greatest part of the omrahs refused to proceed; while others actually returned to Cabul. This obliged Humaioon to take a circuit, by the way of Sind, ordering a fort, called Bickeram, to be built in his rout. In Bickeram he left a Returns. garrifon underone Secunder.

In the course of this year, Humaioon became jealous of Byram, by the calumny of fome of his courtiers, who pretended, that that great man was carrying on intrigues with the Perfian government. The king, marched towards Candahar, by the way of Ghizni. Byram, who was quite innocent of the charge, when he heard of the king's approach, came out, with five or fix friends only. to congratulate him upon his arrival, and to lay his offerings at his feet. The king foon plainly perceived that he had been abused, and fatisfying Byram with reasons for his coming, spent two months there in feftivity. The calumniators of Byram were difgraced, and he himfelf loaded with favors. Byram was, however, afraid, that the repeated calumnies of his enemies might find way at last into the king's mind; he therefore earnestly requefted, that the government fhould be bestowed on some other chief, and that he might be permitted to attend his fovereign. But the king would by no means confent to a thing, which might have the appearance of a flur upon the conduct of his faithful fervant. When they parted, Byram obtained the district of Dawir, for two of his friends, who remained with him.

HUMAIOON.

The king being one day upon a hunting party, told fome of his A. D. 1554omrahs, that he was very uneafy in his mind, about the execution of his defigns upon Hindostan. Some of them, who were defirous to make the attempt, confulted among themfelves, and hit upon a fuccefsful stratagem to bring the king to an immediate refolution. They therefore told him, that there was an old method of devination, by fending a perfon before, and afking the names of the three first perfons he met, from which a conclufion, good or bad, might be formed, according to their meaning. The king, being naturally fuperflitious, ordered this to be done. He fent three horfemen in front, who were to come back and acquaint him of the answers they received. The first horseman who returned told the king, that he had met with a traveller whofe name was Dowlat *. The next brought advice, that he met a man who called himfelf Murâd +. And the third, that he met with a villager, whofe name was Sâdit 1.

The king discovered great joy upon this occasion, and though Humaicon he could only collect fifteen thousand horse, determined to undertake an expedition into India. He left to Monim the government of Cabul, and the tuition of his young fon Hakim, and in the month of Siffer, nine hundred and fixty-two, began his march from his capital. The king was joined at Peshawir by Byram, with all his veterans from Candahar. When he had croffed the western branch of the Indus, he appointed Byram his captain general, and ordered him to lead the van with Chizer, Tirdi Beg, Secunder, and Shubiani.

Upon the approach of the king, Tatar, the Patan governor Rhotas evaof the province of the five branches of the Indus, who commanded the new fort of Rhotas, evacuated the place and fled to

From Lahore he difpatched Byram to Sirhind, and that able general poffeffed himfelf of all the country as far as that place. The king having received intelligence, that a body of Afghans, commanded by Shubas and Nifir, were affembled at Dibalpoor, he ordered Abul Mali, whom he used to honor with the name of fon, with a ftrong detachment against them. Abul Mali having overthrown them, returned with the plunder of their camp to Lahore.

which is overthrown by Byram.

The Patan emperor Secunder had, in the mean time, ordered Tatar and Hybut, with an army of thirty or forty thousand horfe from Delhi, against Humaioon; but Byram, notwithflanding their great fuperiority in number, was determined to rifque a battle, croffed the Suttuluz, advanced boldly to meet them, and pitched his camp upon the banks of the river Bidgwarra. It being winter, the Patans kindled great fires of wood in their camp, which Byram observing, he croffed the river with a thousand chosen horse, and advancing near their camp without being difcovered, began to gall those who crouded round the fires with arrows, which raifed an uproar in the camp. But the Patans, inftead of extinguishing their fires, which prevented them from feeing the enemy, while the enemy had a fair view of them, by means of the light, threw on more wood. In the mean time, the whole of Byram's army having croffed the river, fell upon the Patans from all fides, routed them, and took all their elephants, baggage, and a number of horfes. Byram fent the elephants to the king, at Lahore, and encamped at Matchiwarrah. He difperfed detachments on all fides, and poffeffed himfelf of all the country, almost to the walls of Delhi. The king was greatly rejoiced when he heard of this victory, and conferred upon upon Byram the titles of Lord of Lords, the grateful friend, and the grief-expelling companion.

When the news arrived of the overthrow of Tatar, the emperor, Secunder exacted an oath of fidelity from his omrahs, and marched with eighty thousand horse, a great train of artillery, and a number of elephants, towards the Indus. Byram thought proper to fhut himfelf up in Sirhind, and to provide against a fiege, by laying in provisions, and throwing up new works. Secunder encamped before Sirhind, and Byram fent continual letters to Lahore, to haften the king to his relief. Humaioon accordingly marched, joined Byram, made repeated fallies from the city, and greatly diffreffed the enemy in their camp.

Upon the laft day of Rigib, when the young prince Akbar was going the rounds of the camp, the Patans drew up their forces, and offered battle. This had the intended effect on the impetuous young prince, who could not bear to be infulted. He accordingly having obtained his father's permiffion, drew out the army. Humaioon gave the command of the right to Byram, and the left to Secunder, which was composed of the troops of Abdulla the Ufbeck, Abul Mali, Alla, and Tirdi Beg, who were to begin the action. He took post in perfon in the center, and advanced flowly towards the enemy, who waited the attack. The left wing having charged, according to the orders which they had received, the enemy were broke, and they never after recovered from the confusion into which they were thrown. The action, however, continued warm for fome time; Humaioon and his gallant general Byram difplayed great conduct, while the young prince Akbar diffinguished himself with acts of personal valour. The Moguls were fo animated by the behaviour of that young

The empire transferred from the Patans to the Moguls. This victory decided the fate of the empire, which fell for ever from the Patans. Secunder, the Ufbeck, and fome other omrahs were detached to take poffeffion of Delhi and Agra, which they effected without oppofition. Humaioon conferred the government of the province of Punjab upon Abul Mali, and ordered him to purfue the fugitive emperor. In the month of Ramzan the king entered Delhi, in triumph, and became, a fecond time, Emperor of Hindoftan. Byram, to whofe valor and conduct the king, in a great meafure, owed his reftoration, was now rewarded with the first offices in the flate, and had princely effates affigned to him. Tirdi Beg was appointed to the government of Delhi; the fuperintendency of Agra was given to Secunder, and Alli Kulli was made viceroy of Merat and Simbol; for which department he fet out with a confiderable force.

Akbar fent against Secunder. As Abul Mali, on account of difputes with the omrahs in his army, had permitted Secunder to become daily more formidable, the king difpatched his fon Akbar, under the direction of Byram, against him. Much about this time, a man of low birth, who became famous, under the name of Kumber, raifed a rebellion in Simbol, and, collecting a great force, plundered the provinces between the rivers. He was, however, on the fifth of the first Ribbi, nine hundred and fixty three, defeated and flain by Alli Kulli, and the infurrection totally quashed.

HUMAIOON.

In the evening of the feventh of the first Ribbi, Humaioon walked out upon the terrace of the library, and fat down there for fome time to enjoy the fresh air. When the emperor began to defcend the fteps of the ftair from the terrace, the crier, according to cuftom, proclaimed the time of prayers. The king, conformable to the practice of religion, flood ftill upon this occafion, and repeated the Culma *, then fat down upon the fecond ftep of the ftair till the proclamation was ended. When he was going to rife he supported himself upon a staff, which unfortunately flipt upon the marble, and the king fell headlong from the top to the bottom of the stair. He was taken up infensible, and laid upon his bed; he foon recovered his fpeech, and the phyficians administered all their art: But in vain, for upon the eleventh, about funset, his soul took her flight to Paradise. He was buried in the new city, upon the banks of the river; and a noble tomb was erected over him, fome years after, by his fon Akbar. Humaioon died at the age of fifty one, after a reign of twenty five years, both in Cabul and India.

The mildness and benevolence of Humaioon were exceffive: If there can be any excess in virtues to noble as thefe. His affection to his brothers proved the fource of all his misfortunes; but they rewarded him with ingratitude and contempt. He was learned, a lover of literature, and the generous patron of the men of genius, who flourished in his time. In battle he was valiant and enterprizing: But the clemency of his disposition hindered him from using his victories in a manner which fuited the vices of the times. Had he been less mild and religious, he would have been a more fuccessful prince: Had he been a worfe man, he would have been a greater monarch.

THE celebrated Abul Fazil, the most elegant writer of India, A. D. 1555. has given to the world the hiftory of the renowned Akbar*, in three volumes, called Akbar namma. From that historian, we shall chiefly extract the most material transactions of this reign.

When Humaioon became infenfible after his fall, the Mogul chiefs difpatched one Chuli express to Punjab, to acquaint Akbar of the accident which had befallen his father. Not many days after, the news of his father's death came to the prince at Callanore. The omrahs, who were present, after expressing their grief for the deceased, raifed Akbar to the throne, on the second of the fecond Ribbi, in the year 963, being then thirteen years and nine months old.

The first orders isfued from the throne, after dispatching the letters of proclamation, were, to prohibit the exaction of the usual prefent of money, from the farmers; to let all goods pass tollfree, and to prevent the injurious practice of prefling labourers to the war. upon him the honorable title of the noble Baba *. He told that able man, that he reposed his whole trust in his prudence and good conduct, in this perilous fituation of affairs, and defired that he might take whatever measures he thought most conducive to retrieve his affairs. He, at the fame time, affured Byram, in the most folemn manner, that he would give no attention to any malicious infinuations which might be fuggested to the royal ear by his enemies. The young prince having thus expressed the genuine fentiments of his foul to Byram, he made him fwear, by the foul of his father Humaioon, and by the head of his own fon, that he would be faithful to the great truft, which was now reposed in him. A council of war was immediately called, in which Byram prefided. The majority of the omrahs were of opinion, that as the enemy confifted of above a hundred thoufand horfe, while the royal army fcarce amounted to twenty thoufand, it would be most prudent to retreat to Cabul. Byram strenuoufly oppofed this measure, and was almost fingular in his opinion, which was to give battle inftantly to the enemy. The young king joined Byram's fentiments with fo much warmth and gallant anxiety, that the chiefs cried out, in rapture, that their lives and fortunes were at his fervice.

The king marches sgainft Himu. Immediately hoftilities being refolved upon, Chizer Chan, who was married to the king's aunt, the fultana Gulbâdin, was appointed governor of Lahore, to act againft Secunder; while the king himfelf prepared, in perfon, to chaftife Himu. He marched to Sirhind, and was there joined by his defeated omrahs, who had affembled at that place. The king being out, one day, at the diversion of hawking, Byram, called Tirdi to his tent, and ordered him to be beheaded for abandoning Delhi, where he might have defended himfelf, and for other unmilitary crimes, with which he was juftly charged. When Akbar returned, Byram waited upon him, and informed him of what he had done; he excufed himfelf for not acquainting the king of his intentions, by infinuating, that he was certain his royal clemency was fo great, that notwithftanding Tirdi's crimes, he would have forgiven him; which, at fuch a time, would be attended with very dangerous confequences, as the hopes of the Moguls refted upon every individual's ftrict performance of duty. He affirmed, that negligence was, in fuch a critical fituation, as great a crime as treafon, and ought to meet with an equal punifhment. But that on the other hand, defert fhould meet with reward: for a dangerous crifis, is the feafon of ftrict juffice, in both refpects. Without his reward, the foldier becomes languid and difcontented; when he fears no punifhment, he is negligent and infolent.

The king faw into the propriety of the meafure, but he fhuddered at the inhumanity of the punifhment. He, however, thanked Byram for the fervice which he had done him; and, indeed, though the policy of that minifter was fevere, it had the intended effect among the omrahs. They faw that they had nothing to hope, and every thing to fear from faction and bad behaviour; and therefore, they became very obedient to the orders of Byram.

The king foon after marched from Sirhind towards Delhi, detaching Secunder, Abdulla, Inderani, Lal Sultan, Mudjenu, and others, under the command of the gallant Zeman, who had been created captain general, fome miles in his front. Himu, who had affumed the title of Raja, in Delhi, having attached Sadi, and other Afghan omrahs to his intereft, marched out of that city with all his forces; which, by the loweft Ff 2 compu-

He detached, in front, a great body of Afgans, with fome artillery, which falling in with the Mogul captain general, were defeated with the lofs of all their guns, which proved a fignal advantage to the king. Himu having arrived at Panniput, heard that the king was advanced very near him. He divided his elephants, in which he greatly confided, among his principal officers.

A general action.

In the morning of the fecond of Mohirrim, 964, the captain general, who had been, by that time, joined by the whole army except a few, who remained to guard the king, drew up in order of battle, and waited the attack. Himu began the action with his elephants, in hopes of frightening the Mogul cavalry, who were not accustomed to those enormous animals. -He, however, found that he was deceived. The Mogul chiefs, either from a fear of the fate of Tirdi, or from a nobler caufe, their own valor, attacked Himu with fuch refolution, after he had penetrated the center of their army, where Zeman commanded, that the elephants, galled with lances, arrows and javelins, became quite outrageous, and fubmitting no longer to command, fell back and difordered the Patan ranks. Himu, who rode a prodigious elephant, still continued the action with great vigor, at the head of four thousand horse, in the very heart of the Moguls; being at last pierced through the eye, with an arrow, the greatest part of his troops, fearing that his wound was mortal, forfook him. But that valiant man drew the eye out of the focket, with the arrow; and, in that terrible condition, continued the fight with unequalled refolution and courage. He encouraged the few who remained by his fide, and advanced through a bloody path which his weapons made; till a chief called Kulli firetched his fpear to kill the driver of Himu's elephant: that timorous wretch, to fave fave his own life, pointed to Himu, and addreffing him, by name, faid, he would carry him whitherfoever he pleafed. Kulli immediately furrounded him with a body of horfe, and carried him prifoner to Akbar, whom Byram, as upon him refted the hopes of all, detained in the rear.

When the unfortunate Himu was brought into the prefence, almoft expiring with his wounds, Byram told the king, that it would be a meritorious action in him, to kill that brave infidel with his own hand. Akbar, in compliance to the advice of his tutor, drew his fword, but only gently touched the head of the captive, burfting into tears of compafiion. Byram, looking fternly upon the king, infinuated, that the ill-timed clemency of his family, was the fource of all their misfortunes, and with one ftroke of the fabre, fevered Himu's head from his body.

Akbar took, in this action, fifteen hundred elephants, and all the artillery of the enemy. He immediately marched from the field, and took poffeffion of Delhi. From that city, he difpatched Pier Mahummud, manager of the private affairs of Byram, towards Mewat, to feize the treafure of Himu, which was deposited in that place. This fervice was accomplished, with fome loss on the fide of the Moguls; and the empire, in a great measure, returned to its former tranquillity.

Huffein, the grandfon of the celebrated Ifinaiel Suffvi advanced, this year, by the orders of his uncle Tamafp, emperor of Perfia, and laid fiege to Kandahar. After a fharp engagement before the walls, with Mahummud of Kandahar, who commanded in the place, as deputy of the minister Byram, the city fell into the hands of the Perfians. The king marches towardsPunjab.

Akbar, having received intelligence of this double difaster, put his army in motion, and marched towards the Indus. Secunder, who had advanced as far as Callanore, retreated upon the king's approach, to the fort of Mancot, which had been built by Selim, the late emperor. Akbar befieged Secunder, in that fortrefs, for the fpace of fix months : he then began to treat about furrendering the place, upon conditions; and Chan Azim being fent into the fort to fettle the terms of capitulation, Secunder proposed to that chief, to give his ion, as a hostage to the king, for his future obedience, if he himfelf should be permitted to retire to Bengal. This being granted, on the part of Akbar, Rhiman, the fon of Secunder, was, in the month of Ramzan, 964, brought to the king, with prefents, confifting chiefly of elephants. Secunder was permitted to retire to Bengal, and Mancot was delivered up to Akbar. The king left a trufty governor in the place, and proceeded to Lahore.

Byram difgufted. Byram, the regent, being privately difgusted at favors which the king had conferred upon some persons, whom he suspected to be enemies to himself, for some days, refused to come to the royal prefence. The king, in the mean time, happened to amuse himself with an elephant fight, and the outrageous animals chanced to run over the tents of Byram. The minister immediately suspected, that this was done designedly by the king, and he sent to acquaint him: "That he was forry to see that he had disobliged the king: but that, if he deserved Akbar's dislike, he would be glad to know the crime he had committed, that he might be the better able to make his excuse, and then, retire for ever from the presence." The king was touched with an imputation, which his foul abhorred; but he condefcended to acquaint Byram, that the circumftance, from which his ungenerous fufpicions arofe, was a mere accident. This, however, did not fatisfy the minifter, who ftill continued to fufpect that the king's mind was eftranged from him.

an

The king, foon after this transaction, marched from Lahore to Delhi. Chaja Callan, who was proud of the dignity of the Mogul family, of which he was defeended, and of the fignal fervices which he had rendered to the king, fet himfelf up to oppose Byram in his administration. That vindictive minister, to get rid of his antagonist, condemned him to death upon very flight pretences, which raised great commotions among the omrahs. The king also expressed his diflike of this violent proceeding; for the whole had been done without his orders.

Upon this occafion, high words arofe between the king and his minifter; and the former, in a few days, fet out for Agra. Though the king did not difcover to any man what had paffed between him and Byram, the caufe of his journey was no fecret at court. The people fided with their young king, in the quarrel, and the power of the minifter began to decline vifibly every day. The enraged Byram, in the mean time, endeavored to recover his authority by rigor and feverity.

Much about this time, Pier Mahummud, who had been formerly a retainer of Byram, was, on account of his great abilities, preferred to the high office of tutor to the king. He foon engroffed a confiderable fhare of the king's favor; and the pride of advancement began to fwell in his heart. He used often to make the nobles, who attended his levee, to wait whole hours, and, at laft, to fend them a meffage that he could not fee them: which in-

Byram himfelf was little better treated, one day, by Mahummud; and he took it fo much amifs, that, by virtue of his own authority, he fent the tutor prifoner to Biana, from thence he banifhed him to Guzerat, and there fhipped him off for Mecca, to profecute his devotion.

The artful minifter, perceiving Akbar's rage, projected an expedition against Gualier, to divert his attention to another object. That fortrefs was then in the poffeffion of Bibil, one of the flaves of the emperor Selim, the fon of Shere, who held it for Mahummud, the late emperor of Delhi, who ftill kept up the imperial title in Bengal. Bibil, hearing of Akbar's defign against him, wrote to Ram Shaw, a defcendant of the great Raja Man Singh, that as his ancestors had been masters of Gualier, and as he did not think himfelf capable to hold out the place against the king, he would put it into the possibility of the Raja for a reasonable fum.

Gualier delivered up.

Ram Shaw, glad of the offer, immediately moved towards the fort: but Kika, who poffeffed an eftate from the king, in the neighbourhood of Gualier, raifed all his vaffals, and attacking the Indian prince, defeated and drove him into the dominions of Rana. Kika, immediately after this victory, returned and invefted the fortrefs. Bibil, feeing himfelf thus befieged, made overtures of capitulation. The king being informed of this circumftance, ordered one of his officers, with a detachment, to give Bibil the terms he required, and to feize upon the fortrefs. The traitor accordingly, being gratified with fome money and a promife of future favor, delivered up the important caffle of Gualier.

In the course of the fame year, the Mogul captain general, the noble Zemân, to wipe off fome afperfions under which he lay, exerted himfelf in a particular manner in the king's fervice; for he fubdued all the provinces near Jionpoor and Benaris, which till then were in the hands of the adherents of the Patan dynasty.

Mahommed Ghori, the brother of the famous Phul, who Transactions having been firmly attached to the Mogul intereft, during the late fupremacy of the Patans, had fled to Guzerat, this year returned to court with his family, and was very favorably received by the king, who ordered Byram to provide for him in a manner fuitable to his dignity. Ghori, trufting too much to the king's authority, neglected to pay that court to the minister which that haughty though able man expected : Byram therefore took every poffible means to avoid to ferve Ghori, and made things fo very difagreeable to him, that he left the court and retired to his old family refidence at Gualier. This being reprefented to the king, revived his former difcontent against Byram. The artful regent foon obferved a visible alteration in the countenance of his fovereign. He therefore formed an expedition against Malava, to turn the king's active mind from the private politics of the court. Byram accordingly called Bahadur, the brother of the captain general Zemân from the province of Debalpoor, and gave him the command of the army deftined to act against Baz Bahadur, the Patan prince of Malava,

The king, much about this time, went out upon a hunting party, and made a progrefs as far as Secundra, within forty miles of Delhi, between the rivers. Mahim, his foster-brother joined him there, and told him, that his mother was extremely ill at Delhi, and was very defirous to fee the king. shapoor, an omrah of five thousand, who then commanded in the city, came out to meet Akbar with prefents: that omrah, was in great perplexity how to act. He was affured, that Byram would impute the king's journey to Delhi to his intrigues, and would not fail to get rid of him, as he had done of Mufa Beg, a chief, whom under a like pretext, he found means to remove; he therefore acquainted the king of his apprehenfions, and begged he might be permitted to make a pilgrimage to Mec-The king was very much affected upon hearing this reca. queft, by observing how formidable the power of his minister was become to all his friends; but after he had confidered the many obligations under which he and his family lay to that able man, he could not think of removing him: to leffen, however, in fome measure, the apprehensions of Ahmed, the king wrote to the regent that he had, of his own accord, proceeded to Delhi, and not at the inftigation of any perfon, but merely to pay his respects to his mother; that therefore a letter from him to appeafe the minds of those who were apprehensive of his difpleafure, would be extremely neceffary. Byram returned for answer, that " he should never entertain resentment against any whom the king was pleafed to honor with his favor." He moreover fent Mahommed Seistani and Tirdi Beg to Delhi, with affurances of his loyalty and implicit obedience to the king's royal pleafure.

A faction accufes Byram to the king. In the mean time, Ahmed, finding the king difpofed to protect him, and to hear accufations againft Byram, gave a loofe to his tongue one day in public againft that minifter. He was joined by the whole court, whom he had previoufly attached to his intereft. was alarmed, and thought it necessiary to curtail the regent's authority. When, therefore, Mahommed and Tidri Beg arrived, instead of being admitted to an audience, they were immediately - imprisoned.

This breach between the king and Byram, is related with Tranfactions other particulars by the celebrated historian Abul Fazil. One day at Agra, fays that great man, one of the king's elephants in the rutting feafon, attacked an elephant of Byram and killed him. Byram, for this offence, commanded that the keeper of the royal elephants should be put to death, without giving any notice to the emperor. Akbar was greatly difpleafed with this piece of cruelty, especially when he found that the poor man was innocent, having loft all his command over the outrageous animal. Soon after, continues Abul Fazil, as Byram was taking his pleafure in a barge on the river, one of the elephants, which had been carried down to the water, run furioufly against the barge, and had almost funk it, before, by the uncommon efforts of the tider, he was brought to obedience. The minister, naturally of a fufpicious and unforgiving temper, imagined that these were actually plots laid against his life; and he publickly petitioned the king to punish the rider of the elephant. The king, to appeafe Byram, and to remove all fuspicions, ordered that the elephant-rider should be fent to him, to be punished at difcretion. But Byram, either to make an example to others, or to gratify his refentment against the innocent man, who might even be faid to have faved his life, ordered him alfo to be put to death.

The king was highly incenfed by thefe two inftances of Byram's prefumption and cruelty. His difpleafure became vifible to the court; and there were not wanting many, who made it their bufinefs, by private infinuations, to encrease his refent-ment. The king, at length, came to the refolution of depriving Byram of the reins of government, which required fome delicacy in the prefent fituation of affairs. Some authors mention a fcheme fuggefted to Akbar by his nurfe *, upon this occafion, to get poffeffion of the feals, which were in Byram's poffeffion. They alfo fay, that fhe difcovered to him that minifter's defign to confine him, which fhe had accidentally heard, in a converfation between Byram and the queen-mother. This, fay they, was the circumftance that determined Akbar to leave Agra. Abul Fazil mentions nothing of this affair; for that hiftorian informs us, with great probability, that the whole was concerted between the two omrahs Adam and Mahim Aniga, on the part of the young king, who now began to be tired of a tutor, and thought he was capable of acting for himfelf. But to return from this digreflion.

Byram difgraced, When it became public that the deputies from Byram had been imprifoned by the king, every body predicted the ruin of the minister, and endeavored to shake him off as fast as possible. They slocked daily to Akbar by hundreds to Delhi. That young prince immediately issued a proclamation throughout the empire, that he had taken the administration upon himself, and that henceforth no orders, but his own, should be obeyed, Byram being difmissed from the regency.

Akbar, and ftirred him up to rebel: but Bahadur, repenting of his refolution, a quarrel enfued between them, and Mali was driven towards the Indus. From the banks of that river he fled to Guzerat, and from thence to Jionpoor, from whence the captain general Zemân, fent him prisoner to Agra. He was taken and condemned to perpetual imprifonment in the fort of Biana.

Byram, finding that he had no farther hopes from the king, began to form a refolution of going to Malava, to reduce that country, and found an independant kingdom. To accomplish his purpose, he proceeded to Biana, and called Bahadur and other omrahs, who had been fent upon the expedition to Malava before him. But perceiving that he was deferted by those chiefs, . in whom he placed his greatest confidence, he began to despair of fucceeding in that enterprize. He, therefore, releafed Mali from his confinement, intending by his affiftance, and that of the captain general, who commanded at Jionpoor, to attack the Patans of Bengal, and to fix himfelf in that kingdom. But before he had proceeded many days on this fcheme, he changed his refolution, and took the way of Nagore, with a defign to make a pilgrimage to Mecca; upon which, Bahadur, Kika, and many other omrahs, who had determined to follow his fortunes, took leave of him. But fo irrefolute was the unfortunate Byram become, at a time too when firmnefs, conftancy, and perfeverance were abfolutely neceffary, that, like a perfon infatuated, he had no fooner reached Nagore, after having loft all his friends, than he changed again his refolution of going to Mecca, and began to affemble troops, with a view to conquer the province of the five rivers, diftinguished by the name of Punjab. kingdom of Labal. to mobility

The king's meffage to him. When the king was informed of this new fcheme of Byram, he fent the noble Shufvini, his own preceptor, with a meffage to him to the following purpofe. "Till now our mind has been taken up with our education, and the amufements of youth, and it was our royal pleafure, that you fhould be refponfible for our empire. But as it is now our intention to govern our people, by our own judgment and pleafure, let our well-wifher contract his fkirts from the bufinefs of the world, and retire to Mecca, without thirfting after vanity and ambition."

He refolves to go to Mecca.

Byram, upon receiving this letter, profeffed paffive obedience, and fent his enfigns of ftate, elephants, banners and drums, by the hand of Huffein Kulli, to the king. He then returned to Nagore, to prepare for Mecca, being now abandoned by all his friends, except Willi Beg, Ifmaiel Kulli, Shaw Kulli, Haffen Gadda, and Chaja Muziffer, the reft having joined the king. Among the latter, was the famous Mali, who, coming up to Akbar, when hunting, neglected to difmount, when he made his obeifance, for which he was immediately confined.

Byram having proceeded on his pilgrimage as far as Bickanere, repented of his refolution, and returned again to Nagore, where he began to affemble troops. The king being informed of that proceeding, marched to Jidger. Pier Mahummud, being now returned from his banifhment, to which he had been condemned by Byram, was thought a proper perfon to carry on the war againft him. He was accordingly dignified with titles by the king, and fent with an army towards Nagore. The king, in the mean time, returned to Delhi, and fent orders to Monim, the governor of the kingdom of Cabul, to repair to court.

Byram,

Byram, upon the approach of Pier Mahummud, fet out for Punjab, and was clofely purfued by that omrah. When he arrived at the fort of Tibberhind, he threw all his baggage into that place, which was commanded by one of his adherents, by name Shere; but this traitor no fooner had got Byram's effects into the place, than he began to reckon upon them as his own, and turned out the guard which the unfortunate minister had fent to take charge of his baggage. Byram fet out from thence for Debalpoor, which was then governed by one of his old friends, Mahommed the Ufbeck. When he came near the place, he fent his fecretary, Muziffer Ali, to wait upon him, but that ungrateful man, pretending to be affronted at Byram's request, confined the fecretary, and fent him to the king. Byram, who had conceived great hopes from his friendship, was astonished at a behaviour fo common to men in adverfity, and fet out, in great perturbation of mind, towards Jallender.

The king had, by this time, recalled Pier Mahummud, and Defeated, appointed Azim to reduce Punjab, and to quell the rebellion of Byram. Azim coming up foon after with Byram, at Matchiwarrah, a battle enfued, which was maintained with great bravery on both fides; Azim's line being broke by the enemy: but at length, feveral of Byram's principal officers being killed, he was defeated, and obliged to fly to the mountains of Sewalic. After this victory, the king appointed Chaja Hirrivi to the government of Delhi, by the title of the noble Afiph, and marched in perfon to Lahore. When Akbar had reached Ludhana, Monim met him, in his way from Cabul, and being gracioufly received, was honoured with the title of firft of the nobles, and made prime minifter of the empire.

The king's army having advanced near the mountains of Sewalic, a detachment of light horse entered the hills, where the Zemindars of that country, had convened in support of Byram to guard the passes: but they were driven from post to post; upon which, Byram, in great diffrefs, fent his flave Jemmal to the prefence, to reprefent his unfortunate fituation, and to implore the king's mercy. Akbar immediately difpatched the omrah Abdulla, a native of Sultan-poor, with affurances of his clemency, and to bring the unhappy Byram to court. Accordingly, in the month of the fecond Ribbi, he was received, at fome diftance from the camp, by a confiderable number of chiefs, whom the king had ordered to meet him. He was brought into the prefence with every possible mark of favor and distinction. When he appeared within fight of the king, he hung his turban round his neck, and fuddenly advancing, threw himfelf, in tears, at the foot of the throne. The king inftantly ftretched forth his hand, ordered him to rife, and placed him in his former station, at the head of the omrahs. To difpel at once his uneafinefs and grief, the king honored him with a splendid drefs, and spoke to him after the following manner. " If the lord Byram loves a military life, he shall have the government of Calpé and Chinderi, in which he may exercife his martial genius : if he chufes rather to remain at court, our favor shall not be wanting to the great benefactor of our family : but fhould devotion engage the foul of Byram to perform a pilgrimage to Mecca, he shall be escorted in a manner fuitable to his dignity." Byram replied: " The royal confidence and friendship for me, must be now diminished; nay, they are past the hopes of recovery. Why then should I remain in the presence? The clemency of the king is enough for me, and his forgiveness for my late errors, a fufficient reward for my former fervices. Let then the unfortunate Byram turn his face from this world to another, and purfue his pilgrimage pilgrimage to Mecca." The king affented to his requeft, and ordered a proper retinue for him with 50,000 rupees a year, to fupport his dignity. Byram foon after took leave of the king, who with a few attendants left the camp and went to Agra.

Byram took the way of Guzerat, with an intention to proceed by fea to Mecca. When he arrived in the fuburbs of the capital of Guzerat, which was then governed by Mufi, an omrah of the Afgan, imperial family of Lodi, on the part of Actemad fovereign of the country, he was accofted by Mubarick Lohani, whofe father in the battle with Himu, Byram had killed. The wretch pretended to embrace the unfufpecting Byram, drew a dagger and bafely ftabbed him to the heart. A mob of Afgans fell immediately upon Byram's retinue, and plundered them. This murder happened on the 24th of the first Jemmad, in the 968th of the Higerah.

Towards the close of the year 968, the emperor appointed Adam and his favorite tutor Pier Mahummud to command an army defined for the conquest of Malava. Baz Bahadur, in whose hands that country was then, spent his time in luxurious pleasures at Saringpoor, when he was informed of the expedition which the Moguls meditated against him: but the enemy had advanced within twenty miles of his capital, before he could prevail with himself to quit the pillows of indolence; and then in the best manner the time and his own confusion would permit, he prepared for action. But the brave Moguls upon the first onset shows of battle, and fent him with streaming eyes and a broken heart towards Burhanpoor.

Akbar fearing from this behaviour, that he entertained treasonable intentions, put the royal standard in motion towards him. When the imperial enfigns appeared before Shakeran, the governor of that fort on the part of Bas Bahadur, delivered it up to the king. Akbar from thence made a fudden excursion by night, and in the morning arrived before Saringpoor, the capital of Malava. He met Adam coming out with an intention to befiege Shakeran : he permitted that omrah to pay his refpects, and then he carried him back to the city. Adam fuspecting the king's displeasure and the cause of his visit, laid all the treafure and fpoil at his feet : he excufed himfelf by alledging, that he referved every thing till he fhould have the honour of prefenting them to Akbar in perfon. The king faw through his defigns, but preferring clemency to rigour, he drew the pen of forgiveness over his crime.

Akbar kills an enormous tygrefs. The king foon after returned towards Agra; hunting one day on the way near Narvar, a great royal tygrefs with five young ones took the road before him. Akbar advanced to the animal, while his retinue flood trembling with fear and aftonifhment to behold the event. The king having meditated his blow, fpurred on his horfe towards the fierce tygrefs, whofe eyes flamed with rage, and with one ftroke of his fabre, cut her acrofs the loins and ftretched her dead upon the ground. The omrahs who were prefent, in excefs of joy, ran to kifs his royal ftirrup, and offer up their thanks to God for his prefervation.

Bahadur the brother of the captain general, diftinguished himfelf in a very particular manner in this action; fo that the two brothers were effeemed the boldeft warriors of the age: but reckoning too much on their fervices, they neglected to fend to the king the elephants which they had taken in the battle, which were always confidered as royal property. The king, though he gave to the brothers all due praife for their valour, would by no means permit any violation of his laws or encroachment upon his prerogative : this determined him to march towards Jionpoor, but when he arrived at Kurrah, the brothers, fenfible of his refolution and their own mifbehaviour, advanced to congratulate him with all the fpoils which they had taken, and other fuitable prefents. The king, whole generofity and clemency could be only equalled by his fpirit, returned all, except what belonged properly to the exchequer. At the fame time he gave them a gentle reproof for their neglect, and afterwards engaged their affections by his princely bounty and gracious favor. The prince Huffein having advanced near Merta, Jig Jal and Daís, who were principal men of that country, threw a detachment into the place and prepared for a fiege. Huffein invefted the fort, and began to carry on his approaches. In a few days he extended one of his mines under a baftion, and fprung it, by which a practicable breach was made. He advanced in perfon with a felect body of troops to the affault, while the enemy bravely filled the breach to oppose him. Tho' fresh supplies of troops mounted from time to time, they were fo warmly received, that Huffein was obliged to found a retreat, and the next morning he found that the breach was filled up by the Indian foldiers, who had continued to work, notwithstanding the fire he had kept up the whole night. The fiege being prolonged for fome months, the brave garrifon were unable to hold out longer, and defired to capitulate; their requeft was granted, and the terms were, that they should march out with all their arms and horfes. Jig Jal according to thefe terms left all his money and effects, and marched forth; but Dewan Dafs, who had been averse to the capitulation, collected five hundred of the garrison together, and having burnt all their effects, they rushed out of the place. Huffein having heard of this breach of the capitulation, ordered them to be attacked, and the Rajaputs on the other hand fought with fuch valour, that they cut their way through the Mogul army with the lofs of two hundred and fifty Huffein after having poffeffed himfelf of the fort, wrote an account of his victory to the king, and was honoured with particular favours.

Pier Mahummud, governor of Malava, a man of refolution, and abilities, took up his refidence in Shadi-abad-mendu, and carried on the war with Bas Bahadur with fuch fuccefs, that he entirely poffeffed himfelf of his dominions. He took the ftrong fort of Bijanagur, and put all the garrifon to the fword, as they obliged him to rifque an affault. Bas Bahadur having taken protection under the governor of Brampoor on the borders of the Decan, he fometimes by the aid of that chief, made incurfions into the territories of Malava, and kept the country in a ftate of hoftility. Pier Mahummud was obliged to march againft Brampoor, and having taken it, ordered a cruel maffacre of all the inhabitants, among whom was a number of philofophers and learned men, who refided in the place.

Before Pier Mahummud had left this place, Bas Bahadur having prevailed upon Mubarick and Tiffâl, the former the prince of Candez in the Decan, and the latter of Berar, to join him, advanced with a great army towards the Mogul, upon which he retreated to Bijanagur, his officers being all averfe to engage. However he refolved to halt at Bijanagur contrary to all their opinions, and to give battle to the enemy. He did it, but not being fupported by his officers, he was defeated, and being difmounted by a camel that attacked his horfe in croffing the rapid river Narbudda, he was drowned. Seid Beg the fon of Mufum Beg, of the imperial family of Suffvi, and absolute agent for the king of Persia, arrived much about this time at the court of Agra, in the character of an ambaffador, with valuable prefents, and received a prefent for himfelf of two lacks of rupees from the king. Azim, who had been, fome time before, appointed to the office of vizier, had acquired great influence in his ministerial department. Adam, who commanded at the first conquest of Malava, and by that exploit, had acquired great power in the prefence, attempted to bring about the prime minister's ruin, as fome courtiers had before done that of the famous Byram: but the intrigues of Adam were difcovered, and his calumnies reverted upon his own head. Stung with difappointed malice, he at last determined to act the affaffin himfelf. He accordingly one day in the audience chamber, while the minister was reading the Koran, according to cuftom, stabbed him under pretence that he took no notice of the falutation which Adam made him at his entrance, though he well knew, that at fuch a time it was not customary to make or return any compliments. Adam after having committed the murder, ascended one of the terraces, and stood there in hopes of the king's pardon, though he might otherwife have efcaped.

The king who had been afleep in the apartments of the ladies, hearing the noife that was made on this occasion, asked the caufe. When they informed him of what had happened, he arofe, and without changing his fleeping drefs, went up to the terrace in a great rage. He was flruck with horror when he faw the blood of his minister. Having approached the murderer with a fword in his hand, he drew it half out, but reflecting upon his own dignity, he returned it again into the fcabberd, and sternly asked the affaffin, Why have you killed my vizier ? The wretch, fearing that the king was going to kill him, feized his hands. This behaviour fo enraged Akbar, that difengaging himfelf, he ftruck him with a blow of his fift, and laid him fenfelefs at his feet. In this rage he ordered one of his attendants to throw the wretch over the wall, which was forty yards in height. Mahim Anigah, this unfortunate man's father, died with grief about a month after, and Monim, formerly governor of Cabul who was an abetter of the affaffination of the minister, fled to Lahore, where he was feized and fent to Agra: but as the proofs against him were not fufficient to condemn him, he was acquitted by the king, and had afterwards the address to work himself into favour.

The king conferred all the honours and eftates of his father The Gickers' upon Aziz, the eldeft fon of the deceafed vizier, excepting the offices of the Vizarit and Vakilit*. Not long after these transactions, Hussein, a prince of the pofterity of Timur, whom we have often mentioned, either ftruck with madnefs, or fome unknown apprehenfions, fled to Ajmere with all the forces intrusted by the emperor to his care. This revolt occafioned great diffurbances in that country, to quell which Huffein Kulli, the nephew of the regent Byram, was nominated to the government of Nagore, and ordered to proceed thither with a great force. Huffein having received intelligence of Kulli's march, left Ajmere in charge of one of his friends, and retreated to Jalore on the frontiers of the kingdom of Guzerat. Kulli proceeded to Ajmere, and poffeffed himfelf of that place by capitulation. Mali, the famous favorite of the emperor Humaioon, who had been releafed from his confinement upon promife of proceeding on a pilgrimage to Mecca, hearing of the rebellion of the prince Huffein on the way, returned and joined him. The king at that time taking the diversion of hunting at Muttra, received intelligence of the defeat of his troops, and fent another army against Mali. The rebel fled before the imperial forces to Punjab, and from thence to the prince Hakim, the king's brother at Cabul. Hakim gave to Mali his fifter in marriage, and raifed him to the first office in that kingdom, for which he by that time paid little or no homage to Akbar.

The ungrateful refugee, however, had not been many months in flation, before he aspired to the kingdom of Cabul, and basely affaffinated the prince Hakim's mother, his own mother-in-law, who was a woman of uncommon abilities, and might with truth be faid to have ruled that kingdom. He then pretended to act as regent for the young prince, who was still in his minority, with a view to get rid of him as foon as he could conciliate matters with the chiefs. In the mean time Soliman, prince of Buduchman, came against him, and cut off the opening flower of his ambition, by depriving him of his life. The king did not reft many days at Agra, before he fet out for Narvar to hunt elephants. He had ordered Abdulla the Ufbeck, who governed for him in Malava, to fend his trained elephants to affift in this amufement, which he neglected to do. The king was very much enraged at his difobedience, and made a fudden incursion into Malava, though the periodical rains were at their height. Mahummud, a native of Neishapoor, in the kingdom of Seiftan, governor of Saringpoor, joined the king by the way. When Akbar had reached Ugein, Abdulla, with all his forces and treasure, fled to Guzerat : the king purfued him about fifty miles, with a finall body of cavalry : the rebel flocal his ground, and fought with fuch fuccess, that Akbar thought proper to return from the purfuit to Mindu, where he furveyed the buildings erected there by the imperial family of the Chilligis. While Akbar remained in that city, Mubarick, king of Chandez in the Decan, paid him homage, and gave him his daughter in marriage. The king conferred the government of Malava upon one Shirra, and returned towards his capital. Upon the way, near the village of Sipiri, he fell in with a great herd of wild elephants. He ordered his cavalry to furround them, and he drove them, with great difficulty, into a fold conftructed for that purpose : one of the male elephants, of a prodigious fize, finding himfelf confined, ftrode over the ditch, bore down the wall and the pallifadoes before him, and made his way into

By the intrigues of Abdulla, the Ufbeck, fo often mentioned, there was a report propagated, that the king, on his account, had taken a diflike to all the Ufbeck race, and proposed to confine all the chiefs of that nation who were in his fervice. At that time, the kingdom of Gurrah * was governed by a queen, whofe name was Durgetti, famous for her beauty and accomplifhments: her dominions were about three hundred miles in length, and one hundred in breadth: yet fo flourifhing was the country, that in this fmall tract, there were about feventy thoufand towns and villages well inhabited; which had the good fortune never to have fallen under the dominion of foreigners.

Afaph, having heard of the riches of this country, diffurbed the peaceable inhabitants, unaccuftomed to the found of war, with conftant depredations; he at length marched against them with fix thousand horse, and about double that number of infantry. The queen, with fifteen hundred elephants, eight thoufand horse and some foot, prepared to oppose him. Like a bold Heroine she led on her troops to action, cloathed in armour, with a helmet upon her head, mounted in a castle upon an elephant, with her bow and quiver lying by her side, and a burnished lance in her hand. Their eagerness to engage, made them march in diforder towards the enemy, which the queen observing, commanded them to halt, and forming her line a new, gave her troops firict orders to march on flowly, as compact as poffible, and to obferve the fignal to engage, when it fhould be difplayed from the elephant of the royal flandard.

In this manner the received the enemy, whom the quickly repulfed, and preffing upon them, laid fix hundred Mogul horfemen dead on the field; the purfued the reft till the evening, with great flaughter. When night came on, the queen halted with her army, and gave them orders to wash and refresh themselves, that they might be prepared for a night attack upon the enemy, before they could recover from their confternation. But her minister, and the rest of her chiefs, less daring, and confequently lefs prudent than this heroine, opposed this falutary measure, and feditioully infifted on returning to the field of battle to bury their friends. She, accordingly, returned unwillingly; and, after the dead were burnt, again addreffed her chiefs, and folicited them, one by one, to accompany her to form the Mogul camp: none of them, however, had the fpirit to fecond her in this daring enterprize. They vainly imagined, that the enemy would of their own accord evacuate the country.

The chiefs of the little kingdom of Gurrah, foon found that they were fatally frustrated in their hopes. Alaph, to wipe away the difgrace which he had fuftained the day before, and finding what enemy he had to deal with, advanced in the morning towards the queen, with his artillery; which, in the preceding action, he had left behind him, on account of the badness of the roads. The queen, upon Afaph's approach, advanced to a narrow pafs, and prepared to oppose him. The Mogul, fcouring the pafs with his artillery, foon opened to himfelf a way into the plain beyond it, where the queen's army was drawn up in order of battle. The prince Biar, the queen's fon, a youth of great hopes, as foon as the Moguls came into the plain, made a refolute charge, and exhibited prodigies of valour. He repulsed the enemy twice, but in the third attack, being wounded, he became faint with loss of blood. When he was just falling from his horfe, his mother, who was mounted on an elephant in the front of the battle, observed her fon ready to expire. She immediately called to fome of her people to carry him back to the rear; many of them accordingly crowded around him, fome with a friendly intention to ferve him, but more to have an opportunity to quit the field. The loss of the prince, in short, together with the retreat of fo many with his perfon, ftruck a pannic into the reft, fo that the unfortunate queen was left only with three hundred men in the field. Durgetti, however, seemed no ways affected by her desperate fituation; she stood her ground with her former fortitude, till she received an arrow in her eye; she endeavoured to extricate it from the wound, but as fhe tugged it, part of the fteel broke fhort, and remained behind. In the mean time, another arrow paffed through her neck, which the alfo drew out, but nature finking under the pain, a dimness swam before her eyes, and the began to nod from fide to fide of the howdar *. She, however, recovered from her fainting by degrees ; and a brave officer of her houfhold, by name Adhar, who drove her elephant, fingly repulsed numbers of the enemy whitherfoever he turned the outragious animal. He begged permiffion, as the day was now irretrievable, to carry the queen from the field. She rejected the propofal with a noble difdain : " It is true, faid Shall we, for the fake of a lingering ignominious life, lofe that reputation and virtue which we have been fo folicitous to acquire? No: let your gratitude now repay that fervice for which I lifted up your head, and which I now require at your your hands. Hafte, I fay; let your dagger fave me from the crime of putting a period to my own exiftence."

Adhar burft into tears, and begged, that as the elephant was fwift of foot, he might be permitted to leave the field, and carry her to a place of fafety. In the mean time, the queen, finding that the enemy crowded faft around her, and that fhe muft be taken prifoner, fuddenly leaning forward, feized the dagger of Adhar, and plunging it into her bofom, expired. The death of the queen, rendered Afaph's victory compleat. Six Indian chiefs, upon their elephants, ftill flood firm: and afhamed of being outdone by a woman, dedicated their lives to revenge the death of the queen.

Afaph, a few days after this battle, laid fiege to the fortrefs of Jora, where all the treafures of this noble family had been for ten generations deposited. The hopes of gain rendered the Moguls defperate; they begun to attack the fort with uncommon refolution, till the place was taken. The young prince, now a little recovered from his wounds, bravely exerted what little ftrength he had left, lost his life in defence of his independence and kingdom. The unfortunate garrifon, according to their barbarous custom, had performed the joar *. This dreadful ceremony was performed after this manner: a house was filled with wood, ftraw and oil; the unfortunate victims were forced in, and fire fet to the horrid pile. When the bloody conquerors, who had brought this dreadful calamity upon the miferable Indians, entered the place, they found two women fiill alive, and untouched by the flames; one of them was called Camelawilli, the fifter of the deceased queen, and the other the daughter of the Indian prince of Biragur, who had been brought to be espoused by the young but unfortunate prince of Gurrah. These two ladies were referved by Afaph, for the king. The riches of the fortrefs of Jora, in gold, filver, jewels and precious effects were invaluable; of gold alone, there were found, in one treasury, one hundred and one chefts of mhers. When Afaph had glutted his avarice and ambition with the treasure and blood of this brave, though peaceable family, he took up his refidence in that country. His view was to maintain his conqueft against the king; and he, therefore, did not return to his government of Kurrah. That avarice, which prompted him to this public robbery, prevented him from prefenting the king with his part of the plunder. Out of a thousand elephants, which he had taken, though all should fall to the fhare of the king, he fent him only two hundred of the worft, and fent no part of the jewels and treasure. It was therefore this just demand which the king had upon Asaph, that made that ambitious omrah join in rebellion with the difaffected Ufbeck chiefs.

The king marches againftAfaph, falls fick and returns. The king having found that his general Lafkar could effect nothing againft Afaph, he determined to march in perfon into Gurrah. Having therefore left Narvar, he continued his rout for fome days towards Gurrah. Akbar being feized with a fever on account of the heat, which in that fandy foil was exceffive, he returned to Agra, difpatched Shahim Sellaori, Biddai, Amin, and other omrahs, againft Secunder the Ufbeck, by whom they were defeated, and the two laft taken prifoners. When the king had arrived at Kinnoge, he felected a body of horfe, and made an excursion towards Lucknow, the capital of the province of Oud, to furprize Secunder, the rebellious Ufbeck, who was in that place: but the rebel being informed of the emperor's approach, evacuated Lucknow, and fled to his affociate in treason, Zeman, the captain general, with whom he croffed the Ganges. The king proceeding to Jionpoor, Afaph fued for pardon, and by the mediation of the noble Mudgenu, was admitted to the prefence, and again reftored to favor, upon fettling his accounts concerning the plunder of Gurrah. A few days after his submission, Asaph was detached with five thousand chosen horse, against the enemy. He came to the ferry of Nirhin, and was opposed in croffing the river, but instead of making any dispositions to gain the passage, he fat down and passed the His misbehatime in riot and foolifh negociations, for which he had no authority. The king being informed of his negligence, ftripped him of his eftate. Afaph with his brother, relinguished his troops, and fet out with great expedition to Gurrah.

The king fent his general Monim, to take charge of the army which Afaph had forfaken; and the rebels in the mean time, under Secunder and Bahadur, croffed the Jumna, and raifed difturbances in the provinces between the rivers, while the captain general opposed the Imperial army at the Ganges. The king being informed of these motions, detached Bidda and other omrahs, under the command of the Amir Ulluck, to ftop the Longing Vost of aguest tasmic ing royat camp, a progrefs

He confirmed him in all his eftates and honors, which he had forfeited by his rebellion.

The Imperial army under Ul Muluck overthrown by the rebels.

Ul Muluck having come up with Secunder and Bahadur, was upon the point of engaging them, when he received a letter from Bahadur, acquainting him that his brother Zeman, had fent his mother with prefents to the king to intercede for pardon, and therefore that he would be glad to avoid extremities, till he heard the confequence of that negociation. Muluck, who had heard nothing of this matter, thinking it to be a political fetch to gain time or lull him to fecurity, paid no regard to it, but drew out in order of battle. Secunder who commanded the van of the rebel army, made the best disposition the time would permit to receive him, but was obliged to retreat with great loss towards the body of the army, which by this time was formed by Bahadur. The Imperialists, who from the flight of Secunder, concluded the victory already their own, purfuing in an irregular manner, were received fo warmly by Bahadur, that they were repulfed in turn, and would never more fhew their face to the purfuers, fo that the rebels gained a compleat victory and great fpoil. The Imperial general fled with the fcattered remains of his army to Kinnoge.

Zeman again rebels. Akbar in the mean time as peace was concluded with Zeman, went to take a view of the fortifications of Chinar and the city of Benaris. When the news of the late defeat of the Imperialists arrived in the royal camp, Zeman, though fo lately pardoned, being deflitute of every principle of gratitude, loyalty and honor, again deferted and took poffeffion of Ghazipoor and the adjacent territories. The king enraged at this baseness, flew into a violent passion with his general Monim, by whose mediation he had pardoned Zeman. He immediately ordered the captain general's mother to be confined, and with all expedition marched towards the traitor, who upon his approach fled to the hills. Bahadur taking advantage of the king's absence from Jionpoor, entered that place, and took the citadel by escalade, where he releafed his mother, and confined Asherif the imperial governor, with all the principle perfons in the garrifon.

being

The king hearing of the taking of Jionpoor, gave over the purfuit of Zeman, and returning towards that city, iffued out orders to all the viceroys of the provinces to join him with all their forces. Upon Akbar's approach, Bahadur evacuated Jionpoor, and fled towards Benaris. The rebel Zeman now feeing fuch preparations against him, in all the provinces which remained firm in their allegiance, began again to defpair of fuccefs, and had the confidence to address the king a fecond time for pardon, which by a ftrange perversion of policy, and an unjustifiable act cond time. of clemency, or rather weaknefs in the king, he obtained, as well as a confirmation of all his effates and honors. The king after paffing his royal word for all these favours, ordered Zeman to come to court : but the traitor excufed himfelf, by pretending • that shame for his past offences would not permit him to appear in the prefence, till time should erafe his behaviour from his majefty's mind ; that as foon as the king fhould return to Agra, both he and his brother Bahadur, would accept the honor which the royal benevolence intended to confer upon them.

Zeman, as might have been forefeen, took this opportunity to frengthen his party. Treafon ftill fermented in fecret within his foul, and he invited Afaph to join him. Afaph accepted of the propofal, and left Gurrah in poffeffion of his friend and dependant Caffim. Zeman in the mean time forgetting his oath to way on the king at Agra, during fix months maintained himfelf in a princely independance over all the eaftern provinces. Afaph, who had by this time joined him, finding himfelf neglected and treated with contempt, fled to Kurrah his original Jagier, was purfued by Bahadur, defeated and taken prifoner. In the mean time Afaph's brother, vizier Chan, who had efcaped in the action, rallied the troops, and returning, furprized the conquerors, and refcued Afaph out of their hands. The brothers then fell upon Kurrah, and poffeffed themfelves of that country.

An embaffy from Cabul. An ambaffador about this time, arrived from the prince Hakim the king's brother, who governed Cabul, acquainting him, that their coufin Soliman of Buduchshan, ever fince he had defeated and killed Mali, continued to read the Chutba of Cabul in his own name; that he had appointed Mirza Sultan to act in that city in his behalf, which had obliged Hakim to expel him from that office; for which affront Soliman was again preparing to invade

The king fearing more from the encroachments of his northern enemies, than from the foft fons of the eaftern provinces, immediately ordered the governors of the countries about the five heads of the Indus, and the noble Kulli viceroy of Moultan, to affift Hakim, as foon as ever they should be certain of the enemies attempts upon Cabul. Feredoon of Cabul who was one of the king's omrahs, was also fent from the prefence with what troops he retained in pay to fuccour Hakim : but before the royal orders arrived either at Punjab or Moultan, and confequently long before any fuccours could reach Cabul, Soliman had invested that city. Hakim evacuated it in a few days and retreated to the Nilab, one of the branches of the Indus, where he met Feredoon coming to his affiftance. This treacherous omrah, proposed to Hakim to feize upon Labore, affuring him that Akbar was in no condition to oppose him, being involved in a war with the Ufbeck rebels, who had poffeffed themfelves of all the eaftern provinces: that after he should be possessed of that rich and powerful province, he would find little difficulty in driving Soliman out of Cabul.

The unprincipled and weak Hakim infenfible of the bafenefs of this project, ungratefully began to take measures to put it in execution, and marched to Lahore in conjunction with Feredoon. Hakim's defign upon Lahore being noifed abroad, the omrahs of the provinces of the five rivers, particularly Cuttub Anniga, and Pier Mahummud, threw all their forces into the city, and prepared for a vigorous defence. Hakim fat down before the place, and used every art and perfuasion to bring over those omrahs to his interest, but without effect.

The king enraged as well as alarmed at this rebellion, laid afide his intended expedition against the Ufbecks, and turned his arms towards Lahore. He began his march towards that city on the 14th of the first Jemmad 974, leaving Agra under the government of his faithful general Monim. Akbar having arrived at Sirhind, the news of his approach reached Lahore. The citizens immediately began to beat their drums, to found their trumpets, and to make every demonstration of joy. This unufual noife waked Hakim, who was afleep in his tent : he afked the meaning of that uproar, and was told that the king was come expeditioufly from Agra. Hakim believing that the king was already at his heels, mounted his horfe without delay, and retreated precipitately with his cavalry towards Cabul: he came very opportunately to that city, and took it by furprize. Soliman having retired to Buduchshan during the winter. The king in the mean time advanced to Lahore, where he fpent a few days in hunting : he then fent back Mudgenu to poffefs himfelf of Kurrah and Manneckpoor, which Afaph had feized. This infurrection was crushed in the bud by the other Mogul chiefs who were poffefied of eftates in the adjacent territories. The young rebels were defeated and driven towards Malava. They however poffeffed themfelves of that country without much opposition, there being at that time no imperial forces in that province. Agra, before which city he ordered all his forces from the provinces to rendezvous. He was in a few weeks ready to take the field against the rebels, with two thousand elephants and above a hundred thousand horse. The rebellious captain general at that time belieging Euloph in the fort of Sherigur, hearing of the king's approach, retreated to Kurrah, in which place his brother Bahadur had invefted Mudgenu the imperial general. The king clofely purfued Zeman, but when he had reached Raibarrili, he heard that the rebel was croffing the Ganges, with an intention to march to Malava, and join the fons of Mirza Sultan, who had poffeffed themfelves of that province, or to make an alliance with the king of the Decan.

The king haftened his march and arrived at the ferry of Manneckpoor in the evening. No boats could be procured, and Akbar impatient to engage the rebels, mounted his elephant, and contrary to the advice of all his omrahs, took the river which was then very deep, and had the good fortune to pass over in fafety : one hundred horfe plunged into the ftream and fwam after the king. Akbar in the morning came before the enemies camp with his hundred horfe, and Mudgenu and Afaph joined him immediately with all the garrifon of Kurrah.

The enemy not fulpecting that the king would attempt to He comes becrofs the river without his army, had fpent the night in feftivity, and could hardly believe their fenfes, when they heard the royal drums beating the imperial march. They at length in the utmost confusion began to form their line, but before they were in compleat order, Akbar charged them with great violence : Baba Chan at the head of the king's light fcouts, penetrated through the camp of the rebels as far as the tents of Zeman, where he was repulsed by Bahadur, and driven back with precipitation among Bahadur in the mean time turned towards the center, where the king commanded in perfon: Akbar obferving him, came down from his elephant, and mounting a horfe, preffed towards him; but by this time an arrow having killed Bahadur's horfe, he was obliged to retreat on foot, among his own troops. Zeman encouraging his men, still continued the action with great bravery, till his horfe having received two wounds, he was obliged to quit him, and while he was mounting another, he was trodden to death by an elephant. The rebels now fell into confusion : distracted for want of orders, they turned their face to flight. Bahadur was taken prifoner, and carried before the king : What evil had I done to you, faid Akbar, thus to provoke you to draw the fword of treafon against me? He ordered that particular care should be taken of Bahadur; but some of the omrahs, as foon as the king's back was turned, fearing that his clemency would pardon that confummate rebel, prevented it by putting him immediately to the fword. Akbar, though it is highly probable that he would have forgiven Bahadur, made no inquiries concerning his death. The heads of the brothers were fent to Punjab and Cabul. Alli Beg the Ufbeck, Ear Alli, Mirza Beg, Cufal Beg, and Amir Shaw, a native of Buduchshan, all rebel chiefs, were also taken prisoners and carried by the king to Jionpoor, where they were trodden to death by elephants. This decifive action happened upon the first of Zihidge 974, and is an inftance of the daring intrepidity of the renowned Akbar.

The government of Kurrah was conferred upon the faithful Monim, known by the title of first of the nobles, and soon after Secunder the Usbeck, who was besieged in the fort of Jud, fled to Gorricpoor. The rebellion of the Usbecks being thus quashed, and the peace of the eastern provinces restored, the king in the month of Mohirrim 975, returned in triumph to Agra.

During the rebellion of the chiefs of the Uibeck Tartars in the fervice of India, the Raja, Udai Singh had taken great advantage of Akbar's diffrefs. This determined the emperor without remaining long at Agra, to march against that Indian prince. Having arrived before the fort of Suifoob, the governor evacuated the place and retreated to his master Surjun the Hindoo prince of Rintimpore. Akbar left a garrifon in Suifoob, and proceeded to the fort of Kakeran, on the frontiers of Malava. The fons of Sultan Mirza, who had posseffed themselves of Mindu, hearing of the emperor's progres, were greatly perplexed. To compleat their misfortunes, Ali Mirza their great friend and counfellor died at that time, and his adherents fled with precipitation towards the kingdom of Guzerat.

The king left Malava under the charge of Ahmed of Nefhapoor, and marched from Kakeran to expel the Indian prince from Chitor. The Raja left eight thoufand difciplined Rajaputs, with a great flore of provisions in the fort of Chitor, which is built on a mountain, and retired himfelf with his family to an inacceffible place. The king immediately invefted Chitor, and fet five thousand pioneers to work in throwing up trenches, and carrying on approaches to the place. When he had completed two batteries, and carried two mines under different bastions, he endeavoured to spring them at once: but one of them going off before the other, blew up one of the bastions and made a practi-

They divided into two bodies in order to enter at once both breaches: one of the parties advancing near the bassion, perceived that the mine had not been sprung, but before they could retreat it blew up, and killed above five hundred of the Moguls, and about double that number of the enemy who were crouded on the bassion. Among the latter were fisteen chiefs of distinction. The explosion so terrified those who were entering the breach, that they retreated in the utmoss confernation.

Another mine was immediately carried on by the king, but as he was one day standing in one of the batteries, he perceived Jeimal, the governor of the place, very affiduous in filling up the breaches, and giving orders for the defence : the king immediately called for a fuzee, and took fo good an aim that he lodged the ball in Jeimal's forehead, and laid him dead on the fpot. The fpirit of the befieged fell with their chief, and in the utmost defpair, they performed the horrid ceremony of the Joar, put all their wives and children to the fword, and burned their bodies with that of their governor, on a prodigious funeral pile. The Imperial army perceived what was going on by the light of the fire: they advanced under the cover of night to the breach, which they found abandoned, fo that they entered the place without opposition. It was day-light before a number fufficient to attack. the enemy could enter: then the king in perfon led on his men, and the unfortunate garrifon devoting themfelves to death, had retired to their temples. ately ordered to advance to tread them to death. The fcene became now too fhocking to be defcribed. Brave men rendered more valiant by defpair, crouded around the elephants, feized them even by the tufks, and inflicted upon them unavailing wounds. The terrible animals trode the Indians like grafshoppers under their feet, or winding them in their powerful trunks, toffed them aloft into the air, or dashed them against the walls and pavements. Of the garrifon, which confifted of eight thousand foldiers and of forty thousand inhabitants, thirty thousand were flain, and the most of the rest taken prisoners. A few escaped in the confusion, by tying their own children like captives, and driving them through the king's camp. They by this means paffed undifcovered, being taken for fome of the followers of the camp.

The government of the ftrong fort of Chitor was given to The king Afaph Hirrivi, and the king returned towards his capital. On from a typer. the way a tyger happened to be roufed before him : he gave orders that nobody should touch him, and riding forward himself, he began to wound him with arrows. The terrible animal flood growling on a rifing ground near the king, and being enraged by his wounds, he ran directly towards Akbar, who flood to receive him with his lance. One of his attendants named Adil, fearing the confequence, rushed between Akbar and the tyger, and aimed a fortunate blow at the animal, but he himfelf was toffed under his paws, and would have in a moment expired, had not fome others rushed to his affistance, and given the tyger a deadly wound, which both faved the king and Adil from imminent danger.

of Guzerat, and were again returned to Malava, having commenced hoftilities with the fiege of Ugein. The king difpatched Killich of India and Kifvini to expel them. Upon the approach of this army, the two Huffeins raifed the fiege, and retreating precipitately to the Nirbudda, croffed that river and fled again towards Guzerat.

Akbar invefts Rintimpore.

In the month of Regib, in the year 976, the king marched from Agra with an intention to reduce Rintimpore, where the Indian prince Surjan, who had bought that ftrong fort from Hujaz one of the dependants of the late emperor Selim, prepared to defend himfelf to the last extremity. On the 22d of Ramzan 976, the king invefted the place, and having properly reconnoitered it, ordered a great battery to be conftructed on an adjoining hill, called Rin : he with great difficulty dragged up his heavy artillery to this eminence; two of the pieces being capable to receive a stone ball of fix or feven maunds, or one of iron of thirty maunds *. In a few days a part of the wall and a great number of the houfes were laid in ruins, and at the end of the month the garrifon driven to difficulties, folicited to capitulate. The conditions proposed by them were, to have the liberty of retiring unmolefted, leaving all their wealth and effects to the king. These terms were accordingly accepted, and the king took possession of Rintimpore.

Returns to Agra. Akbar after this conquest made a pilgrimage to the shrine of Chaja Moin at Ajmere, and from thence returned to Agra. From that city he went to visit the learned and venerable Selim in the village of Sikri: he questioned him according to the ceremonies, and was told, it is faid, that he would soon have issue that would live and profper ; all the children which were born to him before that time, dying in their infancy. Soon after, the favourite Sultana became pregnant, and upon the 17th of the first Ribbi, in the year 977, she was brought to bed of a son, who was named Selim. Upon this occafion the king published an act of grace to all prifoners, and ordered a day of thankfgiving to the Almighty: foon after he performed a vow of pilgrimage on foot, to the fhrine of Chaja Moin at Ajmere, with his whole army in the procession, then returning by the way of Delhi, the king near that city took the diversion of the chace.

The Indian prince Ram Chund, who had poffeffion of the Callinger furfirong fort of Callinger, which he had taken from the dependants of the emperor Selim, hearing about this time, that the king meditated an expedition against him; fearing the fate of Rintimpore and Chitor, made terms for the delivery of the place, which was accordingly put into the hands of the king. Upon the third of Mohirrim 978, the king had another fon born to him in the house of the venerable Selim *, whom he called Murâd. He upon this account made another pilgrimage to Ajmere, and ordered the town to be fortified with a ftone wall. The emperor from thence proceeded to Nagore, where Chunderfein the fon of Maldeo, and the Indian prince of Bicanere, came out to meet him with valuable prefents. The latter prefented the king with his beautiful daughter. Akbar from Nagore marched to the town of Ajodin, and vifiting the tomb of the celebrated poet and philosopher Ferid Shukurgunge, proceeded to Debalpoor, where Koka who was in possession of that place, prefented him with a large fum of money. The king from thence paffed to Labore, where Huffein a Turkuman chief, governor of that city and province, came also out to meet him in the same manner with great prefents.

Akbar returns to Agra. On the first of Siffer 979, the emperor left Lahore, and returned by the way of Firofa to Ajmere, and from thence proceeded to Agra. Secunder the famous rebel, and only one remaining of the Usbecks chiefs, who had revolted, having long lurked about the woods of Bengal, and committed ravages on the inhabitants, was about this time feized by Monim, governor of Jionpoor, and fent to the king, who according to his usual clemency pardoned him.

The king invades the kingdom of Guzerat.

The king effeeming the village of Sikri, fortunate to him, as two fons were born to him there, by the means of the prayers of the faints with whom he left his favorite mistreffes; he ordered the foundation of a city to be laid there, which after the conquest of Guzerat, he called the city of victory. In the year 980, the kingdom of Guzerat being torn to pieces by inteffine divifions, Akbar feized upon that opportunity to declare war against it. He therefore marched to Ajmere under pretence of a pilgrimage, and from that place detached his general Callan before him towards Guzerat. The king followed at fome diftance with the main body of the army. Akbar in his way appointed the Indian prince Singh, to the government of Joelpoor, the refidence of Raja Maldeo, whom on account of some misdemeanor he depofed. When the emperor arrived at Nagore, he received advices of the birth of another fon, on the 2d of fecond Jemmad, in the houfe of the holy and venerable Danial, whom he with great propriety called Danial, as it was to the faint's prayers no doubt he owed this piece of good fortune *.

* One might be tempted to think, that as Akbar left his wives in charge of the Saints of Sikri, he owed fome of his fons to more than the prayers of those holy perfons: it being the opinion of the Mahommedan doctors, as well as of fome grave divines among ourfelves, that prayer is more effectual when the means are used. The king appearing with his army on the confines of Guzerat, Shere, an omrah of diffinction who defended the frontiers, abandoned his poft and fled with precipitation. The king took immediate poffeifion of the city of Pattan, and gave the government of it to Ahmed, one of the race called Seids, or defcendants of the prophet. He from that place moved his flandard of victory towards Ahmed-abad; but before he had marched two flages, Muziffer the king of Guzerat came to meet him, and without a blow, furrendered his kingdom into his royal and victorious hands, fo that the king entered Ahmed-abad, the capital of Guzerat, in as peaceable a manner, as if he had been entering Agra. To account for this it may not be improper to fay fomething concerning the flate of Guzerat at that period.

Mamood defcended of a Patan family, the late king of Guzerat, having fometime, before this event, died, his nobles, particularly Actemad and Amad, who poffeffed all the power of the government during the minority of the prince Ahmed, the fon and fucceffor of Mamood, finding him begin to think for himfelf, were unwilling to part with their power, and found means privately to make away with him : but to keep up the appearance of loyalty, they raifed a child of doubtful birth to the throne, on whom they imposed the name of the king Muziffer, and divided the kingdom among themfelves in the following manner. Ahmed-abad, Cambait, and fome other provinces, were poffeffed by Actemad; Anduka, Doluc, and fome other countries, by Juil the grandfon of Mubarick; Surat, Biroge, Birod and Japanier, by the noble Zingis, fon of the co-regent Amad, while other nobles who had influence in the ftate, had the reft of the kingdom partioned among them. The nominal king Muziffer was in the mean time cooped up by Actemad in Ahmed-abad ;during this oligarchy, the government became very oppreffive,

This made the unhappy people of Guzerat turn their eyes towards Akbar, to relieve them from their petty tyrants, who like vultures, gnawed the bowels of their country. The eafy conqueft of Guzerat was therefore no ways furprizing, as the nominal king tired of his fituation, hoped more from the favor of a foreign prince, than from his own factious and independant nobles.

Akbar'stranfactions in Guzerat. But to return from this digreffion. The fecond day after the king's entrance into Ahmed-abad, he was waited upon by the principal nobles of Guzerat, who haftened to make their fubmiflion. But Ali and Hujaz two Abyffinian nobles, were ordered into confinement, as they gave fome evident figns of difcontent. Huffein was ftill at the head of an army in Biroge, and his brother Huffein Mirza at the head of another confiderable force near Surat. The king therefore refolved to reduce them : Aichuiar, one of the omrahs of Guzerat, having broke his parole of honor and fled at this time, all the other nobles were ordered into clofe confinement. When the king arrived at the port of Cambait, he appointed Azim Mirza governor of Ahmed-abad.

Exploits of Akbar against Hussein. Huffein, who we have already obferved was in Biroge, hearing of Akbar's approach, and fulpecting the fidelity of Ruftum, a native of Rumi *, one of his principal officers, affäffinated him, and difcovered an inclination to march into Punjab to raife difturbances in that quarter. The king receiving intelligence of this defign about midnight, left his camp in charge of Jehan and Callich Chan, and with a chofen detachment marched himfelf that night with all expedition to cut off Huffein's retreat: the next day he reached the river Mhenderi, which runs by the town

The enemy being encamped on the opposite bank of the river, and in fight, the king thought it prudent to proceed no further, till the reft of his detachment fhould arrive. Had Huffein therefore known any thing of the art of war, he might have eafily taken Akbar prifoner. But that unenterprizing officer made no attempt of that kind, till the king was joined by a fresh detachment, which had been ordered some days before. to Surat, and happened to be then encamped at a little diftance.

This small party confisted only of feventy horse, at the head He attacks of which there happened to be five principal nobles, Mamood Baherra, the Indian princes Dafs, Man Singh, and Kulli, and Raja Surjun of Rintimpore. With these the king, without waiting for more troops, took the defperate refolution to attack the enemy, one thousand of whom commanded by Huffein, waited to receive him, while the main body of the army purfued their march. It happened very fortunately for Akbar that the enemy inftead of permitting him to come into the plain, opposed him between two hedges, where not above fix horsemen could fight abreaft. The king in this narrow pafs but himfelf upon the footing of a private trooper, and performed extraordinary feats of perfonal valour : which however avail little to wipe away the folly of this piece of his conduct. At last the courage which Akbar's behaviour naturally raifed in his followers, made them as desperate as himself, so that after a long engagement with the enemy fword in hand, they beat them back, and at last totally defeated them, with the loss only of one officer, and a few private men.

Huffein fied to his army, but fuch was their confternation and opinion of Akbar's prowefs, that the greateft part of his forces deferted him, which was all the advantage that could be gained by fuch a victory. The king contenting himfelf with what he had done, defifted from the purfuit, and waiting till his army came up, marched and invefted Surat. In the mean time the omrahs of Guzerat collected themfelves in the environs of Pattan, and held a council how to proceed. They agreed that Huffein fhould profecute his feheme of raifing diffurbances in Punjab, and that Huffein Mirza, Shaw Mirza, and Shere, fhould inveft Pattan. They expected by thefe means to draw the king from the fiege of Surat.

Huffein defeated by Rai Singh at Nagore.

Huffein having arrived at Nagore, Rai Singh governor of Jodpoor, who had purfued him, came up with him one day towards. the evening, at a place where there was no water to be found, but what Huffein poffeffed. This made the troops of Rai Singh, who were in great diffrefs for water, call out to attack the enemy. This favorable disposition and the necessity of the attempt, made the Indian, though much inferior to the enemy, join battle. Huffein's horfe being killed, and he himfelf difmounted in the first charge, his army imagining that he was actually flain, gave ground. The enemy took fuch advantage of their confufion, that the whole efforts of Huffein were not capable torecover the diforder, and he was totally routed : he fled with great precipitation towards Delhi, and from thence to Simbol. In the mean time Huffein Mirza and the other nobles carried. on the fiege of Pattan, which was defended by Ahmed the Mogul. Koka coming to his relief with the army from. difadvantage, both his wings being thrown into diforder, but his troops continuing steady in the center, he at last gained ground, and improving the advantage, put them to slight towards the Decan.

The king in the mean time made a breach in the walls of Surat, and had raifed feveral mounts, from which he battered the city and commanded the ftreets. When he was preparing for a general affault, the garrifon defired to capitulate. Their terms were agreed to, the city delivered up, and the king returned to Ahmed-abad; he diftributed all the governments of Guzerat, among the friends of Koka, his fofter-brother, and on the 2d of Ziffer, in the year 981, returned by the way of Ajmere to Agra.

The fugitive Huffein, arriving at Simbol, as we have already mentioned, heard that the chief men in Punjab under Kulli, were belieging the caftle of Nagracot, he therefore marched into Punjab, which he expected to find unguarded, and after plundering it he had refolved to join his friends in Guzerat, by the way of the Indus. Kulli was therefore under the neceffity of raifing the fiege, and marching after Huffein through all Punjab, without being able to come up with him, till he reached the environs of the city of Tatta upon the Indus. There Kulli attacked Huffein's camp as he was one day out a hunting, at fome diftance from his line of march. Mirza, Huffein's brother, who commanded in his absence, was obliged therefore to form the line, fending in the mean time an express to his brother concerning his fituation. But before the elder Huffein arrived his brother was defeated and taken prifoner, having loft fome thousands of his Defeated, taken, and put to death in Moultan. In Moultan the unfortunate Huffein was again attacked by the Billochees, wounded, taken prifoner, and delivered up to Muchfufe, governor of Moultan, who beheaded him. Muchfufe in conjunction with Kulli, carried his head and all his effects to Agra, to prefent them to the king. Akbar ordered the head to be fet up above one of the gates of Agra, and his brother Huffein Mirza to be confined in the fort of Gualier, where he foon after died. In the first Ribbi of the fame year, advices arrived from Koka, that Aichtiar, governor general of Guzerat, and Huffein Mirza, were joined with confiderable armies, had poffeffeffed themfelves of feveral diffricts in Guzerat, and had invefted the Mogul governor himfelf in Ahmed-abad.

The king fets out for Guzerat, with great expedition. As it was now the rainy feafon, and to march a great army impracticable, with that expedition which the urgency of the fituation of affairs required, the king felected two thousand horfe, and fent them off before him; then with three hundred principal nobles and officers mounted upon camels, he proceeded at the rate of four stages every day *, and came up with the detachment of horfe at the city of Patan in Berar, where he was joined by a thousand more. His whole force then confissed of three thousand horfe, and three hundred camels. With this simall army he continued his march with the fame expedition to the besieged capital of Guzerat, and upon his arrival within four miles of the city, ordered the Imperial drums to beat his own march, which was the first news the enemy had of his approach. This ftruck the infurgents with fuch a pannic, that it was with difficulty their officers could keep them from immediate flight. They however formed at length the line, while Huffein Mirza with a few horfe went to the banks of the river to reconnoitre.

Huffein faw at fome diftance Kulli, who had been fent on the fame bufinefs by the king. He afked him acrofs the river, what army that was? Kulli replied, that it was the army of the king of kings. The other faid, "that is impoffible, for it is yet but fourteen days fince one of my fpies faw the king at Agra, and I perceive none of the elephants that always attend the emperor." Kulli then told him, "It is but nine days fince the king put his foot in the ftirrup, and it is well known, elephants cannot march at that rate; but all the cavalry are come up."

Huffein returned immediately to his camp, and fent Achtiar with five thouland horfe, to watch the gates of Ahmed-abad. He himfelf marched with feven thouland horfe against the king. Akbar had by this time reached the banks of the river, and difcovering the enemy, he drew up to receive them, expecting every moment to be joined by the troops in the city: but they were blocked up by the enemy. He then faw, that his whole dependance must rest on his own troops; to render them more desperate, by cutting off all hopes of retreat, he croffed the river, and drew up before the enemy on the plain. Huffein placing himfelf in the centre with his Moguls, Shaw Mirza on his right with the Afghans and Rajaputs, and Shere on his left with the Abassinians and the horfe of Guzerat, advanced to the charge.

The king having also drawn up his fmall army in three divifions, commanded by their feveral officers, he posted himself with his body guard, confisting of a hundred horse in the rear of the centre. The battle now being joined with great fury on both fides, the king with his guard wheeled round his right flank, and fell furiously on the left flank of the enemy. His troops observing their king thus exposing himself in the midst of danger, made an uncommon effort of valor and charged the enemy fo warmly, that they repulsed them with great loss. Hussen was wounded in the action, attempting to leap over a hedge with his horse, fell from his faddle, and was taken prifoner. Several perfons contending about the honor of taking Hussen, the king asked him who was the man who took him ? Hussen replied, "Nobody: the curfe of ingratitude overtook me."

The king in imminent danger. When the king's forces were warm in the purfuit, he himfelf remained on a rifing ground, with about two hundred horfe. On a fudden a great body of troops appeared moving towards him. He immediately difpatched a perfon to know who they were : he brought back intelligence, that they were the forces of Achtiar, who had been left to guard the gates of Ahmed-abad. The troops who were with the king began to be very uneafy at their fituation, and gave many intimations of their defire of retreating. But Akbar would by no means defert his poft : he ordered them inftantly to prepare to charge and break through the enemy; at the fame time commanding the drums to beat up the royal march. The enemy hearing the drums, made no doubt but the whole army was behind the hill, and retreated with great precipitation. The king purfued them to fome diftance, to keep up the pannic which which had feized them. Whilft thefe things happened where A. D. 1573. the king commanded in perfon, Rai Singh, one of his generals, of the Indian nation, to revenge fome former quarrel, basely embrued his hands in the blood of Huffein, who had been left in his poffeffion. Achtiar having alfo fallen from his horfe in his flight, was killed by one of the king's guards, who was purfuing him with great eagernefs. Koka, the belieged governor of Guzerat, finding now that the blockade was withdrawn from the gates, came out to meet the king. Akbar entered Ahmedabad the fame day, and continued Koka in his government, then by the way of Ajmere, hastened towards Agra, after having. performed a fervice, which, though glorious, reflects more honor apon his intrepidity, than upon his conduct.

In the course of the same year, Daood the son of Soliman governor of Bengal, drew his neck from the yoke of obedience. Monim, commonly called lord of lords, governor of the provinces of Oud and Jionpoor, being nearest to the rebel, was fent against him, and brought him to a treaty after fome fuccessful engagements. The king diffatisfied with this peace, committed the management of the affairs of Bengal to an Indian prince called Jodermul, and fent him with orders to expel Daood entirely out of his government, or to oblige him to pay a certain yearly tribute, fuperior to the fmall acknowledgement which he had formerly made. Daood being threatened at the time with a civil war by one Lodi, who difcovered an inclination to usurp the kingdom, confented upon Jodermul's appearance to pay the tribute demanded. He then found means to feize upon Lodi, whom he put to death. Daood relieved from that domestic danger, broke the treaty with the king, and advancing against Monim and Jodermul, engaged them at the confluence of the He is over-Sool, Gang and Sirve, where being defeated, he loft his fleet of boats boats and all his baggage. Monim croffed immediately the river, and laid fiege to Patna.

The king fets out for Bengal.

The king informed of these transactions, set out from Agra in the middle of the rains, with as many troops as could be contained in a thousand boats: he halted a few days at Benaris, where he was joined by the forces which marched over land : he immediately embarked the whole, and fell down to Patna, and on his way he received the news of the reduction of Becker upon the Indus, by Jefu Chan, who had been fent against that place. Akbar having arrived within a few miles of Patna, heard that Ifah Neazi, one of the enemies principal generals, had marched out of the fort and fought Monim, but that he was defeated and loft his life, fo that the place was upon the point of being evacuated. The king therefore fent one of his officers, Allum, with three thousand horse, to posses himself of the fort of Hadgepoor, on the opposite bank of the river, and to endeavour to harrafs the enemy in their retreat, should they be already gone, if not, to ftop them. Allum accordingly took that place by affault, and made Fatte, the governor, and the garrifon prifoners: Daood intimidated by this, fent a herald to the king to beg terms of accommodation.

The king challenges the Suba of Bengal, to a fingle combat. The king returned him for anfwer, that he granted him his life, but that he must trust every thing elfe to his clemency, after making his fubmiffion; but if he should be obstinate enough to hold out fome few days merely to give him trouble, he could have no reason to hope for pardon; " and though, faid the king, I have a thousand in my army as good men as you, rather than fatigue my troops with a fiege, I will put the whole upon the issue of a fingle combat between you and me, and let him take the fort who shall best deferve it." Daood did not chuse chuse to accept the challenge, nor even to put the king to farther trouble, but took boat at the water-gate that night, and fled down the river : foon after all his army evacuated the place. The next morning the king purfued them and took four hundred elephants, and the greatest part of their baggage. He then returned to Patna, conferred the government of that place and its dependencies upon his faithful fervant, Monim, who had fo much fignalized himfelf in the war, then returned without purfuing his conquest farther to Agra.

Koka the Imperial governor of Guzerat, and Jehan who commanded at Lahore, came to pay their respects to the king, and returned afterwards to their respective governments. Akbar at the fame time conferred the title of the noble Muziffer upon Muziffer Ali, and appointed him to command a force against the fort of Rhotas in Behar : he himfelf made a tour to the fhrine of the faints at Ajmere, where having beftowed great charities, he returned to Agra.

In the mean time Monim, who had been left in the government of Patna, had orders to carry the war further into Bengal against Daood. That general having forced the pass of Killagurry, Daood fled into Oriffa, whither he was purfued by Jodermul, with part of the king's army. Juneid the fon of Daood defeated Jodermul in two battles, which obliged Monim to march to his aid : both the Mogul generals having joined their forces, engaged Daood. Kudgera, an Afghan chief of great bravery, who commanded Daood's vanguard, attacked the vanguard of Monim commanded by Allum, and defeated and killed that omrah. The Afgan purfued the run-aways through the center of their army, which were by that time drawn up in order of battle. Monim observing the diforder hastened in perfon with a fmall finall body to reftore the ranks, Kudgera attacked him in perfon, and wounded him in feveral places, fo that he was obliged to quit the field, and he was foon followed by his army. The valiant Kudgera being killed by an arrow, Monim again rallied his troops, and being a little recovered, led them back to the charge: he found Daood's army intent upon the plunder, and foon put them to flight, taking all their elephants. Jodermul being detached to purfue the enemy, came up with Daood on the banks of the Chin, which he could not crofs. The rebel finding no means for escaping, faced about to defend himfelf. Jodermul did not chufe to provoke him too far, and, immediately fent intelligence of what had paffed to Monim. That omrah, notwithstanding his wounds which were very bad, hafted to that place : Daood furrendered himfelf upon terms, and was permitted to retain Orifla, after which Monim returned to his government. The city of Gore, which had been the capital of Bengal till the time of the emperor Shere, who on account of the badness of the air, had made Chawasspoor Tanda, the metropolis, was now greatly decayed. Monim admiring the antiquity and grandeur of that place, gave orders to repair the palaces, and made it his refidence : but he foon fell a victim to the unhealthy air of Gore and died. He was fucceeded in his government by Huffein Kulli, a Turkuman noble in the Imperial fervice, to whom the king gave the title of lord of the world *.

Tranfactions at court. The prince Soliman of Buduchshan, being expelled by his own grandson Mirza Shaw, was about this time obliged to seek protection at the court of Agra. Koka, viceroy of Guzerat, accufed him to the king of treafonable intentions: they fo far prevailed upon him, that he recalled him from his government and confined him. Koka's readinefs to comply with the Imperial order, convinced Akbar that he was no ways guilty; but that the whole proceeded from the malice of his enemies: however, the noble Ahmed of Nefhapur, who had been advanced to the government of Guzerat, had fufficient intereft at court to retain his office after his predeceffor was acquitted.

Before Huffein had taken poffeffion of his government of Bengal and Behar, the Zemindars of those provinces had rifen in favour of Daood, and invefted Chawaffpoor the capital, which they took. Daood found himfelf foon at the head of fifty thoufind horfe, and in possession of the greatest part of those countries. Kulli having affembled all the Imperial omrahs in that quarter, advanced against Daood, and that chief retreated beyond the passes, which Hussein forced, and killed above a thousand of the enemy, who attempted to ftop his march. The enemy on account of the narrowness of the defile, had not time to escape. Huffein immediately marched towards Daood's camp, and on the 15th of Shawal 983, drew up his army in order of battle near to the enemy, who flood ready to receive him. Callapar, an omrah famous in the army of Daood for perfonal firength and valor, made a refolute charge upon the left of the Imperial line, and threw it into diforder; while Muziffer, who commanded the right of the Mogul army, had the fame advantage over the enemy on their left; in this fituation they fought in a circle, when Huffein made a home charge upon the center of the enemy, which was fuftained with great bravery. At length however the gale of victory blew on the Imperial flandards, and the enemy were difperfed like leaves before the autumnal wind. Transactions before Rhotas.

Muziffer in the year 984, marched against Rhotas, and fent one Mafoom to expel Huffein, an Afghan, who was hovering about with a flying party in that quarter. Mafoom having engaged him, defeated him and took poffeffion of his Pergunnahs; but Callapar in the mean time with eight thousand horse, furrounded him and thought to have obliged him to furrender. Mafoom breaking down the wall of the town in which he was fhut up, rushed out unexpectedly upon the enemy. In the action which enfued Mafoom's horfe was killed by a ftroke of the trunk of an elephant. Callapar immediately rode up and he himfelf was in the most imminent danger of being crushed to death, had he not wounded the elephant with an arrow in the eye, which rendered the animal fo unruly, that he would obey no command : he therefore rushed back through the Afghan troops, carrying off Callapar, which made his army believe that he fled, and they quickly followed him. Callapar was foon overtaken and flain. Masoom after this victory returned and joined Muziffer who left the omrah Cumbo to blockade the fort of Rhotas, and marched against an Indian prince called Chander Sein, from whom he took the fort of Savana. From thence he directed his march against another Hindoo prince, from whom he took the fort of Keregur, fituated in the woods between Behar and Bengal. The Afghans in the fort of Rhotas being deftitute of provisions, were prevailed upon by promifes and a favorable capitulation to give up the place : Cumbo left Rhotas under the command of his brother, and went himfelf to court.

The king this year made a progress towards Ajmere, and fent A. D. 1579. Cumbo mentioned above, against Comilmere, a strong fortress in the pofferfion of the Rana; he took the place, and in the mean time the king made a tour towards the borders of the Decan : Murtaza prince of Ahmednagur, was at that time become melancholy mad, and was confined to his apartments: Akbar thought this a proper opportunity to feize upon that country; but he was diverted from his purpose by some domestic affairs which occurred at that time, and he returned towards Agra by the way of Ajmere, where he appointed Muziffer to the high office of the Vizarit. From Ajmere the emperor marched to Delhi, and from thence he took the rout of Cabul. When he was upon his way, a comet of an extraordinary magnitude appeared in the weft. The king having reached Adjodin, visited the tomb of the famous poet and philosopher Ferid, and quitting his resolution of going to Cabul, returned to Agra.

The great molque in the city of Victory, lately built by Akbar, was finished in the year 986. The prince of Chandez in the Decan, in the fame year, imprifoned Muziffer Huffein by the king's commands, and fent him to Agra. In the course of the fame year Huffein, governor of Bengal died. In 987 a great fire happened in the city of Victory in the wardrobe, which confumed effects to a prodigious amount. After the death of Huffein, the Afghans began to recover in Bengal their former ftrength, and to raise disturbances. To suppress their infurrections the king fent his foster-brother Koka, late governor of Guzerat, with a confiderable army to that kingdom.

The prince Hakim the king's brother, took the opportunity of these troubles to make an attempt upon Lahore. He fent Shadiman his foster-brother with a thousand horse, by way of advanced

When Hakim had reached Rhotas, a fortrefs built by the emperor Shere in Punjab, Man Singh retreated to Lahore, whither he was purfued by the prince. He arrived before that city upon the 11th of Mohirrim, in the year 989, and invested it. The place was gallantly defended by Seid Chan, and other nobles, till the king marched from Agra to their relief. Upon the approach of the royal standard, Hakim retreated to Cabul: the king pursuing him to Sirhind. Intelligence was brought to him at that place, that Munfoor Shirazi one of his omrahs had been carrying on a correspondence with the enemy, for which he ordered him to be impaled.

Totally overthrows him.

The king having croffed the Nilab, continued his march towards Cabul, and detached his fon Murad in front with the van guard : his fon Selim he left at Jellalabad. When Murad had reached Shuttergurdan, within thirty miles of Cabul, Feredoon, a general of Hakim, attacked him in a pafs, and having repulsed the prince, feized upon all his baggage. Hakim, upon the 2d of Siffer 989, drew up his army before the king in order of battle. The elephants which were with the prince Murad being ordered to advance, fired the fmall field pieces that were mounted upon them, and by mere accident three of the chiefs who flood by Hakim were killed: that pufillanimous prince immediately left the field, and was purfued with great flaughter. The king, without farther oppofition, entered Cabul upon the 7th of Siffer, and Hakim fled to Ghorebund: he from thence fent an embaffy to the king, begging forgiveness, which was granted him. The king having refigned his conquest of Cabul to Hakim, on the 14th of Siffer, returned towards Agra. He on his way ordered a fort to be built upon the Nilab, which he called Attock, which means in the Indian language Forbidden; for by the fuperflition of the Hindoos, it was held unlawful to crofs that river. The king having arrived at Lahore upon the 19th of Ramzan, gave the government of that province to the Indian chief Baguandafs, and in a few days fet out for Agra.

The troubles in Bengal fill continuing, the king fent the omrah Cumbo, with a confiderable force to reinforce his army in those parts. In the year 991 he made a progress to Priag, where he ordered the fort of Allahabad to be built at the confluence of the Jumma and Ganges. Muziffer, king of Guzerat, who had been kept a prifoner at large fince the reduction of Guzerat. his kingdom, began now to exhibit great loyalty and affection for the king. Akbar upon this account rewarded him with a large eftate, and he became a great favorite at court. But indulgences of this fort could not gratify the ambition of the conquered king : he made his efcape to Guzerat, while Akbar was at Allahabad, and by the affiftance of his former adherent, Shere, firred up a rebellion in that kingdom. The king, upon the first intelligence of this infurrection, fent the noble Actemad in quality of governor to Guzerat, and recalled Ahmed, whowas suspected of favoring Muziffer. After the arrival of the new governor, Ahmed came out of Ahmed-abad, and halted fome days at Pattan to prepare for his journey, during which. time a great part of his army deferted to Muziffer. This enabled that prince to march towards Ahmed-abad, the capital.

The new governor then prevailed upon Ahmed to accompany him, and marched back to retake the place. Muziffer who came out to battle, defeated the two governors, and drove them back to Pattan. Actemnad fent an express from Pattan, to acquaint the king of his misfortune.

Mirza, the fon of the famous Byram, fent into Guzerat.

Akbar being informed of the untoward fituation of affairs in Guzerat, difpatched Ruftum, commonly called Mirza Chan, the fon of the great minister Byram, together with the omrahs of Ajmere, to reftore the tranquility of that province; but before Mirza had reached Guzerat, king Muziffer had reduced the fort of Biruderra, which was defended by Cuttub, who held Beroche in Jagier from Akbar, and had there taken fourteen lacks of rupees belonging to the king, and ten crores of rupees of the property of the governor, who loft his life on the occafion. This immense acquisition of treasure enabled him to recruit a great army at Ahmed-abad, whither Mirza marched to attack him with eight thousand horse. Mirza having arrived at the village of Sirgunge, within fix miles of the city, Muziffer, on the 15th of Mohirrim 992, marched out to meet him with thirty thousand horse, and drew up in his presence. The Imperial general no ways intimidated by the enemy's numbers, encouraged his men, charged the enemy vigoroufly fword in hand, defeated them with great flaughter, and purfued them quite through the city. Being foon after joined by the Mogul omrahs of Malava with a confiderable force, he marched after Muziffer towards Combait, and drove him among the mountains of Nadout. Muziffer faced about to oppose the Moguls in a narrow defile, but he was driven from his poft by the artillery of Mirza, and fled towards Jionagur, taking refuge with Jami, an Indian prince in those parts.

Mirza

Mirza thinking it unneceffary to pursue Muziffer further, returned to Ahmed-abad, and fent Callehi to befiege the fort of Guzerat re-Beroche, which he took from Nafir, the brother-in-law of Muziffer. Nafir held out the place feven months, and at last made his escape to the Decan. Muziffer soon after, by the aid of Jami, and the fuba of Jionagur, advanced to a place called Mabi within one hundred and twenty miles of Ahmed-abad. Mirza marching out to oppose him, he was struck with a fudden pannic, and made a precipitate retreat : but ftrengthened by new alliances, he made a third attempt to recover his dominions, and engaging the Mogul army at Siranti, he was defeated and obliged to take refuge with Singh, the Indian prince of Jalla.

Mirza five months after this last victory over Muziffer, was Transactions recalled to court; but as the fugitive king began to raife his head again in his absence, the king conferred the titles of first of the nobles upon Mirza, and ordered him back to Guzerat. This year Nizam, the fon of Huffein, fled from his brother Mortiza, king of the Decan, and came to the court of Agra, where he was gracioufly received; and not long after Alla Shirazi, the most eminent man of that age for learning, came also from the Decan, and had an honorable office near the king's perfon conferred upon him.

In the enfuing year Murtiza, and Choclawind, omrahs of the Decan, being defeated by one Sullabit in a civil broil, took refuge at Agra; and as the king had a long time entertained thoughts of conquering the Decan, he fent them to Koka, who then poffeffed the government of Malava. He ordered that omrah to raife all the forces of Malava, and of the adjacent territories, and carry war into the Decan: and having conferred the title of Azid ul Dowla upon Alla Shirazi, fent him to affift 00 Koka Koka in that expedition, as he was thoroughly acquainted with the different interests and policy of that country.

Koka advances with an army towards the Decan.

Koka having, according to orders, recruited a great army, marched to the borders of his government, and found that Ali, the prince of Chandez, was inclinable to join the king of the Decan. He immediately difpatched Alla to endeavor to bring him over to the Mogul interest; but that omrah returned without accomplishing any thing. The omrahs Tucki and Bezad, in conjunction with the prince of Chandez, by the orders of the king of the Decan marched against Koka, who was encamped in the province of Hindia. Koka however did not think it proper to engage them in that place, but giving them the flip, he entered the Decan, by another rout, and advancing to Elichpoor, plundered that city for the space of three days. The generals of the Decan, and their ally the prince of Chandez, in the mean time returned and threw themfelves into the fuburbs. of Elichpoor, which obliged Koka, rather than rifque a battle, to evacuate the Decan.

Diffurbances in Guzerat quelled. While thefe things were transacted in the Decan orders were fent to Mirza, the fon of Byram, commonly called the first of the nobles, governor of Guzerat, to come to court. He forthwith obeyed, and the fugitive king Muziffer, taking advantage of his abfence, advanced towards Darul, the deputy governor of the country, but he was again defeated.

Tranfa fions at court. The prince Sharoch, grand-fon of Soliman, fovereign of Buduchfhan, being expelled from his dominions by Abdulla, the Ufbeck, came this year to court, and ranked himfelf among the king's omrahs; at the marriage of the daughter of the Indian prince Baguandafs to Selim, the emperor's eldeft fon, in the year

Akbar having appointed Mirza a fecond time governor of Guzerat, and Alla, high-prieft of that country, fet out for Punjab. On his way he appointed Sadei to the government of Bicker, and Man Singh the fon of Baguandafs, was fent to Cabul. That omrah brought the children of Hakim, who were very young, to Lahore, and left his own fon invefted with the chief authority at Cabul.

The king having arrived at the fortrefs of Attock upon the Nilâb, he detached the prince Sharoch, and other omrahs, with five thousand horse to reduce the kingdom of Cashmire. He at the fame time difpatched Zein Koka, with another confiderable detachment against the Afghans of Jawad and Bejoar. A few days after he fent a detachment to reduce the Afghans of Roshnai, who were idolaters of the Zendeika fect, and followers of an Indian fanatic, who called himfelf Pier Rofhnai. This impostor had converted to his fystem of religion great numbers of the inhabitants of those countries, who after his death adhered to his fon, and taking up arms, raifed great disturbances in Punjab and Moultan. The king being fully informed of the ftrength of the Afghans of Sawad and Bejoar, fent a reinforcement to Zein Koka. But that omrah was notwithflanding defeated, and many perfons of diffinction, with eight thousand men, were killed in the action.

Man Singh, who had been detached against the Roshnai-Afghans, met with better success; he defeated them at Kotil with great

The army in Cathmire in diffrefs.

The army which had been detached to Cafhmire, being reduced to great diffrefs by the fnow and rain, as also by a fearcity of provisions, were under the necessity of making a peace with the Cachmirians. The conditions were a tribute of faffron to Akbar, and the regulation of the mint, the coin being ftruck in his name : but the king diffatisfied with this peace, fent Mahommed Cafim, with another army to reduce that kingdom entirely to his obedience. This that general eafily accomplifhed, on account of civil diffentions then raging among the chiefs of that country. The prince Soliman, the grandfather of the fugitive Sharoch, came this year from Cabul, and had an interview with the king. The ambaffador of the king of Tartary, who came to court while Akbar was at Attock, was much about the fame time dispatched with great presents to his master. In the year 996, Jellal an Afghan began to become formidable, having defeated and killed Hamid Bochari, and driven Man Singh from his government of Cabul. The king therefore fent Muttalib with an army against him, who gave him a fignal defeat near Kotel, and cut off great numbers of the rebels.

Chufero born to Sultan Selim, The prince Chufero the fon of the emperor's eldeft fon Selim, was born this year of the daughter of Baguandafs, and the king made a great feftival upon the occasion. Sadoc, governor of Bicker, according to the orders he received from court, invested the fort of Sewan upon the Indus, and obliged the prince of Tatta, to acknowledge the king's authority, and to fend him

In the month of the fecond Ribbi, Zein Koka was appointed to the government of Cabul, and the former governor recalled to Lahore. At the fame time Mirza, the fon of Byram was ordered from Guzerat; as also Sadoc from Bicker, for it was a maxim with Akbar, to change the governors of the provinces every three years, to prevent their acquiring too much influence in the countries under their command, and to show the people that the royal authority prevailed through all departments of the empire. Singh was immediately appointed to the government of Behar, and the viceroyship of Cashmire was conferred upon the noble Mushiddi, Casim the former governor being called to court; Sadoc was in the mean time fent against the Afghans of Sawad and Bajoar, and Ifmaiel who was in that country, recalled and fent to Guzerat.

In the year 997, upon the 23d of the fecond Jemmad, the The king king fet out on a tour to Cashmire, being captivated with the mire, praises which he had heard of the beauty of that country, from every perfon who had feen it. When he reached Bimber, at the entrance of the mountains, he left his army and family behind, and with a finall retinue, fet out to Serina the capital of that kingdom. The learned Alla Shirazi who accompanied him died there, and the king was greatly afflicted for his death, having a particular affection for that omrah, on account of his genius and literary merit.

The king having gratified his fancy with a fight of all the andto Cabul. beauty of Cashmire, refolved to proceed to Cabul. On the way Hakim Gilani, a man famous for learning, and one of the king's companions died, and was buried at Haffen. Akbar having arrived at Attock, detached Cumbo to drive away the Afghans of

To that city Hakim and Jehan, who had been fent on an embaffy to Abdulla, king of the Ufbecks of Maver ul Neré, were just returned with an ambaffador on the part of that monarch. The king having remained two months at Cabul viewing the gardens of pleasure, and distributing justice and charity among the inhabitants, conferred the government upon Mahommed Casim, and on the 20th of Mohirrim 998, returned to Lahore. At Lahore he conferred the government of Guzerat upon Koka, and ordered him from Malava to proceed thither, while the former governor of Guzerat, Ahmed, fucceeded him in his prefidency.

Diffurbances in Guzerat quelled. Koka having arrived at Guzerat, led an army againft Jâmi, a Zemindar of great power in that province, who in alliance with Dowlat, the fon of Ami prince of Jionagur in the Decan, came out to meet him with twenty thoufand horfe. A fharp engagement enfued : Ruffi, Huffein, and Sherrif, omrahs of diffinction in the empire, were killed on the Mogul fide, and a great number of men, while the enemy loft the eldeft fon of Jami, and that prince's vizier, with four thoufand Rajaputs on the field of battle. Victory declared for the the Moguls, and many more Rajaputs fell in their flight.

The king refides at Lahore. Abdulla the Ufbeck, king of the weftern tartary, having about this time taken Buduchfhan, and infefted the borders of Cabul, Akbar refolved to take up his refidence for fome time in Lahore, fearing an irruption of Ufbecks from the north. Jani governor of Sind, notwithflanding the king's vicinity, and his orders to him to repair to court, continued refractory, and prepared for war. Akbar difpatched Mirza the fon of Byram with many omrahs of diffinction, and a well appointed army againft him.

In

In the year 999, Ahmed the governor died at Malava, and was fueceeded by the king's appointment by the emperor's fon Murâd, under the tuition of Ishmaiel Kulli. When the prince arrived upon the confines of Gualila, he heard that a Zemindar of power in those parts, disturbed the peace of the country. He immediately marched against him : the enemy opposed him with resolution, but at last he obtained the victory, and drove the rebel to the woods, where he died in a few days of his wounds. The Zemindar's fon fubmitted himfelf, and after paying a proper fine, was confirmed in his paternal territories. The prince marched from thence, and foon after arrived at Malava.

The king in the mean time fent four ambaffadors to the four princes of the Decan. Feizi, the brother of the learned Abul Fazil, to Afere and Burhanpoor; Amin to Ahmednagur; Mashadi to Bejapoor, and Musaood to Bagnagur; principally with a defign to be informed of the flate of those countries, upon which he had fixed an eye of conquest. Koka governor of Guzerat, who had orders to feize every opportunity of enlarging his province, hearing that Dowlat prince of Jionagur was dead, marched his army to reduce that country, and after a fiege of feven months, made himfelf mafter of the capital and all its dependencies.

In the course of the fame year Mirza laid fiege to the fort of Mirza Suvan, on the banks of the Indus. Jani with a numerous army, fort of Suvan, and a great train of artillery in boats, advanced against him, and having arrived within fourteen miles of the place, he fent a hundred boats full of armed men, and forty larger ones mounted with fwivels, to annoy the befiegers from the river : but Mirza having armed twenty-five boats, fent them against this fleet in the night, and and having killed about two hundred of the enemy, put the reft to flight. Jani after this defeat, with his whole fleet, advanced to the place, and in the month of Mohirrim in the year 1000, landed on a fpot of ground, which was furrounded with a muddy channel, in which part of the river ran when high. Here he maintained his poft against all the attempts of Mirza, and keeping his communication open by water, was well supplied, while he took such methods to prevent provisions from coming to the Moguls, that a great dearth soon ensure in their camp.

The Moguls in distress.

Mirza reduced to this perilous fituation, found himfelf obliged to leave a part of his army before the place, and to march towards Tatta with the reft. Soon after his departure, Jani attacked the detachment which was left to carry on the fiege ; but they defended themfelves till Dowlat a noble of the imperial family of Lodi, joined them from the main army, which was by that time at the diftance of one hundred and fixty miles, with a confiderable reinforcement. So expeditious was Lodi upon this occafion, that he marched one hundred and fixty miles in two days. Jani was then obliged to retreat to a firong poft, and throw up lines for his further fecurity. Mirza in the mean time returned, and shut him up on one fide, while Dowlat Lodi in a manner blockaded him on the other. He was therefore reduced in turn to the extremity of eating his cavalry and beafts of burthen, for want of provisions. This diftrefs obliged Jani to fue for peace, and having given his daughter in marriage to Eric Murza's eldeft fon, he prepared to fet out for court to make his fubmiffion to the king in perfon, as foon as the rains should be over.

Rebellion in Cafhmire. Eufoph Chan, governor general of the kingdom of Cafhmire, had about this time by the king's orders, left his brother Edgar at Cashmire, and prefented himself at court. Edgar in the mean time married the daughter of one of the old royal family of Cashmire, and by the advice of the chiefs of that country, exalted the standard of rebellion, and read the Chutba in his own name. To support him in his usurpation, he raifed a great army; and Cafi collector general of the imperial revenues in Cashmire, Huffein and Omri, who were inferior collectors of the revenues on the part of the king, levied what troops they could upon this occasion, and gave the rebels battle : but Casi was flain, and the reft of the Mogul officers driven out of Cashmire.

The king receiving advices of this rebellion, nominated Ferid to carry on the war in those parts. That general forthwith marched with a confiderable army towards Cashmire. Edgar, as the Mogul advanced, came out to meet him, but upon the night before the expected engagement, Edgar was treacheroufly attacked by Sharoch and Ibrahim, two of his own chiefs, and flying naked out of his tent was murdered, and his head fent to Ferid. The rebel army was difperfed, and Cashmire reduced without further trouble. The king foon after made a fecond tour to that delightful country, where he fpent forty days in rural amusements. He conferred the government of Cashmire upon the noble Eufoph, and turning towards Rhotas, he was met in that place in the year 1001, by Jani and Mirza the fon of Byram, from Tatta. Mirza was immediately ranked with the Sihazaris or Omrahs of three thousand, which was at that time a high dignity, and his government upon the Indus, reduced to the form of a province of the empire.

Koka was this year obliged to take the field against a power- Muziffer of ful chief of Guzerat, who gave protection to the unfortunate himfelf.

Oriffa neduced. Man Singh led in the courfe of this year, the troops in Bengal against Cullulu the Afghan, who created diffurbances in that quarter, and defeating him, reduced all the province of Oriffa, and fent one hundred and twenty elephants which he had taken to the king.

Prince Murad appointed to the government of Guzerat.

Koka being called to court to give fome account of his adminiftration in Guzerat, did not chufe to rifque the enquiry, but putting his family and wealth on board fome fhips, failed for Mecca. The king having received advices of his departure, ordered his fon the prince Murad from Malava to that government, and appointed Sadoc abfolute manager of public affairs under him. Sharoch the grandfon of Soliman, prince of Buduchfhan, was in the mean time appointed to the government of Malava, in the prince's place, and he releafed Cumbo, who had lain fix years in prifon, and appointed him to a principle department under him. Sometime before this period, the enthufiaftic fect of Rofhnai-Afghans had again begun to taife diffurbances about Kotil, but they were defeated by Jaffer Kifvini, who had been lately honored with the title of the noble Afaph, and their chief Jellali, and his brothers, taken and fent prifoners to court.

The king makes war upon the princes of the Decan. The ambaffadors which the king had difpatched to the Decan, having about this time returned, brought advices that their propofals were rejected with contempt by the princes of that country. The king therefore refolved to reduce them to obedience, and for

for that purpose ordered his son, the prince Danial, in the year 1002, with a great army towards the Decan : but before Danial had reached Sultanpoor, the king changed his mind and recalled him, giving the command of the fame army to Mirza, the fon of Byram, known under the honourable title of first of the nobles, and ordered him to continue his march. The prince Ruftum, fovereign of Kandahar, of the posterity of Timur, being driven this year to difficulties by his own brothers and the Ufbecks, came to court and prefented the king with the fort of Kandahar, for which he had the government of Moultan conferred upon him, and was ranked among the nobles of the empire.

The noble Mirza, in the mean time, having arrived at Mindu, Burhan fent Anact Chan with professions of entire fubmission, but falling fick at the fame time, he died in the year 1003. His fon Ibrahim who fucceeded him in the kingdom of Berar, was killed soon after in battle against a partizan, who had rebelled against him in his dominions. Munju his vizier, fet up Ahmed, a young child of the family of the Nizam, upon the throne : but the omrahs diffented from this measure, rebelled against him, and befieged Munju in Ahmednagur. The vizier finding himfelf driven to diffress, fent a perfon to Ahmed-abad the capital of Guzerat, with an ambaffy to the prince Murad, inviting him to come to his affiftance, and he would put him in poffeffion of the fort. Murad having at that time received orders from his father to march into the Decan, with the army from Guzerat, gladly embraced this propofal, and fet out with great expedition. When Mirza, the fon of Byram, who had been lying all this time idle at Mindu, heard of the prince's march, he began to bestir himself, and with his own army and those of the prince Sharoch

He foon after joined his force with that of prince Murad on the borders of the Decan, and this numerous army, march by march, continued its rout to the capital.

Ahmednagur befieged by the Moguls. Munju had by this time quelled the rebellion, and repented of his having called the prince : he therefore laid in a ftore of provisions in the place, and committed it to the government of Bibi, the daughter of Huffein the Nizam of the country, with a ftrong garrifon, and retreated himfelf with the remainder of his army and a large train of artillery, towards. the borders of Berar. Prince Murad and Mirza laid fiege to Ahmednagur in the month of the fecond Ribbi 1004 : they employed themfelves in carrying on approaches, raifing mounts, erecting batteries, and finking mines; while Bibi defended the place with a manly refolution, and wrote to Adil the prince of Berar for affiftance. At the end of three months, the befieged had carried five mines under the wall and baftions : the beliegers deftroyed two of the mines by counter-mines, and continued to fearch for the others. The prince upon the first of Regib, having prepared for the affault, fet fire to the trains, upon which the three charged mines taking effect, blew up fifty yards of the wall : but when the Moguls waited in expectation of blowing up two mines, the befieged recovered from their furprize, and defended the breach with great bravery. The valiant female leader appeared veiled, at their head, and gave orders with fuch prudence and fpirit, that the affailants were beat off in their repeated attempts: the heroine flood all night by the workmen, and the breach breach was filled up before day, with wood, flones, earth, and A. In the mean time it was rumoured abroad that the chief The Mogula cunuch of Adil prince of Berar, was upon his march in conjunction with the forces of Nizam, with an army of feventy. thousand horse, to raise the siege: there being at the same time a fcarcity of provisions in the Mogul camp, the prince and Mirza thought it adviseable to enter into treaty with the befieged. It was flipulated by Bibi, that the prince fhould keep posseffion of Berar, and that Ahmednagur and its dependencies, should remain with her in the name of Bahader, the grandfon of Burhan. These terms being ratified, the prince and Mirza marched towards Berar, and repairing the town of Shapoor, near Battapoor, took up their cantonments in that place. The prince espoused here with great magnificence, the daughter of Bahader, the fon of Ali, prince of Chandez, and divided the province of Berar among his omrahs. Cumbo being about this time difgufted with fome indignities offered him by the prince, left Murad with all his forces, and marched without leave to Malava.

He then advanced, carrying in his face the infolence of his own prowefs, mixed with a contempt for the enemy.

A drawn battle.

The noble Mirza posted himself in the center to receive him : Ali prince of Chandez, and the Indian prince Ram Chund being at the head of a body of volunteers in his front, to begin the attack. The charge was made with fuch intrepidity on the fide of the Moguls, that they broke through the felect volunteers of the enemy, and fell upon the eunuch, where he commanded in perfon. They were however repulsed by a heavy discharge of artillery, fmall arms and rockets, which did great. execution particularly among the Rajaputs and the troops of Chandez, who advanced under their fovereign Ali and the Indian prince. Both those chiefs were killed, with above three thousand of their horse. The center being broke, the Ufbecks and Moguls on the left wing gave way alfo, and the eunuch remained mafter of the field on that fide: but the noble Mirza, who had shifted his post to the right during the action, had made an impreffion there, and was purfuing the enemy, without knowing what had happened on the left. Night in the mean time coming on, and the enemy equally ignorant of what had happened on his left, thought he had gained a complete victory : he however contented himfelf, as it was now dark, with keeping pofferfion of the field, and permitting his troops to plunder the baggage. To fecure their plunder, half of his army deferted to lodge their spoils in places of fecurity, and the valiant eunuch, with the remainder, fat in the . dark, without knowing whither to proceed.

Mirza

Mirza, in the mean time, returning from the purfuit, fell in with A. D. 1596. the enemy's artillery, within a finall diftance of their general, and thinking the enemy entirely routed, determined to remain there till morning with the few that continued with him, for by far the greater part of his army thinking themselves defeated, had fled full fpeed to the capital of Berar. While things were in this perplexing fituation, the eunuch's troops began to light up fires and flambeaus where they flood, having heard that the noble Mirza was near. The Mogul general being informed alfo, by his fpies, that the enemy was in his neighbourhood, he ordered fome pieces of artillery to be loaded and fired among them, which threw them into great confusion. Joheil immediately ordered all the fires to be extinguished, and shifting his ground, fent fcouts all round to collect fuch of his troops as were dispersed over the plain and in the adjacent villages.

In the mean time Mirza blew his trumpets and beat to arms, according to his manner, which being heard by fuch of his troops as were difperfed over the field, they hastened towards him in finall detachments. Several of the Moguls meeting with others of the enemy in the dark, they fought and formed fuch a fcene of horror and confusion, as is not easy to be described; while Allah! Allah! refounded from all fides, and every eye was fixed upon the eaft, in expectation of the dawn. When the day appeared, Joheil was feen marching towards the Moguls with twelve thousand horse. Though the army of Mirza did not exceed four thousand, he determined once more to difpute the field, and formed his line to oppose the enemy. The battle now joined with redoubled fury on both fides, but Joheil, after exhibiting the most daring acts of valor, funk at last under fatigue and wounds, and fell from his horse. A body of his dependants bore him inftantly off: his army according to cuftom.

A. D. 1596. Higer. 1005. cuftom followed him, and left Mirza mafter of a bloody field. The Mogul, in no condition to purfue the run-a-ways, returned to Shapoor, to join the prince, Murad, and the reft of his army.

The king returns from Lahore. The emperor, having about this time received advice of the death of Abdulla, the Ufbeck, king of the weftern Tartary, who had long threatened an invafion from the north, returned in fecurity from Lahore to Agra. Having in that city heard of the noble Mirza's victory, he fent him an honorary drefs and a fine horfe, as marks of his particular favor. As private animofities had long fubfifted between the prince Murad and Mirza, which being much inflamed by the intrigues of Sadoc, now rofe to a dangerous height; the king therefore thought it imprudent to leave them longer together: he difpatched Eufoph Mufhaddi and Abul Fazil * to the prince, and in the year 1006, recalled Mirza to the prefence. But though the whole mifunderftang had plainly fprung from the prince's froward and jealous difpofition, the king's refentment fell upon that great man, and he remained a long time in difgrace.

Prince Murad dies.

Eufoph, and Abul Fazil, in a fhort time reduced the forts of Narnalla, Kavile, Kerlah, and others, in the province of Berar; but the prince Murad falling fick, died in the month of Shawal 1007, and was first buried in the capital of Berar, but by the king's orders the body was afterwards removed to Agra, and laid by the fide of his grandfather Humaioon. The king's grief for the death of his fon, instead of extinguishing his defire of conquering the Decan, only enflamed it the more, to divert his mind from forrow. In the mean time the omrahs

The king, alarmed at this difaster, restored the noble Mirza Mirza sent to favor, and required his daughter, the beautiful Jana, for his fon Danial in marriage. He then difpatched him with that prince, and a well appointed army, to carry on the war in the Decan, and moved the Imperial standard that way in the 1008 of the Higera, leaving his dominions in the east under the charge of the prince royal, the illustrious Selim. In the mean time the prince Danial and Mirza entered the Decan, and as Bahader, the fon of Ali, prince of Chander, was not found like his father, firm to his allegiance, and had thut himfelf up in Afere, they halted upon the banks of the Gang, near Pattan, and endeavored to perfuade him over to their interest. In the mean time the king had reached Mindu, and dispatched orders to them to proceed to Ahmednagur the capital, and inveft it: for that he himfelf would take up Afere in his way.

The prince and the noble Mirza accordingly marched with Invefts Ahabout thirty thousand horse towards Ahmednagur. Abin Buchsi and other omrahs of the Decan, fled from that city, and left the Moguls to invest the place. The king first endeavored to bring over Bahader by fair means, but he would not liften to terms. Akbar therefore marched to Burhanpoor, and fent his omrahs to befiege Afere, which lay only fix miles from that place. Bahader, though he had still troops fufficient for the defence of the place, as well as a large magazine of warlike flores, and provisions in abundance, permitted despair to stain the current of his mind.

Ahmadnagur taken.

The fiege of Almednagur was in the mean time carried on with great vigor, by Mirza and the prince. The city was at length carried by a ftratagem, executed by Huffein. This we shall have occasion to relate minutely in the history of the Decan. Ahmednagur was taken in the beginning of the year 1009: the ftrong fortrefs of Afere, fome months after, was furrendered to the king: an immense treasure which had been accumulated there, for many ages, fell into Akbar's hands, with all the wealth of Ahmednagur. Ibrahim, king of Bijanagur, one of the four principalities of the Decan, having folicited peace and paid homage, reconciled Akbar, who demanded Adil's daughter in marriage for his fon Danial. A Mogul noble, named Huffein, was accordingly difpatched to bring the bride and a fine from Bijanagur. The king reduced Afere, Birhanpoor, Ahmednagur, and Berar, into the form of a province, and conferred the government upon Danial, under the tuition and direction of his father-in-law, Mirza. The king, after these transactions, returned in triumph to the city of Agra, and in the year 1011, annexed his acquifitions in the Decan to his other royal titles in a proclamation.

In the 1013 of the Higera, Huffein who had been difpatched to Bijanagur, returned with the royal bride, and the flipulated tribute. He delivered the young fultana to Danial, upon the banks of the Gang near Pattan, where the nuptials were celebrated with great pomp and magnificence. Huffein the embassiador, after the ceremony was over, proceeded to the king at Agra.

Upon the first of Zehidge of the year 1013, the prince Danial Akbar dies." died of a debauch in the city of Burhanpoor, in the Decan. His death and the manner of it fo much affected the king, who was in a declining flate of health, that he every day became worfe, till upon the 13th of the fecond Jemmad in the year 1014, he left that world, through which he had moved with fo much luftre, after having reigned fifty-one years, and fome months. Mahommed Akbar was a prince endued with many fhining virtues. His generofity was great, and his clemency without Hischaracter bounds: this latter virtue he often carried beyond the line of prudence, and in many inftances paft the limits of that juffice which he owed to the ftate; but his daring fpirit made this noble error feem to proceed from a generous difpofition, and not from an effeminate weakness of mind. His character as a warrior was rather that of an intrepid partizan, than of a great general: he exposed his perfon with unpardonable rafhnefs, and often attempted capital points without using that power which at the time he poffeffed .---- But fortune and a daring foul fupplied the place of conduct in Akbar: he brought about at once by defperate means, what calm caution would take much time to accomplifh. This circumftance fpread the terror of the name of this fon of true glory fo wide, that Hindoftan, ever fubject to the convultions of rebellion, became fettled and calm in his prefence. He raifed a wall of difciplined valor * against the powers of the north, and by his own activity infpired his omrahs with enterprize.

He loved glory to excefs, and thirfted after a reputation for perfonal valor: he encouraged learning with the bounty of kings, and delighted in hiftory, which is in truth the fchool of fovereigns. As his warm and active difpolition prompted him to perform actions worthy of the divine pen of the poet, fo he was particularly fond of heroic compositions in verfe.—In fhort, the faults of Akbar were virtues carried to extremes; and if he fometimes did things beneath the dignity of a great king, he never did any thing unworthy of a good man. His name lives, and will for ever live, the glory of the houfe of Timur, and an example of renown to the kings of the world.

State of Afia at the death of Akbar. Shaw Tamaſp, king of Perſia, lived down to the twentieth year of Akbar. He reigned, in great tranquility, and with fome renown, fifty three years. His fon, Iſmael the ſecond, fucceeded him; but he was taken off in leſs than two years after his acceſſion, by the procurement of his ſiſter Pería Concona, who was aſraid of his cruelty. # MOGUL EMPIRE.

INTRODUCTION.

AHOMMED FERISHTA, the author of the pre- Propofal for ceding abridgment of the hiftory of India, finishes his account of that empire with the death of Akbar. The tranflator has reason to entertain hopes of being able to procure original and authentic histories of the Mogul dynasty eftablished in Hindostan, from the conquest of that country by the great fultan Baber, to the prefent times: he, therefore, will not break in upon his defign of giving, fome time or other, to the public, a complete hiftory of the posterity of Timur in India, by retailing the very imperfect accounts already published in Europe. But as, to translate from the Persian language is a task of difficulty, his engaging further, in works of this kind, will depend entirely upon the reception the public shall give to his first attempt in that way. If he shall find that he is not capable a compleat hiftory of the family of Timur.

pable to acquit himfelf, in fome degree, to the fatisfaction of the world, he will, in prudence, lay down his pen; and leave that field to men of greater abilities, who may hereafter turn their thoughts to the fubject.

Domestic affairs of India little known.

The transactions of the court of Delhi, fince the invasion of the famous Nadir Shaw, king of Perfia, which happened about thirty years ago, are very little known in the Weft. They have not, even in Afia, been hitherto committed to writing; and if the prefent confusions of the Mogul empire shall long continue, it is probable the memory of them will die with those who were principally concerned in them. This confideration has induced the translator of Ferishta's history, to throw together the most material events, which have happened in the empire, fince the memorable irruption of the Perfians, in the year 1738. He derives his authority, for fome of the facts, from a Perfian manufcript, now in his hands, concerning fix years of the reign of Mahommed Shaw; and as to the reft, he principally follows a fhort sketch of the affairs of the empire, given to him in writing, by his intimate friend the Rai Raiân, fecretary of state to the prefent Mogul.

Succeffion from Akbar to Mahommed Shaw. To continue the line of connection, between the preceding hiftory and the reign of Mahommed, who fat upon the throne of Delhi when the invation of Nadir Shaw happened, it may not be improper, just to mention the fucceffion of the kings, from Akbar to that period. It is neceffary to obferve, that, after confulting the most authentic Persian histories, the author of this account finds himfelf obliged to differ from all the European writers, who have treated the fubject, with regard to the duration of most of the reigns.

Upon

Upon the death of Akbar, his fon Selim afcended the throne, in Agra, upon Thurfday the 20th of the fecond Jemmåd, in the 1014 year of the Higera. He, upon his acceffion, affumed the title of JEHANGIRE, or lord of the world, and reigned twentytwo years, nine months, and twenty days, with much more reputation and fuccefs than could have been expected of fo weak a prince. His death happened upon Sunday the 28th of Siffor, in the 1037 year of the Higera, which corresponds with the 1627 of the Chriftian æra.

The prince KURRUM, the third fon of Jehangire, mounted the throne at Agra, upon the 8th of the fecond Jemmâd, in the year 1037, and, under the title of SHAW JEHAN, or king of the world, reigned thirty-two years, three months, and twenty days. He was depofed by his third fon, the famous Aurungzebe, who dated the commencement of his reign, from the first of Ramzan, in the 1069 of the Higera. Aurungzebe, upon his aceffion, took the name of Allumgire*.

ALLUMGIRE, having reigned fifty years, two months and twenty-eight days, died, in a very advanced age, at Ahmednagur, in the Decan, upon Friday the 28th of Zicada, in the 1119 of the Higera, or the 1707 of our æra.

Mahommed Mauzim, Aurungzebe's fecond fon, fucceeded his father in the throne, under the title of BAHADAR SHAW. He died, after a fhort reign of four years and eleven months, and was fucceeded by his eldeft fon, Moaz ul Dien.

* Though Shaw Jehan was confined during the time his four rebellious fons, Dara Sheko, Suja, Aurungzebe, and Morâd, contended for the crown, yet as. Aurungzebe prevailed over his brothers, and dated his reign from the year 1069, we have included the time of the civil wars in the reign of his father.

Moaz ul Dien, under the title of JEHANDAR SHAW, reigned eighteen months. Some writers do not include him in the fucceffion of kings, as the fucceeding emperor, the fon of Azim Shaw, the fecond fon of the preceding emperor, Bahadar Shaw, under the name of Firrochfere, dated his reign from the death of his grandfather.

FIRROCHSERE, according to his own computation, reigned fix years. He was blinded, and afterwards put to death, by the two Seids, upon the 12th of the fecond Jemmad, in the 1130 of the Higera.

1717

RAFFEIH UL DIRJAT, the fon of Raffeih ul Shaw, the third fon of the emperor Bahadar Shaw, was raifed to the throne, by the ambitious Seids; and after a nominal reign of three months, was put to death by the fame faction, by whofe intereft he had obtained the crown.---His brother RAFFEIH UL DOWLAT fucceeded him; but he died in a few days.

H O M M A ME D.

AHOMMED, the fon of Jehân, and grandfon of A.D. 1718. I the emperor Bahader Shaw, acceded to the throne of Delhi, in the month of Shawal of the year 1130 of the Higera .--- Mahommed, having rid himfelf of the two Seids, Abdalla and Haffen, who had fo long tyranized in the empire, raifing and depofing kings at pleafure, gave himfelf wholly up to indolence, and the enervating pleafures of the Haram. The distractions, before Mahommed's accession, occasioned principally by the ambition of the Seids, gave the first mortal wound to the Mogul empire, under which it has ever fince languished. Most of the omrahs, either envying or dreading the power of the Seids, formed ambitious fchemes of independence in their refpective provinces, which the apparent debility of the regal authority very much favored.

An omrah called Cuttulich Chan, who, as Nizam ul muluck, Defigns of the or regulator of the country, a title given to the governor general of the Decan, commanded, for fome years, all the rich provinces of that extensive country. He being fensible of the weaknefs of Mahommed, maintained a great flanding army, under a pretence of keeping the unfubdued Indian princes and Mahrattor * chiefs in awe. But the real defign of this force was to found an independent kingdom for himfelf in the Decan, as Nizam.

SALGIN .

Haffen Caco Bemeni had done in the reign of Tuglick Shaw *. To facilitate his ambitious views, the Nizam began to extend his power in the Decan, by the reduction of the neighbouring Indian princes, who had not yet fubmitted to the Mogul yoke. Though the revenues of his government muft have been very confiderably increafed by thefe conquefts, he remitted none to the Delhi; and, at the fame time, to weaken the empire, he encouraged, or at leaft, permitted the Mahrattors to make hoftile incurfions into the interior provinces. Thefe irregular marauders ravaged the opulent kingdoms of Malava, Narvar, Biana and Ajmere, in fuch a manner, that no revenues could be paid by the unfortunate inhabitants.

King's weak nefs. The weak Mahommed, inftead of checking this infolence with the fword, difgraced the dignity of the houfe of Timur, by fubmitting to become, in a manner, tributary to those defpicable banditti. He agreed to pay them the Chout, or fourth part of the revenues of those provinces, which had been subject to their depredations. From this pufillanimous conduct of Mahommed, we may date the irretrievable decline of the Mogul empire. That opinion, which supports government in every country, was now destroyed in India; and each petty chieftain began to start up into a prince, as he had nothing to fear from a government which had betrayed such evident symptoms of timidity.

Low:an's character. Chan Dowran Sumfam ul Dowla was, at this time, captaingeneral of the empire. As the offices of paymaster-general and commander in chief of the troops are injudiciously joined in one person, in Hindostan, Dowran had such an influence in the state, that he engrossed to himself all the ministerial power. He left, in fhort, nothing but their names in the government to the king and his vizier, Kummir. Dowran was fly, artful, infinuating; of an active and intriguing difpofition; in appearance affuming no authority, when, at the fame time, he directed every thing. He executed, in public, as by the king's orders, whatever he himfelf had refolved upon in private. As the indolent Mahommed was even averse to the trouble of thinking, the fuggestions of this artful nobleman, who was full of plaufibility, and prompt to execute whatever he advised, were always grateful to the royal ear. The captain-general, though personally brave, permitted his master's authority to be daily infulted by defpicable enemies. He forefaw that to take the field, without the king, would probably put an end to his influence over him; for he knew that the difpolition of Mahommed was fickle and inconftant; and apt to be fwayed to any thing, by every artful perfon near him.

Dowran made many unfuccefsful attempts to perfuade the King's indeemperor to accompany him to the field. The diffolute monarch was not to be removed from the luxurious indolence of the palace. The Mahrattors, in the mean time, continued their inroads. They ravaged the province of Guzerat, and raifed the Chout as far as the Indus. They returned back from that river, by the way of Ajmere and Biana, and fpread their devaflations to the very gates of Agra. The captain-general, though much against his inclination, found himself obliged to march against these plunderers. But, instead of chastifing them, he inglorioufly promifed to pay them the Chout, upon condition they fhould immediately evacuate the provinces.

Mahrattors defeated.

The barbarians gaining courage by this fubmiffion, and trufting very little to promifes extorted by fear, from Dowran, croffed the Jumna, near Calpee, with a defign to plunder the province of Oud. Sadit Chan, who then poffeffed that fubafhip, oppofed them, between the rivers in the diftrict of Korah, and gave them a total defeat. They fled to Feridabad near Delhi, whither they were clofely purfued by Sadit, who had, on his way, joined the imperial army under Dowran.

Attempt upon -Delhi.

Before the united armies under Dowran and Sadit came up, the Mahrattors made an attempt to plunder Delhi. They were oppofed, without the walls, by two imperial omrahs, Haffen and Amir, the former of whom was killed in the action. The Mahrattors had now poffeffed themfelves of the fuburbs, when the vizier, coming up with an army, put them to flight. But notwithitanding thefe repeated defeats, the Mahrattors found means to retreat, with a great booty, to the Decan, their native country.

The Nizam called to court. The court of Delhi, finding that the Nizam of the Decan favored the incurfions of the Mahrattors, devifed many fehrmes to inveigle him to court, that they might deprive him either of his life or government. The crafty Nizam, penetrating into their defigns, conceived an implacable refentment againft Dowran, who, he knew, was at the bottom of the whole affair. But as the empire, notwithftanding its growing imbecility, was ftill fufficiently ftrong to reduce the Nizam, had he broke forth in open rebellion, he thought it most prudent to obey the royal command. He, however, previously ftrengthened his interest at court, by a coalition with many great omrahs, who were difgusted with the infolence of Dowran. The Nizam, having taken a step fo necessary for his own fafety, fet out for court, leaving leaving his fon Ghazi ul Dien in the government of the Decan. He arrived at Agra, with a retinue, or rather an army of 20000 men; and, as he held the office of Vakeel Muttuluch *, or abfolute agent of the provinces, he expected to command Dowran, and to draw all the reins of government into his own hands.

Sadit, governor of Oud, pluming himfelf upon his fuccefs Intrigues at against the Mahrattors, aspired to the ministerial power. The king continued to favor Dowran, and to fupport him against the Nizam; for, however weak Mahommed was, he could not but fee through that ambitious governor's defigns, by his behavior for fome years back. But, as the Nizam had, upon the fpot, a force to protect his perfon, and a ftrong party at court; and as his fon, a man of great parts, commanded all the provinces of the Decan, the king was affured, that to deprive him of his government, would occafion a revolt, which, in its confequences, might prove fatal to the royal house of Timur.

In the mean time Sadit, finding that he could not effect any Party against thing against the united interests of the Nizam and Vizier, who had joined factions, was eafily brought over to their party. The terms of this coalition were, that when the Nizam and Vizier should force themselves into the management of the affairs of government, Sadit should be appointed paymaster-general of the forces, with the title of captain general of the empire, which Dowran at that time possefied.

The acceffion of Sadit and his party did not render the faction of the Nizam and Vizier fufficiently ftrong to turn Dowran from his high employ. He had absolute possession of the royal ear, and the army, who depended upon him for their pay, remained firm to his intereft. The faction of the malcontents was reduced Nadir Shaw invited by a faction to India.

The famous Nadir Shaw, king of Perfia, was at this juncture, in the province of Candahar. The difaffected omrahs refolved to invite him to India. They forefaw that a Perfian invafion would occasion confusions and distractions in the empire, which must facilitate their own fchemes of independence in their respective governments; it must, at any rate ruin Dowran, which was a very capital object to men poffefied of fuch inveterate animolities against that minister. Whether the Nizam did not even extend his views to the empire itfelf, admits of fome doubt. Many fenfible men in India think that he did; and affirm, that his opinion was, that Nadir Shaw would depose Mahommed; and, to fecure his conquest, extirpate the family of Timur : he argued with himfelf, that as it was not probable that the Perfian would fix his refidence in Hindoftan, he hoped, for his fervices, to fecure to himfelf the viceroyship of that empire; and that afterwards time and circumftances would point out the line of his future proceedings.

His policy.

Full of these ambitious projects, and at the same time to avenge himfelf of his political enemy, the Nizam, in conjunction with Sadit, wrote to Nadir Shaw. That monarch received their letters at Candahar, and, in an answer to them, pointed out many difficulties which he had to furmount in the proposed invasion, He reprefented to them, that it would be extremely difficult to penetrate even into Cabul and Peshawir, provinces belonging to the empire to the north-west of the Indus, which provinces Nafir Chan had governed for twenty years, with great reputation, on, and kept in pay a formidable army of Moguls and Afgans : A. D. 17381 that should he even force his way through the government of Nafir, there were five great rivers to crofs in Punjab, where Zekirria, governor of Lahore, would certainly oppose him; and that even should he get over those obstacles, the imperial army fill remained to be defeated.

The Nizam, and his colleague in treason, endeavoured to remove the king's objections, by affuring him, that they would bring over the governors of the frontier provinces to their faction; and that, as they themfelves commanded one half of the imperial army, little danger was to be dreaded from the other. The Perfian began his march from Candahar, with a great army, about the vernal equinox of the 1149 of the Higera. He took the rout of Ghizni, and the governor of that city came out with prefents, and fubmitted himfelf and the province to the king, agreeing to pay the ufual revenues to Perfia. Nadir Shaw continued his march from Ghizni to Cabul, which city he immediately invefted. Shirza, an omrah of feventy years of age, was, at this time, governor of Cabul. Being fummoned, he refused to furrender, and made the proper dispositions for an obstinate defence.

The king of Perfia finding that neither fair promifes nor threats could induce Shirza to open the gates of Cabul, affaulted the place for fix days together. In this defperate manner, many of the braveft foldiers, who fuffer most upon these occasions, fell; without making any impression on the besieged : upon the seventh day, Nadir Shaw found means to bring over to his party, Nafir, governor of the province of Cabul, the fon of that Nafir, who was, for twenty years, fubadar of Peshawir. That traitor, with the provincial army, prefented himfelf at that gate of the city which

> The unfortunate Shirza, not fuspecting the treachery of the young omrah, confented to receive within the walls the women and baggage of the provincial army; but infifted that the troops fhould encamp before the gate, till a council fhould be held, concerning what was best to be done upon this urgent occasion. The women and baggage were accordingly admitted, with a proper guard, and Shirza, with a few attendants, went out to have an interview with Nafir. No fooner was Shirza out of the city, than the king of Perfia began a general affault ; while one Rahim, an officer of the traitor Nafir, feized upon Shirza, and confined him.

> The two fons of Shirza, ignorant of their father's fate, in the mean time defended the gates with great firmnefs and refolution ; till one of them was killed by that part of Nafir's army that had been admitted into the city. The remaining brother, in this defperate fituation, knew not which enemy he ought to oppofe, while the garrifon, ftruck with terror and confusion, deferted. their pofts upon the wall. Nadir Shaw took advantage of this panick, forced open the gates, took the place, maffacred many of the inhabitants, and inhumanly put to death the gallant Shirza. and his fon.

thousand complete fuits of armour, inlaid with gold; four thoufand of polished steel, four thousand mails for horses, and a great quantity of fine tiffues and dreffes, deposited in Cabul by the emperor Shaw Jehan. The king of Persia remained at Cabul feven months, before he would attempt to crofs the Indus. He, in the mean time, kept up a correspondence with the confpirators in Delhi, and maturely fettled his plan of operations. He, at length, put his army in motion, and directed his march to Peshawir.

Nafir, the Mogul governor of Pefhawir, had wrote, repeatedly, Province of to the court of Delhi, for fuccours; but the captain general mits. Dowran, in his answers, affected to despise the king of Persia; and infinuated, that it was impoffible he could meditate the conquest of Hindostan. He, however, promised, from time to time, that he himfelf would march with the imperial army, and drive the invader back to Perfia. The difaffected omrahs wrote, at the fame time, to Nafir, to make the best terms he could with Nadir Shaw; for that there was little hopes of his being reinforced with any part of the royal army. Nafir, finding himfelf neglected by the court, after a faint refistance, furrendered himfelf prisoner to the king of Persia, upon the 20th of Shaban. He Novemb. 20; was foon after taken into favor by that monarch, and appointed one of his viziers. Nadir Shaw had, by this time, croffed the Nilab, one of the most confiderable of the five branches of the Indus. He issued out an order to ravage the country, to fpread the terror of his arms far and wide.

Daily advices of the approach of the Perfians came to Delhi. Confernation A general confternation among the people, and a diffraction in the councils of the government enfued. The king and his minister, Dowran, were fo weak, that either they did not fuspect

New obstacles were daily thrown in the way of the military preparations of Dowran, till the Nizam and his colleagues thought, that the procrastination which they had occasioned, had fufficiently weakened the imperial cause.

A camp formed. December 1.

Upon the first of Ramzan, the Vizier, the Nizam and Dowran, incamped without the city, with a great train of artillery, and began to levy forces. Nadir Shaw, during these transactions, croffed the Bea, and on the first of Shawal appeared before Lahore. Zekiria, governor of the city and province, who was incamped with 5000 horse before the walls, retreated into the city. He, the next day, marched out and attacked the Perfians. A general rout of his army was the confequence, and the conquerors were so close to the heels of the run-aways, that they possified themselves of the gates.—Zekiria waited immediately upon Nadir Shaw, with a royal present of half a lack of roupees, was politely received by that monarch, and Lahore was preferved from being plundered.

Nadir Shaw in foll march to Delhi. February 14. The king of Perfia continued his march towards Delhi, and upon the 14th of Zicada, appeared in fight of the imperial army, The emperor was encamped upon the plains of Karnal; fo that only the canal, which fupplied Delhi with water, divided the armies. The Moguls had only poffeffed themfelves of that ground about two days before the arrival of Nadir Shaw, and had thrown up entrenchments and redoubts before them, mounted with five hundred pieces of artillery. The army, which the king now commanded in perfon, confifted of 150,000 horfe, exclusive of irregular infantry. This unweildy body of militia was composed of all forts of people, collected indifcriminately in the provinces, by the omrahs, who thought that a fufficient number of men and and horfes was all that was neceffary to form a good army. Sub- A. D. 1739. ordination was a thing unknown in the Mogul camp : the private foldier, as well as the omrah, acted only by the impulse of his own mind.

The Perfians, though not fo numerous as the Moguls, were His difciunder fome degree of regulation. The rank of Nadir Shaw's officers was determined ; and his own commands were inftantly and implicitly obeyed. Severe to excess, he pardoned no neglect or difobedience in his omrahs. He has even been known to fend a mace-bearer to a general, at the head of 5000 horse; with orders to make him halt and receive corporal punishment, for a misdemeanor, in the front of his own men. Though this rigor may be thought in Europe too tyrannical and repugnant to a military spirit; yet, in a country where the principles of honour are little known, fear is the ftrongeft motive to a ftrict performance of duty.

The governor of Oud, upon the 14th of Zicada, having outmarched his baggage, joined the imperial army. Just as he was receiving an honorary drefs from the emperor, advice came that the light horfe of Nadir Shaw had attacked his baggage. Sadit requefted of the king to be permitted to march out against the enemy. The whole of this attack was a plan concerted between Nadir Shaw and the traitor, in order to draw the Moguls from their entrenchments. The king, however, laid his commands upon Sadit to wait until the next morning, when, " by the favor of God," he intended to march out, with his whole army, to give the Perfians battle. But fo little did Sadit regard Mahommed's orders, that, as foon as he had quitted the prefence, he iffued out with 1000 horfe, which he had brought from his govetnment, and attacked the enemy. A mock engagement now commenced,

Dowran attacks the Perfians,

The emperor, juftly incenfed at the difobedience of Sadit, would not, for fome time, permit any fuccours to be fent to him. Dowran, at length, prevailed with the king to permit him, with 15,000 men, to fupport Sadit. When Dowran came up to the field, Sadit, in a feigned attack, joined the Perfians, and permitted himfelf to be taken prifoner. His defign was to get the ftart of his partner in treason the Nizam, in engaging the Persian monarch in his intereft.

with great bravery.

In the mean time, the troops of Sadit being ftrangers to the treachery of their commander, joined Dowran, and continued the engagement. Dowran was immediately attacked on all fides, by the bulk of the Perfian army. He, however, for fome time, maintained his ground with great firmness and resolution; and was at length unwillingly drawn from the field, though he had received a wound which foon after proved mortal, by three repeated meffages from the king, commanding his immediate attendance.

Recalled to the camp.

Mahommed was, with good reafon, apprehenfive that the Nizam, who was then in the camp, was preparing to feize him, which made him fo anxious for the prefence of Dowran. When the wounded general appeared before the king, he told him of the fituation of affairs, and earneftly intreated him to permit him to return to the field, with the troops which were under his immediate command, as captain-general, confifting of 36000 men, together with two hundred pieces of cannon. "Grant my re-" quest " quest," faid he, " and you shall never see me return but in A. D. 1739. " triumph."

The king was now perplexed beyond measure. He dreaded The king apthe defigns of the Nizam, should Dowran be absent, and, at the fame time, he durft not permit the traitor to march out of the lines, for fear he should join the Persians. He, therefore, fell into the common error of weak minds, and hefitated, in hopes that delay would give birth to a more favorable concurrence of events .- He was deceived : the happy moment, for the prefervation of himfelf and the empire, was now upon the wing. His troops maintained still their ground, under Muzziffer, the gallant brother of Dowran; and a reinforcement would turn the fcale of victory in their favor.

When Dowran quitted the field, the command of those Moguls, who were engaged, devolved upon his brother Muzziffer. Muzziffer. That brave omrah made a violent charge upon the Perfian army, and penetrated to the very door of Nadir Shaw's tent. There, for want of being supported from the camp, Muzziffer, Ali, Dowran's fon, Raja Gugermull, Mullu, Eadgar, and twentyfeven officers of diffinction, covered one fmall fpot of ground with their bodies. Ten thousand common Mogul foldiers were flain in this defperate action ; which had almost proved fatal to Nadir Shaw, for his whole army were upon the point of giving. way; feveral great detachments having fled back forty miles from the field of battle. After the engagement, the few that remained of the Moguls, retired within the entrenchments *.

Gallant bel haviour of

Dowran

A. D. 1739. Dowran dies of his wounds. Dowran, though wounded, had that night an interview with the Nizam. It was agreed, that the whole army fhould next morning march out of the lines, and attack the Perfians in their camp. But when the morning came, Dowran's wound, which he had received in the arm, was fo much inflamed, that he could not act, and, therefore, the meditated attack was delayed. In the evening of the 18th, a mortification enfued, which was then attributed to fomething applied to the wound by a furgeon bribed by the Nizam; and many in India ftill continue in the fame belief. Be that as it will, Dowran expired that night, amidft the tears of his fovereign, who had a great friendfhip for him.

Defigns of the Nizam.

February 18.

When this brave omrah, on whom alone the hopes of the emperor refted, was dead, the Nizam flood unrivalled in the management of affairs. The whole authority devolved upon him, and the king became a cypher in the midft of his own camp. The traitor finding now the power of the empire in his hands, under a certainty of being able to difpofe of the king at any time, according to his own pleafure, fet a treaty on foot with Nadir Shaw, for the immediate return of that monarch into Perfia. So little hopes had the Perfian, at this time, of conquering the Mogul empire, that he actually agreed for the pitiful fum of fifty lacks of roupees, about fix hundred and twenty-five thoufand pounds, to evacuate Hindoftan.

Fruffrated by Sadit.

Sadit, who, we have already obferved, was in the Perfian camp, hearing of these transactions, used all possible means to break off the treaty. The regard of Nadir Shaw to his plighted faith, was not proof against the lucrative offers of Sadit. That omrah promised to pay to the Persian two crores of roupees or two

two millions five hundred thousand pounds out of his own A.D. 1739. private fortune, upon condition he should reduce the Nizam, and place himfelf at the head of the administration .---- In the mean time, the Nizam, who was now appointed captain-general by the emperor, finding that Nadir Shaw broke the treaty, began to talk in a high ftrain, and to make preparations for coming to action with the Perfians, to which the king ftrenuoufly urged him. But the active fpirit of Nadir Shaw was not idle during these transactions. He possessed himself of several strong posts, round the Indian camp, and totally cut off their fupplies of provisions. The Nizam perceiving that he must act with great difadvantage, if he fhould march out of his lines and attack the Perfians, began to renew the treaty, and offered more than Sadit had done to Nadir Shaw.

Mahommed, being informed that these two villains, without his communication, were making feparate bargains, about himfelf and his empire, and that he even had not the shadow of authority in his own camp, took a fudden refolution to throw himfelf upon the clemency of Nadir Shaw. " A declared ene-" my," faid he to the few friends who still adhered to him, is " by no means to be dreaded fo much as fecret foes, under the " fpecious character of friends." Having, therefore, previoufly acquainted the Persian of his intentions, he set out in the morning of the 20th, in his travelling throne, with a finall retinue, for Nadir Shaw's camp.

The king of Persia, upon the Mogul's approach, sent his son, Hisreception. Nifir Alla, to conduct him to the royal tent. Nadir Shaw advanced a few steps from his throne, and embraced Mahommed, and, fitting down, placed him upon his left hand. The substance of their conversation has been already given to the public Tt Nadir Shaw in perplexity. Nadir Shaw, after this conversation, retired to another tent, called to him his vizier, and confulted with him what was beft to be done with Mahommed, in this critical fituation. The vizier told him, that, should he confine the king, the Nizam, who commanded the army, would immediately act for himfelf; and, as he was an able officer, they might meet with great difficulty in reducing him. But that, should the king be permitted to return to the camp with assures of friendship and protection, a party would join him, that would, at least, be a ballance against the influence of the Nizam.

His policy.

Nadir Shaw faw the propriety of what his vizier advifed. He immediately returned to the royal tent, and told Mahommed, that, as hitherto the Imperial houfe of Timur had not injured the Perfians, it was far from his intentions to deprive Mahommed of his kingdom. "But," faid he, with a determined look, "the expence of this expedition muft be paid, and, during "the time of collecting the money, my fatigued army muft refresh themfelves in Delhi." The emperor made little reply Nadir Shaw's difcourfe. He was, however, permitted to return to his camp, and the Perfian began to lay fehemes to feize the Nizam. One Cafim Beg was employed in this affair. He, in Nadir Shaw's name, made the Nizam many protestations of friendship, and obtained a promise, that he would visit that monarch in his camp. He accordingly, upon the 24th, fet out, and was, immediately upon his arrival in the Persian lines, feized, A. D. 1739. and, together with fome great omrahs who attended him, confined.

and

Mahommed, looking upon the Nizam's confinement as a plan February 26. laid by the traitor himfelf, in order that he might negotiate matters with the Perfian with more fecurity, determined to pay a fecond vifit to Nadir Shaw .- That monarch had, by this time, fecured moft of the Mogul omrahs, one after another, and when the emperor, upon the 26th, arrived in the camp, a tent was pitched for him near the royal pavilion. The unfortunate Mahommed was carried into his tent, and left for fome time alone. A collation was brought him, and he ate very heartily; without betraying any fymptoms of being affected with his unhappy fituation. Nadir Shaw was greatly aftonished when he heard of Mahommed's behaviour, and exclaimed : "What kind of man " must this be, who can, with fo much indifference, give his " freedom and empire to the wind ? But we are told, by the " wife, that greatness of mind confists in two extremes : to " fuffer patiently, or to act boldly; to defpife the world, or to " exert all the powers of the mind to command it. This man " has chosen the former : but the latter was the choice of Nadir " Shaw."

Though Mahommed was hindered from returning to his own Ufed with camp, he was permitted to have all his domeftics about him, who amounted to three thousand. A thousand Persian horse mounted guard upon him : but this pretended honor, which was conferred upon him, was a certain badge of his forlorn condition. In the mean time, Kummir, the vizier, Surbullind Chan, the Nizam, and all the principal Mogul omrahs, were kept in the fame kind of honorable confinement. The Perfian had now nothing Tt 2

March 2. Who marches to Delhi. Upon the 2d of Zehidge, Nadir Shaw moved from Karnâl towards Delhi. The emperor, guarded by ten thousand men, marched a few miles in his rear. The Mogul army were, at the fame time, ordered to march in two irregular columns, one on each fide of the Persians, the front of whose column was advanced two miles beyond the other two. By continued marches, Nadir Shaw arrived upon the 8th in the suburbs of the city. He himsfelf, at the head of 12000 horse, entered the city next day.

Behaviour to the Nizam,. &c. The king of Perfia, finding himfelf in poffettion of Delhi, called the Nizam and Sadit into his prefence, and addreffed them. in the following extraordinary manner: "Are not you both "most ungrateful villians to your king and country; who, after "posseffing fuch wealth and dignities, called me from my own. "dominions, to ruin them and yourfelves? But I will fcourge "you all with my wrath, which is the inftrument of the vengeance of God." Having spoke these words, he spit upon their beards, the highest affront possible to Mussulen, and turned them, with every mark of indignity, from his prefence.

After the traitors were thruft out into the court of the palace, the Nizam addreffed himfelf to Sadit, and fwore, by the holy prophet, that he would not furvive this indignity. Sadit applauded his refolution, and fwore he would fwallow poifon upon his return home; the Nizam did the fame; and both determined in appearance upon death, retired to their refpective houses.

Sadit.

Sadit, in the mean time, fent a trufty fpy to bring him 'intelligence when the Nizam should take his draught. The Nizam, being come home, appeared in the deepelt affliction : but having privately intimated his plot to a fervant, he ordered him to bring him the poifon. The fervant acted his part well. He brought him an innocent draught, with great reluctance. The Nizam, after fome hefitation, and having formally faid his prayers, drank it off in the prefence of Sadit's fpy, and foon after pretended to fall down dead. The fpy haftened back to his mafter, and told him that the Nizam had just expired. Sadit, ashamed of being. outdone in a point of honor by his fellow in iniquity, fwallowed a draught of real poifon, and became the just instrument of punishment to his own villainy. The Nizam was not ashamed to live, though none had greater reason. He even prided in that wicked trick, by which he had rid himfelf of his rival, and afterwards actually enjoyed the intended fruits of all hisvillainies.

The Perfian, in the mean time, placed guards upon the gates Gates of of Delhi, with orders to permit no perfon whatever to pafs in or out without his fpecial licence. These strict injunctions were given to prevent the inhabitants from evacuating the place, and, from carrying away their wealth. He, at the fame time, iffued his commands, that no perfon whatfoever fhould be molefted ; But he demanded twenty-five crores, about thirty millions of our money, as a contribution for fparing the city.

Whilft the magistrates were contriving ways and means to raife this enormous fum, by laying a tax in proportion to their wealth on individuals, famine began to rage in the city, as all communication with the country was cut off. Upon the 10th Nadir Shaw ordered the granaries to be opened, and fold rice at a certain

A Perfian foldier in this market, feeing a man felling pigeons, feized by force upon his bafket. The fellow, to whom the pigeons belonged, made a hideous outcry, and proclaimed aloud, That Nadir Shaw had ordered a general pillage.

A tomult.

The mob immediately fell upon the Perfian, who was protected by fome of his own countrymen. A great tumult arofe, and fome perfons, bent upon more mifchief, cried aloud, That Nadir Shaw was dead; and that now was the time to drive the Perfians out of the city. The citizens, who in general carried arms, drew their fwords, and began to cut to pieces the Perfians, whereever they could be found. The report of the death of Nadir Shaw flew, like lightning, through every fireet in Delhi; and all places were filled with tumult, confusion, and death. It was now dark, and the Perfians, who had been firaggling through the city, returned to the citadel, except two thousand who were killed by the mob.

Nadir Shaw informed of the tumult.

March 11.

About twelve o'clock at night, the king of Perfia was informed of these transactions. He immediately ordered what men he had with him under arms, and, putting himself at their head, marched out as far as the Musgid of Roshin ul Dowlat. He thought it prudent to halt there till day-light should appear. He, in the mean time, sent for the Nizam, Sirbillund, and Kimmir the Mogul vizier, and threatened to put them to instant death, charging them with somenting these tumults. They swore upon the Coran, that they were innocent, and he pardoned them. When day hegan to appear, a perfon from a neighbouring terrace fired upon Nadir Shaw, and killed an officer by his fide. The king was so enraged, that, though the tumult had, by this time, totally fublided, fubfided, he ordered the officers of the cavalry to lead their A. D. 1739. fquadrons through the ftreets, and fome mufqueteers to fcour the terraces, and to commence a general maffacre among the unfortunate inhabitants. This order was executed with fo much Orders a gerigor, that, before two o'clock in the afternoon, above 100,000 without diffinction of age, fex, or condition, lay dead in their blood, though not above one third part of the city was vifited by the fword. Such was the panic, terror and confusion of thefe poor wretches, that instead of bravely opposing death, the men threw down their arms, and, with their wives and children. fubmitted themselves like sheep to the flaughter. One Persian foldier often butchered a whole family, without meeting with any refistance. The Hindoos, according to their barbarous cuftom, fhut up their wives and daughters, and fet fire to their apartments, and then threw themfelves into the flames. Thoufands plunged headlong into wells, and were drowned; death was feen in every horrid shape; and, at last, seemed rather to be fought after than avoided.

The king of Perfia fat, during this dreadful fcene, in the Mufgid of Roshin ul Dowlat. None but the flaves durst come near him, for his countenance was dark and terrible. At length, the unfortunate emperor, attended by a number of his chief omrahs, ventured to approach him with downcaft eyes. The omrahs, who preceded Mahommed, bowed down their foreheads to the ground. Nadir Shaw sternly asked them what they wanted? They cried out, with one voice, "Spare the city." · Mahommed faid not a word, but the tears flowed fast from his eyes. The tyrant, for once touched with pity, sheathed his fword, and faid, "For the fake of the prince Mahommed, I " forgive." do and a series are a series and a series of the series of t We there are the tot had been sen millions in the No.

No fooner had he pronounced thefe words than, according to our author, the maffacre was ftopt; and fo inflantaneous was the effect of his orders, that in a few minutes every thing was calm in the city. He then retired into the citadel, and inquired into the original caufe of this tumult. The noble Seid Neaz, the fuperintendant of the royal market, for having been active in this affair, was put to death. Kifrac, a brave omrah, for having defended his houfe against the Persians who came to maffacre his family, but who had not been concerned in the tumult, was beheaded.

Maffacre at Mogulpara. The tyrant's thirst for blood was not yet fatisfied. He fent detachments daily to plunder the villages near Delhi, and to put all the inhabitants to the fword. Six thousand of the inhabitants of Mogulpurra were cut off for a very trivial offence. He fent a party into the royal market, where the tumult first arose, and ordered seven hundred persons to be seized indiscriminately, and their noses and ears to be cut off.

The city pillaged. When now all diffurbances were quelled by the blood of the unfortunate Delhians, the king of Perfia had leifure to pillage the city at pleafure. He feized upon the public treafure and the regalia of the Mogul emperor. In the treafury feveral vaults were diffeovered, in which much wealth hay concealed, as well as many valuable effects. In the public treafury was found in fpecie, near four millions fterling : in the private vaults were two millions five hundred thoufand. The jewel-office was effimated at thirty millions fterling, including the famous throne of the Mogul emperors, which was valued at more than twelve millions. The royal wardrobe and armory were reckoned worth feven millions fterling. Eight millions were raifed in fpecie, by way of contribution, upon the city, and about ten millions in jewels; all which which, together with horfes, camels and elephants, amount to A. D. 1739. about fixty-two millions five hundred thousand pounds of our money.

Great cruelties were exercifed in levying the contributions upon Nadir Shaw's the city. Under an arbitrary government, like that of India, individuals find it neceffary to conceal their wealth. Some omrahs, therefore, who had very little, were taxed very high, whilft others who were rich came off with a moderate fum. Many of the former, under the fuppolition, that they actually poffeffed more wealth, were, after they had given all they were worth in the world, tortured to death; whilft others, to avoid pain, fhame and poverty, put, with their own hands, an end to their miserable existence.

Upon the 21ft of Mohirrim, the king of Perfia celebrated the nuptials of his fon, the prince Nafir Ali, with the daughter of Ezidan, the fon of Kam, and grandfon of the famous Aurungzebe. The Shaw himfelf difcovered a violent defire to espoufe the beautiful daughter of Muziffer *; but he was prevented by one of his wives, who had the art to command the furious fpirit of Nadir Shaw, which the reft of the world could not controul.

During all these transactions the gates of the city were kept Humanity of fhut. Famine began to rage every day more and more; but the Shaw was deaf to the miferies of mankind. The public fpirit of Tucki, a famous actor, deferves to be recorded upon this occasion. He exhibited a play before Nadir Shaw, with which that monarch was fo well pleafed, that he commanded Tucki to afk, and what he withed thould be done for him. Tucki fell upon his face, and faid, "O king, command the gates to be opened, that the Mahommed reinstated in the throne.

The king of Perfia, having now raifed all the money he could in Delhi, reinstated Mahommed in the empire, upon the third of Siffer, with great folemnity and pomp. He placed the crown upon his head with his own hand, and prefented him with. a rich honorary drefs; distributing, at the fame time, forty more among the Mogul omrahs. He then gave to the emperorfome inftructions concerning the regulation of his army; to which he added fome general maxims of government. He put him upon his guard against the Nizam, who, he plainly perceived, aspired above the rank of a subject. "Had not I," faid the king of Persia, " foolishly passed my word for his fafety, the " old * traitor fhould not live to difturb Mahommed."

Nadir Shaw marches towards Perfia.

Every thing being ready upon the 7th, for Nadir Shaw's return to Perfia, strict orders were isfued to his army to carry no flaves away, nor any Indian women, contrary to their inclinations, upon pain of immediate death. Before his departure, he obliged. Mahommed formally to cede to the crown of Persia, the provinces of Cabul, Peshawir, Kandahar, Ghizni, Moultan and Sind, or, in general, all those countries which lie to the northwest of the Indus. 'The whole of the treasure which Nadir Shaw carried from Hindostan, amounted, by the best computation, to eighty millions of our money.

"hind the mountains of Perfia," fays our author, continuing the metaphor of the comet, "it may not be improper to throw fome light on the character of this fcourge of Hindostan." Nadir Shaw, together with great firength of body, was endued with uncommon force of mind. Innured to fatigue from his youth, firuggling with dangers and difficulties, he acquired vigor from oppolition, and a fortitude of foul, unknown in a life of eafe. His ambition was unbounded and undifguifed : he never fawned for power, but demanded it as the property of his fuperior parts. Had he been born to a throne, he deferved it; had he continued a fubject, his glories would have been lefs dazzling, but more permanent and pure.

In a country where patriotifm and honor are principles little known, fear is the only means to inforce obedience. This rendered Nadir Shaw fo cruel and inexorable, that often, in his rage and the hurry of action, he inflicted general punifhments for the crimes of a few. Courage, which he poffeffed in common with the lion, was his only virtue; and he owed his greatnefs to the great defects of his mind. Had his eye melted at human miferies, had his foul fhuddered at murder, had his breaft glowed once with benevolence, or, had his heart revolted at any injuffice, he might have lived to an old age, but he would have died without the name of Nadir.*

The king of Perfia having evacuated India, the Nizam began to difcover his own ambitious defigns. His rivals were now all removed; fome by his villainy, and others by favorable accidents. Without opposition, the management of affairs fell into his hands. Though he ingroffed, in fact, the whole power, he delegated the great offices of the flate to others. The name of vizier was retained by Kimmer, and that of captain-general, was conferred upon the Nizam's fon, the noble Ghazi ul Dien. He appointed Emir fubadâr of Allahabad, which fo difgufted Mahomed Bunguifh, to whom that government was promifed by the former administration, that he left the court without leave, and repaired to his effate at Ferochabad.

Seifdar Jung made Suba of Oud. The government of Oud being vacant by the death of Sadit that fubafhip was conferred upon an omrah, called Seifdar Jung, together with the title of Burhan ul muluck. The Nizam, having nothing to fear from the fubas of the other provinces, continued them in their employs. Notwithftanding the fevere blow which the empire had juft received, no meafures were taken to revive the declining power of the crown. This was, by no means, the intereft of the Nizam, who now affumed every thing of the king, but the name.

A. D. 1740.

Mahommed having fuffered himfelf to be divefted of his power in his capital, it could not be expected that his authority fhould be much regarded in the provinces. The nabobs and Indian princes, throughout the empire, paid now little attantion to the firmâns of the court of Delhi. Each of them entertained ideas of independence, and actually poffeffed a regal authority in their governments.—The Mahrattors, who had, for fome time back, made large firides to eftablish the ancient Hindoo government in India, in the year 1153, made an incursion into the Carnatic with an army of eighty thousand horse, under the command of Ragojee. Having forced the passes of the mountains, they fell unexpectedly upon Doost Ali, nabob of that province, in subordination to the Nizam, who was governor-general of the Decan. The forces of Ali Doost were defeated feated, and he himfelf, together with his fon, Haffin Ali, fell in the action, after having exhibited extraordinary feats of bravery and firmnefs.

Sipadar Ali, the fon, and Chunder Saib, the fon-in-law of Dooft Ali, had ftill confiderable armies under their command. But both having views upon the government of the province, inftead of oppofing the Mahrattors, committed hoftilities upon one another. The confequence was, that they were obliged to fhut themfelves up in places of ftrength, the first in Velour, and the latter in Trichinopoly. The enemy were, by this means, permitted to ravage the province at their leifure, and to raife heavy contributions upon the inhabitants.

Sipadar Ali, finding he could effect nothing in the field againft the Mahrattors, fet a negotiation on foot with them, by the means of his father's minister, who had been taken prifoner in the action by those barbarians. It was at last determined in private, that, upon condition the Mahrattors should immediately evacuate the Carnatic, they should receive one hundred lacks of roupees, at stated periods; and that, as a fecurity for the payment of this sum, they should be put in possession of the territory of Trichinopoly. One of the terms was, that Sipadar Ali should be acknowledged nabob of the Carnatic.

Ali, having thus firengthened himfelf with the alliance of the Mahrattors, his brother-in-law thought it prudent to pay him homage at Arcot; not knowing that Trichinopoly, and thole diftricts which he poffeffed, had been made over to the Mahrattors. The barbarians, in the mean time, returned to their own dominions; but, about fix months thereafter, they made a fecond irruption into the Carnatic, to take poffeffion of the territories.

Affairs at Delhi,

Thefe transactions in the Decan did not difturb the peace at Delhi. The king and his ministers continued in a profound lethargy ever fince the invasion of Nadir Shaw, and seemed indifferent about the affairs of the distant provinces. But a prefling danger at home roused them for a moment. A fellow, from the low rank of a grass-cutter, raifed himself to the command of a gang of robbers. As in the debiliated state of government, he committed, for fome time, his depredations with impunity, his banditti, by degrees, swelled to an army of twelve thousand men. He immediately assumed the imperial ensuing, under the title of Daranti Shaw. This mushroom of a king was, however, foon deftroyed. Azim Alla, a gallant omrah, was fent against him with an army from Delhi. He came up with the rebels, cut the most of them to pieces, and flew Daranti in the action. This happened in the 1153 of the Higera.

In the month of Regib, 1154, Sipadar Ali, nabob of the Carnatic, was affaffinated by his brother-in-law, Mortaz Ali, who immediately acceded to Mufnud. But a general mutiny arifing in the army, the murderer was obliged to fly from his capital, in a female drefs; and Mahummud, the fon of Sipadar, was proclaimed fuba of the Carnatic.

Nizam marches into the Decan.

The Nizam, who claimed the fovereignty of the Decan, feeing thefe repeated revolutions in the Carnatic, without his concurrence, began to prepare to leave the court of Delhi. He fettled his affairs with the ministry, and returned to Hydrabad. He immediately diately collected an army, and, in the month of Ramzan, 1155, A.D. 1741. marched towards the Carnatic with near three hundred thoufand men. In the Siffer of 1156, the Nizam arrived at Arcot without oppofition; and found the country in fuch anarchy and confusion, that no lefs than twenty petty chiefs had affumed the titles of Nabob. The Nizam made a regulation, that whoever fhould take the name of Nabob, for the future, without permiffion, fhould be publickly fcourged; and raifed immediately Abdulla, one of his own generals, to the fubafhip of Arcot; ordering the fon of Sipadar Ali into confinement. He, at the fame time, poffed himfelf of the city of Trichonopoly by means of a fum of money which he gave to Malhar Raw, who commanded there on the part of the Mahrattors.

The Nizam, without drawing the fword, thus fettled the affairs of the Carnatic. He returned in triumph to Golcondah, whither Abdulla, the new governor of Arcot, accompanied him. Abdulla, returning towards his government, was, the first night after his taking leave of the Nizam, found dead in his bed. Abdulla was fucceeded in the Nabobship of Arcot, by Anwar ul Dien Chan; who, according, to the accounts of fome fuspicious Afiatics, was faid to have made away with his predecessor in office. There was, however, no reasonable foundation for this suspicion. He was descended of one of the noblest of the Mogul families and remarkable for his justice and moderation. At once a foldier and a scholar, he was fitted both for the field and cabinet. His talents procured to him the government of the Carnatic; he made different pilgrimages to Mecca, which made him as much revered for his piety, as he was efteemed for his abilities. He died in arms, at the age of eighty, in defending his dominions. against the enemies of Great Britain.

A. D. 174'. Becomes independent. The Nizam in this abfolute manner difpofed of the provinces of the Decan, without the concurrence of the court, and actually became king of that country, though he never affumed that title. In the mean time, the Nizam's fon, Ghazi ul Dien, overawed the emperor at Delhi, and left that indolent prince no more than the mere fhadow of royalty.

Revolt in Bengal.

Whilft the Decan, that great limb of the Mogul empire, was cut off by the Nizam, Aliverdi Chan ufurped the government of Bengal, Behar, and Oriffa. This fellow was once a common foldier, who, togethet with his brother Hamed, came from Tartary in queft of fervice to Delhi. In that city they continued for some time in the fervice of the famous Dowran, and afterwards became menial fervants to Suja Chan, nabob of Cattack. Suja Chan, after the death of Jaffier, fucceeded to the government of the three provinces of Bengal, Behar, and Oriffa. The two Tartars, being poffeffed of good natural parts and fome education, role gradually into office, and were greatly favored by the nabob. Hamed had, in a manner, become his prime minister, and, by his political intrigues in the Haram, obtained the place of Naib, or deputy of the province of Behar, for his brother Aliverdi, who was then a captain of horfe. Aliverdi was not long eftablished in his high employ, when he began to tamper with the venal ministry of Delhi, for a separate commiffion for the province, which he then held of Suja Chan. Money, which has great influence in every country, is all powerful in Hindostan. Aliverdi strengthened his folicitations with a round fum, and, by the means of the captain-general Dowran, became independent fuba of Behar.

Suja Chan dying foon after, was fucceeded in the fubafhip of Bengal by his fon Sirfaraz. We do not mean to infinuate, that he

he had any right of inheritance to his father's government, or A. D. 1741. that the fubadary had been established in his family by any grant of the crown, which was contrary to the established laws of the empire : but the imperial authority was now fo weak, that the nabobs took upon themfelves to bequeath the governments to their fons, who were afterwards, through a fatal neceffity, generally confirmed from Delhi.

Sirfaraz, being a man of a haughty and imperious disposition, foon loft the affection of all his officers. He difgraced Hamed, and tarnished the honor of the powerful family of those opulent merchants, the Jagga Seat, by a foolifh act of power. Hamed, however, took advantage of the difaffection to Sirfaraz's government. He formed a confpiracy against the nabob, and invited his brother Aliverdi to invade Bengal. Aliverdi accordingly marched from Patna, in the month of Ramzan 1154, and entering Bengal, defeated and killed Sirfaraz, at Geriah, near Muxadabad, and, without further opposition, became fuba of the three provinces.

The weak emperor, inftead of chaftifing the ufurper with an Impolitic be. army from Delhi, fell upon an expedient, at once difgraceful and impolitic. The Mahrattors threatened Mahommed for the Chout, which, before the Perfian invafion, he had promifed to pay them; and he gave them a commission to raise it themselves upon the revolted provinces. The Suu * Raja, the chief of the Mahrattors, fent accordingly an army of 50000 horfe, from his capital of Sattara, to invade Bengal. This force, under the conduct of Boscar Pundit, ravaged, with fire and sword, all those districts which lie to the west of the Ganges. TOTAL TODE DE

Aliverdi,

A. D. 1742. Aliverdi Chan ufurps the government of Bengal, &c.

Aliverdi, who was a brave foldier, defended himfelf with great refolution. But he owed more to his villainy than to his arms. Having found means to affaffinate the leader of the Mahrattors. he forced them to retreat .- When the news of the murder reached the ears of the Suu Raja, he ordered two other armies. into Bngal; one by the way of Behar, and another by that of Cattack. The first was commanded by Balla Raw, and the latter by Ragojee .---- Aliverdi, not being able to cope with this great force in the field, had recourse to art. He fowed diffention between the two chiefs; fet a private treaty on foot with Balla. Raw; who, having received two years Chout, evacuated the provinces, leaving his colleague to make the best terms he could for himfelf. The fcale was now turned against the Mahrattors. Ragojee retreated to Cattack, and, with conftant incursions and flying parties, greatly harraffed the provinces. The good fortune of Aliverdi at length prevailed, and he faw himfelf independent fovereign of Bengal, Behar, and Oriffa : though, to quiet the minds of the people, he pretended to posses grants. from the court, which he himfelf had actually forged.

We have been purposely fuccinct on the manner in which the Decan and Bengal were diffmembered from the empire, as the facts are already pretty well known in Europe. We return, now, to the affairs of the interior provinces. This subject has hitherto been touched by no writer, and very few Europeans in Afia have made any confiderable enquiries concerning it.

Affairs at court.

During thefe transactions, nothing happened at Delhi, but the intrigues and factions of a weak and corrupt administration. In the year 1157, Ali Mahummud, a Patan of the Rohilla tribe, Zemindar of Bangur and Awla, began to appear in arms. Ali was a foldier of fortune, and a native of the mountains of Ca- A. D. 1744buliftan, who, fome years before his rebellion, came to Delhi, with about three hundred followers of his own tribe, and was entertained in the imperial fervice. Being efteemed a gallant officer, the command of a fmall diftrict, upon the road between Delhi and Lahore, was conferred upon him; where he entertained all vagrants of his own clan, who came down in queft of military fervice, from their native mountains. In this manner Ali expended all the rents of his diftrict, and he was hard preffed for the payment of the crown's proportion of his income, by the fojedar of Muradabad, to whom he was accountable.

Was:

Hernind, the fojedar, defpairing to get any part of the revenue from Ali, by fair means, prepared to use force. He raifed 15000 of his own vasials, with a defign to expel or chastife the refractory Zemindar. Ali, by the affistance of his northern friends, who lived upon him, defeated Hernind, with great slaughter, and thus laid the foundation of the Rohilla government, now fo formidable in Hindostan.

Kimmir, the vizier, upon receiving intelligence at Delhi of this blow to the regal authority, difpatched his own fon, the noble Munnu, a youth of great bravery, with an army of 30000, againft the rebels. Munnu, croffing the Jumna, advanced to a place called Gurmuchtifher, on the banks of the Ganges, and found that Ali had acquired fo much ftrength fince his late victory, that he feared the iffue of an engagement. A negotiation, therefore, was fet on foot, and, after the armies had lain three months in fight of one another, a treaty was concluded. The conditions were, that Ali fhould keep poffeffion of the countries, formerly comprehended in the government of  $X \times 2$  Hernind,

A. D. 1745. Hernind, upon paying the ancient revenues to the crown, and that, in the mean time, one year's payment should be advanced in four months.

> After this treaty was ratified, Munnu returned to Delhi: but the appointed time elapsed, without any payments on the part of Ali. He continued to ftrengthen himself, annexed more diftricts to his government, and ravaged the neighbouring countries to subfift his army. He, in short, became formidable enough to rouse the indolent emperor from his lethargy. That monarch took the field, with fifty or fixty thousand horse, and in the year 1158, croffed the Jumna.

Rebellion quelled. Ali, upon the king's approach, retreated acrofs the Ganges, and fhut himfelf in Bangur, a place of fome ftrength, where the imperial army invefted him. The rebel, for the first two nights, made fuccefsful fallies, and killed many in the imperial camp. The king, however, having drawn lines of circumvallation round the fort, after a fhort but bloody fiege, obliged the garrifon to capitulate. Ali made terms for his own life, and he was brought prifoner to Delhi, where he remained in confinement for fix months.

The Patan chiefs, who were always, in private, enemies to the government of the Moguls, caffing their eyes upon Ali, as a very proper perfon to raife their own intereft, folicited the emperor for his releafe. The weak monarch granted their requeft; but the Patans, not yet fatisfied, obtained for Ali the fojedarfhip of Sirhind.---This was fuch wretched policy in the court of Delhi, that nothing but downright infatuation, folly, and the laft degree of corruption in the ministry, could ever have permitted it to take place. The confequence was, that Ali collected lected his difperfed tribe, kept possession of Sirhind, of several A. D. 1746. districts between the rivers and beyond the Ganges, without remitting one roupee to court.

We have already feen, that all the provinces to the north-weft Achmet Abof the Indus were ceded to Nadir Shaw. When that conqueror was affaffinated in Perfia, Achmet Abdalla, a native of Herat, who had raifed himfelf in his fervice, from the office of Chobdar, or mace-bearer, to that of Chazanchi, or treasurer, found means, with the affistance of his own tribe, in the confusion which fucceeded the Shaw's death, to carry off three hundred camels loaded with wealth, to the mountains of Afganistan. This treasure enabled Abdalla to raife an army, and to poffefs himfelf by degrees of the diffricts of the mountains, Herat, part of Chorraffan, and all the provinces ceded by the crown of Hindoftan to the king of Perfia. Thus Abdalla laid the foundation of an empire, in those countries, which formerly composed the great monarchy of Ghizni.

Abdalla, perceiving the declining flate of the Mogul government Invades the in Hindostan, croffed the Nilab, the ancient Hydaspes, one of the branches of the Indus, in the beginning of the year 1160, and raifing contributions upon his march, advanced towards Delhi, with 50000 horfe. The poor Delhians were ftruck with universal panic. The king himfelf was fick ; and there were distractions in the councils of the ministers. The preffure of the danger cemented all their differences. Ahmed Shaw, the prince royal, Kimmir, the vizier, Seid Sullabit, and Seifdar Jung, took the field, with 80000 horfe, and marched to oppofe the invader.

The imperial army left Delhi upon the 18th of Siffer, and ad- is oppofed. vanced to a place called Minoura, twenty miles beyond Sirbind. Abdalla's

A. D. 1747. Abdalla's army were here in fight; and both, afraid of the iffue of a battle, ftrongly entrenched themfelves. In this fituation they remained for thirty days; fometimes fkirmifhing, and at other times negotiating; but the Mogul prince having no money to give, Abdalla would not retreat.

The vizier killed.

Abdalla, in the mean time, found means to advance fome pieces of artillery, which bore upon the flank of the imperial army. In the evening the vizier, being at prayers, received a fhot in the knee, and died that night. As he was very much efteemed by the army, which in reality he commanded, though the prince bore the name, it was proposed to Ahmed Shaw, by Munnu, the vizier's fon, to conceal his death, left the troops, who depended upon his courage and capacity, fhould be affected by that accident. The prince, feeing the propriety of this measure, called together a few of his principal omrahs, and held a council of war. It was refolved, that the body of the vizier fhould be mounted upon his own elephant, in the howadar, fupported with pillows; and that in the morning, by day-break, they should iffue out of the camp and engage the enemy.

Policy of his fon.

Orders were accordingly given that night to the omrahs, to hold their troops in readinefs, and their refpective flations appointed to each. In the morning, before day, the imperial army was in motion; but Abdalla, having previous notice of their intentions, had prepared to receive them in his camp. The young prince Ahmed led the attack with uncommon bravery, and was gallantly feconded by Munnu, who performed furprizing feats of perfonal valor.—The Perfian defended himfelf with equal refolution, for the fpace of three hours. At length, his entrenchments were trodden down by the elephants, and the imperial army poured into his camp.

An

An unfortunate circumstance, at this instant, totally changed the face of affairs. Iffur Singh, the fon of Joyfingh, the Indian prince of Amere, who commanded twenty thousand horse, rode up to the vizier's elephant for orders, and discovered that he was dead. Iffur Singh was naturally a coward, and only wanted an excuse to hide his head from danger. He turned immediately his face from the field, and was followed by all his troops. The flight of fo great a part of the army drew many after them, particularly Seifdar Jung, governor of Oud, and father of the present Souja ul Dowlat. Abdalla not only recovered his troops. from their confusion, but pressed hard upon the imperialists in his turn. Munnu, upon this urgent occasion, displayed all the bravery of a young hero, together with all the conduct of an old general. He formed in a column, and encouraging histroops, by words and example, bent his whole force against Abdalla's center. He, at the fame time, difpatched a meffenger to Iffur Singh and Seifdar Jung, affuring them that Abdalla was already defeated, and if they would return and affift him in the purfuit, he would permit none of them ever to repass the Indus. The Aratagem had the defired effect. They returned in full gallop to the field, and renewed the charge with great vigor.

Abdalla, having almost assured himself of the victory, was, by Abdalla dethis unexpected check, thrown into great confusion. Munnu took immediate advantage of the enemy's conflernation, drove them off the field, and purfued them ten miles beyond their camp. The lofs was nearly equal on both fides; but a compleat victory remained to the Moguls; for which they were entirely indebted to the furprising efforts of Munnu.

A fingle defeat was not enough to discourage Abdalla, who His undauntwas a brave officer. He collected his difcomfited army, dif-

The Moguls were not a little furprized, next morning, to fee Abdalla, whom they prepared to purfue, with his army drawn up in order of battle before their camp.--- This uncommon confidence in a defeated enemy, threw a damp upon the courage of the conquerors. They contented themfelves with forming the line, and with flanding in expectation of the charge.---Abdalla, as the prince had fome advantage of ground, at the fame time declined coming to action, and, in the evening, encamped at a fmall diftance.

A fecond battie. The fecond day was spent in skirmishes, and a distant cannonade: but, upon the third, to use a Persian expression, the interval of battle was closed, and the shock was very violent. Though irregular armies of horse make little impression upon a folid body of well-disciplined infantry; yet when they engage one another, upon equal terms, each trusts to the strength of his own arm, and the battle is in general extremely bloody. This irregular kind of attack, it must be allowed, requires a greater degree of personal courage, where man to man is opposed, than to stand wedged in a close battalion, where the danger may indeed be as great, but not so apparent.

Abdalla again defeated.

The young prince Ahmed diffinguished himself in a particular manner in this action; and Munnu, tenacious of the glory he had already acquired, was not to be refisted. Abdalla, after an obflinate refistance, was again driven off the field, and purfued across the Suttuluz. Here Abdalla, in spite of his missortunes, like an able and gallant commander, put the best face upon his affairs. He had lost all his artillery and baggage, and being being now less incumbered than the imperial army, he made a A. D. 1747. forced march, and, taking a circuit to the right, repassed the river, and next day, to the aftonishment of the prince and Munnu, was heard of thirty-fix miles in the sear, in full march towards Delhi.

Intelligence of Abdalla's march being received in the capital, every thing fell into the utmost confusion, and a general panic prevailed. Ghazi ul Dien, the Nizam's fon, being at court, collected what forces he could, and marched out of the city to oppose Abdalla. The enemy hearing of this army in their front, would proceed no further. His troops, with one voice, told Abdalla, That, before they advanced towards Delhi, it was neceffary to defeat the imperial army which was behind them. He was therefore conftrained to march back towards the prince and Munnu, who expected a third battle: but Abdalla thought it prudent to decline it; and, by night, repaffed the Moguls, and continued his rout to Lahore.

A change of affairs at the court of Delhi happening at this Affairs at time, prevented the prince and Munnu from purfuing Ab-They encamped on the banks of the Suttuluz, where dalla. Ahmed Shaw proposed to confer the subaship of Lahore upon any of his omrahs who would undertake to recover it from Abdalla. After this offer had been declined by all of them, it was accepted upon these terms by Munnu; who, with a division of the army, marched towards Lahore, while Ahmed returned with the reft to Delhi. The emperor had an inviolable friendship for his vizier, Kimmir ul Dien. In the tottering state of the regal authority, all his confidence was reposed in that minister. When therefore the news of Kimmir's death came to him at Delhi, he immediately confidered his own affairs 25

In the morning he mounted the throne as ufual, to give public audience; and, whilft every flattering courtier was running out in praife of the deceafed, the emperor feemed much affected. Death of the emperor.

The death of Mahommed happened upon the 8th of the fecond Ribbi, in the 1160 year of the Higera, after a difaftrous reign of thirty years. The court endeavored to conceal his death till his fon prince Ahmed fhould arrive. He accordingly, upon the 7th day after his father's decease, entered Delhi ; being fent for by express from Ghazi ul Dien, who was supposed by the ignorant vulgar, always ready to afcribe fudden deaths to violence, to have made away with the emperor.

MAHOMMED was remarkably comely; of a flately flature and affable deportment. He was no fmall proficient in the learning of his country; and he wrote the Arabic and Perfian languages with the greateft elegance and propriety. He was perfonally brave; but the eafinefs and equality of his temper made his actions appear undecifive and irrefolute. Good-natured to a fault, he forgave, in others, crimes which his own foul would abhor to commit; and thus he permitted his authority to become a victim to an ill-judged elemency. Naturally indolent and diffident of his own abilities, his mind perpetually fluctuated from one object to another. His paffions therefore took no determined courfe of their own; but were eafily diverted into any channel, by whatever perfon was near him.---" The foul of Ma-" hommed" faid a Mogul who knew him well, " was like the " waters "waters of a lake, eafily agitated by any florm, but which A. If his eafinefs or irrefolution in politicks led him into many errors, he bore with indifference, if not with fortitude, the misfortunes which were their natural confequence.

Born in the funfhine of a court, brought up in the bofom of luxury, confined within the walls of a zennana, and, in a manner, educated among eunuchs, as effeminate as those whom they guard, we are not to wonder that the princes of the East should degenerate in a few generations. If to these obstructions to the exertion of the manly faculties of the foul, we add the natural lenity of Mahommed, an amiable but unfortunate virtue in the race of Timur, it ought not to furprize us, that in a country like India, his reign should be crowded with uncommon misfortunes. Had his fate placed Mahommed in Europe, where established laws supply the want of parts in a monarch, he might have flumbered with reputation upon a throne; and left behind him the character of a good, though not of a great, prince.

Ahmed mounts the thane.

A. D. 1747. T TPON the 17th of the fecond Ribbi, in the year 1160 of the Higera, which answers to the 1747 of the Christian 233, AHMED SHAW, the fon of Mahommed, mounted the throne of Delhi. The first act of this reign, was the appointment of Seifdar Jung, the irrefolute fuba of Oud, to the vizarit. This fellow was originally a merchant of Perfia, known there by the name of Abul Munfur. He travelled to India to fell his commodities; and was retained there as an accomptant, by the famous Sadit, governor of Oud. He behaved fo much to his mafter's fatisfaction in that flation, that he advanced him to a command in the army, and conferred upon him his daughter in marriage. His alliance with Sadit fo much raifed his intereft at the court of Delhi, that, upon the death of his father-in-law; he was raifed to the fubafhip of Oud. Though he was a very bad foldier, fuch was the fmoothness of his tongue and plausibility of behavior, that he paffed upon the weak as a man of confiderable parts; which, together with some knowledge in the finances, paved his way to the high office of vizier. Ghazi ul Dien continued pay-mafter and captain-general, and no other material changes in the administration happened upon the acceffion of Ahmed.

Affairs of the provinces and death of the Nizam.

The war with Abdalla, which was now carried on in Punjab by Munnu with various fuccefs, ingroffed the attention of the court of Delhi; for the greatest part of the imperial army was employed in that fervice. Advices, in the mean time, arrived from the Decan, of the death of the famous Nizam ul. muluck, in the one hundred and fourth year of his age; and that that his fecond fon, Nafir Jung, acceded to the government. A. D. 1747. It may not, perhaps, be out of place here, to give a fhort fketch of the character of the Nizam, who for a long time made fo great a figure in India.

The Nizam, though no great warrior, was reckoned a confum- Hischarafters. mate politician, in a country where low craft and deceit, without any principles of honor and integrity, obtain the appellation of great parts. The dark defigns of his mind lay always concealed behind an uncommon plaufibility and eloquence of tongue. His paffions were fo much under his command, that he was never known to difcover any violent emotion even upon the most critical and dangerous occasions: but this apathy did not arife from fortitude, but from deep diffimulation and defign. It was with him an unalterable maxim to use firatagem rather than force; and to bring about with private treachery, what even could be accomplished with open force. He fo habituated himfelf to villainy, that the whole current of his foul ran in that channel: and it was even doubtful whether he could for a moment divert it to honefty to bring about his most favored defigns. If the Nizam shewed any tendency to virtue, it was by fubstituting a leffer wickedness for a greater. When fraud and. circumvention could accomplish his purpose, he never used the dagger or bowl. To fum up his character in a few words ; without shame, he was perfidious to all mankind; without remorfe, a traitor to his king and country; and, without terror, a hypocrite in the prefence of his god *.

* Nafir Jung, the Nizam's fon, having rebelled, was at the head of a great army. The deceitful old man counterfeited ficknefs fo well, and wrote fuch pathetic letters to Nafir, requesting to fee him before he died, that the young fellow was taken in the fnare, visited his father, and was imprisoned.

A. D. 1748. Succeeded by Nafir Jung. When the news of the Nizam's death came to Delhi, Ghazi ul Dien, who was his eldeft fon, applied to the king for his government. But Nafir Jung, being poffeffed of his father's treafure, raifed a great army, and marched from Aurungabad towards Delhi; not on pretence of war, but to pay his refpects to the emperor. Ahmed dreaded nothing more than this ceremonious vifit from a man at the head of fo great a force. He judged that Nafir Jung, under that fpecious pretext, covered a defign to extort from him a confirmation of the fubadary of the Decan. He therefore durft not favor the pretenfions of Ghazi to the provinces of the Decan, and confequently was reduced to the neceffity of confirming Nafir Jung in his ufurpation. Thus the ftorm was diverted, and the new Nizam returned to Aurungabad.

Affairs of the provinces.

In the year 1161, Caim Chan Bunguith, who poffeffed Ferochabad, in Jagier, having differed with Ali, a neighbouring Zemindar, they both drew out their vaffals and dependents, and fought about twenty miles above Ferochabad, and Caim Chan was defeated and flain. Seifdar Jung, the vizier, being informed of thefe tranfactions, fent orders to the Indian prince Nevil Roy, his deputy in the province of Oud, to confifcate the eftate of Caim Chan. The deputy rigoroufly executed the vizier's orders. He feized upon Caim Chan's five fons, together with five of his adopted flaves, confined, and afterwards affaffinated them at Allahabad. Ahmed Chan, another fon of Caim Chan, remained fill alive; and, in order to revenge the death of his brothers, raifed the Patan tribe, of which he was now acknowledged chief, and marched againft Nevil Roy, who had collected all his forces to oppofe him.

In the beginning of the year 1162, the two armies met at a place near Lucknow, called Callinuddi. The Patans were fcarcely four thousand ftrong; but the army of the deputy of Oud confifted of at leaft twenty thousand. The Patan chief, infpired with revenge, and vigoroufly fupported by his friends, attacked in perfon Nevil Roy in the very center of his army, and flew his enemy with his own hand. The army of Nevil Roy, feeing him fall, immediately quitted the field. Their artillery and baggage, and foon after almost the whole province of Oud, fell into the victor's hands.

When the news of this difafter arrived at Delhi, Seifdar Jung, Expedition of the vizier, talked in a very high firain, and requested of the emperor, that he might be permitted to lead an army against Ahmed Chan. The fultan confented ; but the feafon being far fpent before the army was levied, the expedition was deferred till the folfitial rains flould be over. In the month of Mohirrim, 1163, the vizier, with an army of eighty thousand men, marched from Delhi; and, without distinction of age, fex, or condition, put all the Patans he could find to the fword. Ahmed Chan was not intimidated by this great force. With fearce twelve thousand men he marched from Ferochabad, and met the imperialists at Shuru Sahawir, near that city.

The day happened to be very windy, and Ahmed improved He is overthat circumstance to his own advantage. He wheeled to windward, and the dust flew in such clouds in the face of the imperial army, that they did not difcover the motions of Ahmed; . but afcribed the darknefs which involved themfelves to the effects of a whirlwind, common at that feafon of the year. The enemy, however, like a thunderbolt, iffued from the bosom of this ftorm.

The Patans made fuch good use of their fwords, that they foon covered the field with dead, and the cowardly Seifdar Jung, without making one effort, was the first of his army who fled. The Jates and Rohillas, though thus shamefully deferted by their general, made head against Ahmed, and found means to carry off the greatest part of the artillery, which consisted of twelve hundred pieces of various bores. But neither of those tribes returned the guns to the king: they carried them to their own forts, to strengthen themselves against his authority.

A dreadful ftroke to the empire.

This overthrow was a dreadful ftroke to the tottering empire. The greatest part of the province of Oud was lost; the Jates, a numerous tribe of Hindoos, who poffeffed a large territory near Agra: and the Rohillas, a Patan nation, who inhabited the greatest part of the country between Delhi and Lucknow, feeing the whole imperial force baffled by a petty chief, began to throw off their allegiance. Seifdar Jung, in the mean time, arrived with a fmall part of his army at Delhi; and Ghazi advised the king to put him to death for the difgrace which he had drawn upon his arms. This punishment would not have been too fevere for the vizier's bad behaviour: but that minister had ftrengthened his intereft by a coalition with Juneid Chan, the chief eunuch.

Intereft of the Queen-mother faves the wizier.

The queen-mother, Begum Kudfia, being a woman of gallantry, had, for want of a better lover, fixed her affection upon the chief eunuch. She had the address to direct the weak monarch in every thing, and to keep him in leading-ftrings upon the throne. Juneid Chan, though in no public employ, by means of Kudfia's favor, held the helm of government; and,

In the course of the fame year, a treaty was concluded with Tribute paid the Mahrattors, who were spreading their devastations over the rattors. fouthern provinces. The Chout was flipulated to be regularly paid by the empire to those troublesome barbarians. The emperor ordered an army to be levied, to recover the province of Oud; and it was foon compleated by the accession of forty thoufand Mahrattors, who inlifted themfelves in the imperial fervice. But inftead of putting himfelf at the head of his forces, the weak emperor, by the advice of his mother and her gallant, gave the command of it to his vizier, that he might have an opportunity to retrieve his loft honour.

Sourage Mull, prince of the Jates, by the acquisition of Inactivity of the Mahrattors to the imperial army, judged it prudent once more to join the vizier with all his forces; fo that the minister's army now confifted of no lefs than one hundred thousand men. Seifdar Jung marched from Delhi, in the year 1164, against Ahmed Chan: but the Raja of the Jates, instead of aiding him, found means to fruftrate all his defigns. Having fpent a whole campaign without coming to action, he patched up a very dishonourable peace, and returned to Delhi with the Mahrattor mercenaries at his heels, mutinous for want of their pay.

The demand of the Mahrattors amounted to fifty lacks of The Nizam's roupees, which the government was in no condition to pay: and the fum gradually increased with the delay. Ghazi ul Dien, who had been for fome time foliciting for a royal commission for the fubaship of the Decan, promised to pay off the Mahrattor debt, upon condition he should receive from the emperor that appointment. That Omrah having fatisfied the Mahrattors in their demands upon Ahmed, engaged them immediately in his own fervice; and having added to them a great army of other troops, obtained his own office of captaingeneral for his fon Ghazi, a youth of fifteen years of age, and marched towards the Decan.

Sillabut Jung poifons Ghazi. The elder Ghazi's brother, Nafir Jung, fuba of the Decan, and his fon Muziffer, who had fucceeded him in the government; were both dead. Sillabut Jung, the third fon of the old Nizam, now fat upon the Mufnud, which Ghazi claimed by the right of primogeniture. In the month of Zehidge, 1165, he, with an army of one hundred and fifty thoufand men, arrived in the environs of Aurungabad. The forces of his brother, Sillabut Jung, the reigning fuba, were fomewhat inferior in number, but they were firengthened by a body of French mercenaries, which, in all probability, would infure to him the victory. Sallabut Jung, however, was afraid of the iffue of a general battle; and, after fome flight fkirmifhes, he found means to prevail with his uncle'swife to take off his competitor with poifon. Thus did the perfidious Sillabut Jung fecure to himfelf the empire of the Decan, without a rival,

Affairs at court.

But to return to the transactions of the court of Delhi: Seifdar Jung, the vizier, finding that his own influence declined, and that Juneid Chan, the favorite eunuch, carried all before him, invited him to an entertainment, and contrary to the laws of hospitality, and altogether forgetful that he owed to Juneid his own life and fortune, affaffinated him by the hands of Ishmaiel, one of his adopted flaves. The emperor, being informed of this this prefumptuous villainy, flew into a violent rage, degraded A. D. 1752. Seifdar Jung from the vizarit, and banished him the court. This was the effect of a fit of paffion; for the unfortunate monarch was in no condition, in fact, to exert fo far his authority. The perfidious vizier, finding that he had nothing to hope from fubmiffion, broke out into open rebellion. He foon after, by the affistance of the Jates, advanced to Delhi, and befieged the emperor and young Ghazi, his captain-general, in that city.

The fon of Kimmir ul Dien, who, in the reign of Mahommed, A new vizier. held fo long the vizarit, was raifed, under the title of Chan Chanan, or first of the nobles, to the vacant employ of Seifdar Jung, and began to fhew fome abilities in his new office. Young Ghazi, who was a youth of extraordinary parts, defended the city with great refolution for three months. The rebels were at last fo dispirited, that Ghazi ventured to attack them in the field, and gained a complete victory. Seifdar Jung fled towards his former fubaship of Oud, and left his allies, the Jates, under their prince, Sourage Mull, to extricate themfelves from the perilous fituation to which he had brought them.

The rebellion of Seifdar Jung happened in the year 1166. The old vi-The Jates being deferted by him, were in no condition to keep lion. the field against Ghazi. They fled before the imperial army under Akebut Mahmood, to their own territories near Agra. That general invefted the ftrong fortrefs of Billemgur, which he took by capitulation; but fo little did he regard his plighted faith to the garrifon, that he put them all to the fword. The Jates, in the mean time, came before the imperial army; but diffident of their own ftrength in the field, they feparated their forces, and . shut themselves up in their forts. The imperial general also divided his army into detachments, and laid at once fiege to the

A.D. 1752. two firong forts of Dieg and Combere, lying in the territory between Agra and Delhi.

Young Ghazi attacks the lates.

Ghazi, in the mean time, to carry on more effectually the war against the Jates, obtained permission from the emperor, to call in forty thousand Mahrattors, under their two chiefs, Malhar Raw, and Raganut Raw. By this acquisition of strength, the imperialists were enabled to carry on the fieges with vigor. At Delhi, young Ghazi and the new vizier contended for the command of the army. This contest was afterwards fatal in its confequences; but for the prefent Ghazi prevailed. He marched with a reinforcement from Delhi; and, upon his arrival in the country of the Jates, took the command of the imperial army.

Affairs at court.

The fieges continued two months after the arrival of Ghazi, and the garrifons were reduced to the laft extremities. The imperialifts, in the mean time, had expended all their ammunition; and Ghazi was, upon that account, obliged to difpatch Akebut Mahmood to Delhi, with a good force, to bring him the neceffary flores. The vizier feeing that the ftrong holds of the Jates muft foon fall into the hands of Ghazi, fhould he be fupplied with ammunition, and being extremely jealous of any thing that might throw honor upon his rival, poifoned the mind of the weak king againft his captain-general, by means of forged letters and villainous infinuations, that the young omrah afpired to the throne. The enterprizing genius, and great abilities of Ghazi, gave fome color to fufpicions of that kind; and the unfortunate Ahmed, inflead of promoting his own caufe againft the Jates, took every meafure to prevent the fuccefs of Ghazi.

The

The king accordingly begun to levy forces in Delhi, and wrote a letter to Sourage Mull, the chief of the Jates, to make an obstinate defence, and that he himself would foon relieve him : that under pretence of joining the army under Ghazi, he would attack that general in the rear, and at the fame time difplay a fignal to the Indian prince, to fally from the fort of Combere .-Thus the king, as if infatuated by his evil genius, planned his own ruin. His letter fell into the hands of Ghazi, whofe friends at court had informed him of the intrigues of the vizier. Struck with the king's ingratitude, and urged on by felf-defence, he immediately refolved upon open hostility. He raised the sieges, and croffed the Jumna, to oppose Ahmed and his vizier, who were marching down between the rivers.

The king, hearing of Ghazi's approach, halted at Secundra, Who marches and endeavoured, by fair promifes, to bring back that omrah to his duty. Ghazi, in answer to the king's message, returned to him his own letter to Sourage Mull. He wrote him, at the fame time, that " he could place no confidence in a man, who " plotted against his life, for no crime; if to serve the state " was not one. What mercy," continued Ghazi, " can I ex-" pect from Ahmed, in the days of rebellion, when he treated " me as a traitor, in the times of loyalty and friendship? A prince, " that is weak enough to liften to the bafe infinuations of every " fycophant, is unworthy to rule over brave men; who, by the " laws of God and nature, are justified to use the power which. " providence has placed in their hands, to protect themfelves. " from injustice."

The king perceived, by the strain of this letter, that Ghazi was refolved to push him to the last extremity. He, however, durst not engage him in the field. He made the best of his way

Ghazi immediately invefted the place; and the king, after a faint refiftance, furrendered himfelf. Ghazi, after reproaching him for his intentions against his life, committed him and the vizier to the charge of Akebut Mahmood. The unfortunate fultan was deprived of fight, the next day, by the means of an hot iron. It is faid, by fome, that this was done by Akebut Mahmood, without orders, to thew his zeal for the fervice of his patron; but, from the general character of Ghazi, we have no reason to doubt his being concerned in the crime.

His character.

Thus ended the reign of the unfortunate Ahmed Shaw: a prince, who, in his first exploits, appeared with fome lustre. When he mounted the throne, as if action degraded royalty, he altogether gave himfelf up to indolence. To fave the trouble of thinking, he became the dupe of every specious flatterer, and at last fell the unlamented victim of his own folly. He possefield all the clemency of the house of Timur; but that virtue was now, in some measure, a vice, in a country so corrupt, and in an age so degenerate. Though Ahmed was not defective in personal courage, he may truly be faid to be a coward in mind: dangers appeared formidable to him, through a troubled imagination, which, upon trial, he had fortitude to furmount.—He fat upon the throne of Delhi seven lunar years and one month; and was deposed in the month of Jammad ul awil, in the 1167 of the Higera.

Decayed ftats of the empire. The power and extent of the empire were very much diminished in the reign of Ahmed. All the provinces, except those between the frontiers of the Jates, a few miles to the east of Delhi, and Lahore to the west, were, in fact, difinembered A. D. 1753. from the government of the house of Timur, though they paid a nominal allegiance. The rich kingdom of Guzerat was divided between the Mahrattors and a Patan tribe, called Babbé; the Decan was usurped by the Nizam ul muluck's family; Bengal, Behar, and Orifla, by Aliverdi Chan, and his fucceffors; Oud, by Seifdar Jung ; Doab, by Ahmed Chan Bunguish ; Allahabad, by Mahommed Kuli; and the countries round Agra, by Raja Sourage Mull, the chief of the Jates .- Budaoon, and all the provinces to the north of Delhi, were in the hands of Mahommed Ali, Sadulla Chan, and other chiefs of the Rohilla tribe of Patans. A number of petty Rajas started up into independent princes in Malava: Bucht Singh feized upon the extensive territory of Marwar, and Madoo. Singh reigned in the provinces round Joinagur and Amere.

The gallant Munnu still opposed the torrent of invasion from the north. He maintained the war with fuccefs, against Abdalla,. for the provinces on the banks of the Indus, and, for a fhort space of time, supported the declining empire. Every petty chief, in the mean time, by counterfeited grants from Delhi, laid claim to jagiers and to districts : the country was torn to pieces with civil wars, and groaned under every species of domeftic confusion. Villany was practifed in every form; all law and religion were trodden under foot; the bonds of private friendships and connexions, as well as of fociety and government, were broken; and every individual, as if amidft a foreft of wild beafts, could rely upon nothing but the firength of his own arm.

ALLUMGIRE II.

A. D. 1753-Allumgire mounts the throne. UPON the fame day that Ahmed Shaw was deprived of fight, Ghazi ul Dien releafed from connfiement Eaz ul Dien, the fon of Moaz ul Dien, and grandfon of Bahadar Shaw, the fon and fucceffor of the famous Aurungzebe. This prince was placed by Ghazi upon the throne, by the name of ALLUM-GIRE. To begin his reign with an act of beneficence, he ordered feventeen perfons of the imperial houfe of Timur to be releafed from prifon, to grace his coronation. It may not be improper here to fay fomething concerning the inauguration of the Mogul emperors.

Ceremony of coronation.

When a prince is, for the first time, feated upon the throne, with the royal umbrella over his head, the omrahs, according to their dignity, are ranged in two lines before, one upon his right, the other to his left hand. A herald then proclaims his titles; and the omrahs, each in his flation, advance with an offering in gold, which he himfelf receives from their hands. The fuperintendant of the kitchen brings then a golden falver, with bread, confections, and other eatables, over which the king, joined by the whole court, repeats a form of grace; and then he eats a little, and diffributes the remainder, with his own hand, among the nobility. This latter is an ancient Mogul ceremony, introduced by the family of Timur. The emperor mounts then his state-elephant, and, attended by all the court, moves flowly towards the great Mufgid, throwing, as he advances, gold, filver, precious stones, and pearls, among the populace. In the Musgid he repeats a prayer, and afterwards divine fervice is performed by the the Sidder ul fuddûr, or the metropolitan of Delhi. The Chutba, A. D. 1753. or the genealogy and titles of the king, is then read, and he returns to the palace with the fame magnificence and pomp. The Mogul emperors are never crowned : but upon fome feftivals they fit in ftate, under a large golden crown, which is fuspended by a chain to the roof of the prefence-chamber, and ferves the purpose of a canopy.

Allumgire found himfelf as much a prifoner upon the throne, Wretched as he was formerly in his confinement. He was not a man of parts fufficient to extricate himfelf from the toils of that power, to which he owed his advancement; but had he made no efforts to acquire fome authority, the empire might have been, perhaps, reftored to its original dignity and fplendor, by the very extraordinary abilities of Ghazi ul Dien .- That omrah now posseffed the office of the vizarit. Allumgire, without the capacity of guiding the operations of government himfelf, began to turn all his mean parts to thwart the schemes of the minister. Without confidering whether the measure was right or wrong, it was sufficient that it came from the vizier, for the emperor to oppose it by his minions.

This averfion in the king to Ghazi, did not long escape the Inactivity at penetrating eyes of that young omrah. He knew that he was furrounded by many enemies, and therefore was unwilling to refign an employ, from which he derived protection to his own perfon. In the mean time all bufinefs was fufpended, and the two factions, like armies afraid of the iffue of a battle, watched the motions of one another .- Nothing remarkable happened at Delhi, during the first year of Allumgire, but the affasfination of the former vizier, about fix months after his imprisonment, by the orders of Ghazi.

But,

A. D. 1754. Death of Munnu. But, in the course of this year, the empire received a fevere blow on its frontiers, by the death of the gallant Munnu, by a fall from his horse. He had, in many engagements, defeated Abdalla, and recovered from him the whole province of Lahore. No fooner was this brave omrah dead, than Abdalla re-conquered all he had lost; and, advancing to Lahore, confirmed his fon, then an infant, in the government of that place, under the tuition of an experienced omrah.

The prince royal fent against Abcalla.

The great fuccefs of Abdalla, in the north-weft, began to roufe the court of Delhi. It was at last refolved, that Ali Gohar *, Allumgire's eldeft fon, should, in conjunction with Ghazi ul Dien, the vizier, march with the imperial army against the Perfians. The treasury was now empty; and the few provinces, fubject to the empire, were grievoully oppreffed for money to raife a force for this expedition. In the beginning of the year 1169, the imperial army, confifting of 80000 men, under the prince and young Ghazi, took the field. They advanced to a place called Matchiwarra, about twenty crores beyond Sirhind. They found Abdalla fo well eftablished in his new conquests, that they thought it prudent to proceed no further. The whole campaign passed in fettling a treaty of marriage, between the vizier and the daughter of Munnu. It feems that omrah, to ftrengthen his intereft at the court of Delhi, had, before his death, promifed his daughter to. Ghazi; but, after that event, both the young lady and her mother were extremely averse to the match. When the imperial army lay at Matchiwarra, the vizier inveigled both the ladies from. Lahore to the camp, and finding all intreaty was in vain to obtain, their confent, he, with peculiar baseness, closely confined them,

After fpending all the public money in this vain parade, the prince and vizier, without firiking a blow, returned to Delhi.

The caufe of this inaction of the vizier proceeded from advices which he daily received from court. The king and his faction gained strength during his absence; and he forefaw his own ruin, in cafe he should meet with a defeat from Abdalla. Upon his return to Delhi, he found it neceffary, in order to fupport his declining authority, to act with great rigor and tyranny. Some omrahs he removed with the dagger, and others he deprived of their eftates. He confined the king in the citadel, and did whatfoever he pleafed, as if he himfelf was vefted with the regal dignity Allumgire, finding himfelf in this difagreeable fituation, adopted a very dangerous plan to extricate himfelf. He wrote privately to Abdalla, to advance with his army, to relieve him from the hands of his treacherous vizier. He promised, that upon his arrival in the environs of Delhi, he should be joined by the bulk of the imperial army, under the command of Nigib ul Dowla, a Rohilla chief, to whom Ghazi had delegated his own office of buckshi, when he role to the employ of vizier. Thus the weak Allumgire, to avoid one evil, plunged headlong into greater misfortunes.

Abdalla, having received thefe affurances from the king, who marches marched from Cabul, where he then kept his court, entered Hindoftan with a great army, and, in the year 1171, appeared before Delhi. The vizier marched out with the imperial forces to

The ignorance of Ghazi of a plot fo long carried on, is a great proof of his extreme unpopularity. The confequence was, that he was obliged to throw himfelf upon the clemency of Abdalla, who had fworn vengeance against him, should he ever fall into his hands. But fuch was the address of the vizier, that he not only found means to mollify the Perfian, but even to make him his friend. He was, however, at first turned out of his office, but he was foon after reflored by Abdalla himfelf, who now difpofed of every thing, as if he was abfolute king of Delhi.

Lays the city under contribunons.

Abdalla entered the city, and laid the unfortunate inhabitants under a contribution of a crore of roupees; a sum now more difficult to raife than ten crores, in the days of Nadir Shaw. The Persian remained two months in Delhi. The unhappy Allumgire, not only found that his capital was robbed, but that he himfelf was delivered over again into the hands of a perfon, who had now added refentment to ambition and power. The Perfian, after these transactions, took the prince, Haded Buxsh, brother to the prefent emperor, as hoftage for Allumgire's future behavior; and, having forced Munnu's daughter to folemnize her marriage with Ghazi, marched towards Agra. He, on his way, laid fiege to Muttra, took it by affault; and, having facked the place, put the inhabitants to the fword, for the enormous crime of attempting to defend their lives and property. After this scene of barbarity, Abdalla advanced to Agra, which was held on the part of the king * by Fazil Chan. This omrah defended the city with fuch refolution, that Abdalla, after fustaining fome lofs, thought it prudent to raife the fiege;

The Perfian returned to a place called Muxadabad, about eight crores from Delhi. Allumgire came out to pay his refpects to him; and, by his conduct, feems to have been perfectly infatuated. When the cries of his diftreffed people reached heaven, that contemptible monarch, inflead of endeavouring to alleviate their miferies, either by force or negotiation, was wholly bent on the gratification of a fenfual appetite. The caufe of his vifit to Abdalla, was to obtain his influence and mediation with Sahibe Zimany, the daughter of the emperor Mahommed, whom he wanted to efpoufe; the princefs herfelf being averfe to the match. When kings, inflead of exerting their talents for the protection of their people, fuffer themfelves to be abforbed in indolence and fenfuality, rebellion becomes patriotifm, and treafon itfelf is a virtue.

In the mean time the news of fome incurfions from the weftern Perfia, into the territories of Abdalla, recalled that prince from India. Malleké Jehan, the widow of Mahommed, and her daughter Sahibe Zimany, claimed his protection againft Allumgire. He carried them both to Cabul, and fome time after efpoufed the daughter himfelf.—The Perfian having evacuated the imperial provinces, the vizier became more cruel and oppreffive than ever : he extorted money from the poor by tortures, and confifcated the eflates of the nobility, upon falfe or very frivolous pretences. To thefe tyrannies he was no lefs driven by the neceffity of fupporting any army to inforce his authority, than he was by the natural avidity and cruelty of his own unprincipled mind.

The emperor's folly.

Abdalla returns.

A. D. 1758. Affairs at court. The king and his eldeft fon, Ali Gohar, were, in the mean time, kept flate prifoners. The latter made his efcape in the year 1172, and levying fix thousand men at Rowari, began to raife the revenues of the adjacent territories. After he had continued this vagrant kind of life for nine months, the vizier, by the means of infidious letters, in which Ittul Raw, chief of the Mahrattors, Raja Dewali Singh, Raja Nagor Mull, and many other omrahs, fwore to protect him, inveigled him to Delhi. But, in violation of all oaths and fair promifes, he was inftantly confined by Ghazi, in the house of Alla Murda, where he remained for the space of two months.

The prince confined by the vizier. The vizier having received intelligence that the prince was privately attaching fome omrahs to his intereft, and fearing that, by their means, he might again make his efcape, determined to remove him to the citadel. He ordered a detachment of five hundred horfe to execute this fervice. The prince not only refufed to comply with the vizier's orders for his removal, but ordered the gates of the houfe to be fhut, and, with a few friends, betook himfelf to arms. The houfes of the nobility in Hindoftan are furrounded with ftrong walls; and, in fact, are a kind of fmall forts. The vizier's troops found it therefore extremely difficult to reduce the prince. He was befieged clofely for two days; and, finding that he could not defend himfelf much longer from the thoufands that furrounded the houfe, he formed the gallant refolution to cut his way through the enemy.

His gallant bthavior. He imparted his intentions to his friends, but they fhrunk from his propofal as impracticable. At laft, fix of them, feeing him refolved to attempt this defperate undertaking alone, promifed to accompany him. On the morning of the third day, they mounted their horfes within the court. The gate was fuddenly thrown

He cut his way through thousands of Ghazi's troops, with only the lofs of one of his gallant follow-Raja Ramnat, and Seid Ali, were the two principal men ers. concerned in this extraordinary exploit; the other four being Seid Ali was wounded, but four and the common horfemen. prince escaped without any hurt.

The prince having thus forced his way through the vizier's Makes his army, iffued out of the city, and arrived at a place, called Vizierabad, about fix crores from the fuburbs. Ittul Raw, the Mahrattor chief, lay encamped with ten thousand horse at Vizierabad. Ittul had been hired as a mercenary by the vizier, to fupport him in his tyrannical proceedings: but refenting Ghazi's breach of promife to the prince, and not being regularly paid, he now thought of plundering the country under the fanction of Ali Gohar's name. He received him, therefore, with very great refpect, and promifed to fupport him.

The prince, and Ittul Raw, accordingly continued, for the fpace Is joined by a of fix months, to raife contributions on the provinces to the fouth rattors. of Delhi: but as the petty chiefs of villages had, during the confusions of the empire, constructed mud forts, whither they retired with their families and effects, at the approach of danger, the Mahrattors found great difficulty in fupporting themfelves, as none of those forts could be reduced without a regular fiege, in. which they were very little skilled. Ittul Raw, tired of this kind of unprofitable war, proposed to the prince to retire to. His eyes were now turned to another quarter. Nigib ul Dowla, who had, at the king's requeft, betrayed Ghazi ul Dien to Abdalla, was, upon the reinstatement of the vizier in his office, obliged to fly to his jagier of Secundra, between the rivers, about forty crores below Delhi. The prince looked upon him as the most proper perfon to conduct his affairs. He accordingly took leave of Ittul Raw, croffed the Jumna, arrived at Secundra, and was received with great respect by Nigib ul Dowla, who, however, did not think proper to join heartily in his caufe.

Abdalla marchesagain to Delhi.

To return to the transactions at Delhi: Abdalla had no fooner fettled his affairs, than he prepared for another expedition into Hindostan. He refolved to fupport his army with the plunder of that country, and to keep them in action there for other enterprizes more arduous. He accordingly marched from Candahar, and, in the month of Ribbi ul awil, 1174, arrived in the environs of Delhi. The unhappy Allumgire applied to him for relief; and, if poffible, exaggerated his own misfortunes, and the unheard-of villainies of his vizier. He, at the fame time, by his emiffaries, stirred up factions in the army of Ghazi, who had marched out of the city to give battle to Abdalla. The difcerning mind of that minister foon penetrated into the king's machinations against him. He did not for a moment hefitate what to do; his hands had already been imbrued in blood, and he started not at murder. He refolved to take off the king, and then to let future events direct his line of action.

The vizier faw himfelf hemmed in upon all fides by enemies; he, therefore, thought it high time to affaffinate his mafter .--- He knew the weakness and superstition of the mind of Allumgire. He, therefore, trumped up a ftory concerning a Fakier, who prophefied and wrought miracles at the Kottulah of Ferofe III. The poor enthusiastic king, just as Ghazi expected, expressed a great defire to see the holy Fakier. As it would derogate from the reputation of the pretended faint, to pay a vifit, even to a king; Allumgire refolved to confer upon him that piece of respect.-But he had no sooner entered Emperor the apartment where the holy impostor fat, than two affaffins flarted from behind a curtain, cut off his head with a fcimiter, and threw his body, out of a back window, upon the fands of the Jumna. Such was the end of Allumgire, who, in an age of peace His character. and tranquillity, might have lived with fome reputation, and have died with the character of a faint. But the times required uncommon abilities in a king, and the most vigorous exertion of the manly faculties of the foul; neither of which that unhappy monarch in any degree poffeffed. IGIB UL DOWLA, who had, fome time before the A. D. 1761. affaffination of Allumgire, made up matters with the vizier, had the address to retain the office of buckshi. Shocked at the villainy of Ghazi, or defirous to transfer to himfelf the whole power, he again betrayed that minister, and went over with all his forces to Abdalla. Ghazi, in confequence of this defertion, found himfelf obliged alfo to make peace with the invader.

Transactions at Delhi.

These factions proved fatal to the unhappy Delhians. Abdalla Misfortunes of that city, laid the city under heavy contributions, and inforced the collection with fuch rigor and cruelty, that the unfortunate inhabitants, driven to defpair, took up arms. The Perfian ordered a general maffacre, which, without intermission, lasted for seven days. The relentless Durannies* were not even then glutted with flaughter, but the stench of the dead bodies drove them out of the city. A great part of the buildings were, at the fame time, reduced to ashes, and many thousands, who had escaped the fword, fuffered a lingering death by famine, fitting upon the fmoaking ruins of their own houses. Thus the imperial city of Delhi, which, in the days of its glory, extended itself feventeen crores in length, and was faid to contain two millions of people, became almost a heap of rubbish.

The Perfian marched out against them, and both armies joined battle at a place called Mudgenu Tuckia, two crores from the depopulated capital. The Mahrattors were defeated, and purfued one hundred and fifty crores from the field: but they, in the mean time, gave Abdalla the flip, turned his rear, and fet out in full march for Delhi. The Durannies, however, were fo clofe to their heels, that, before they could attempt any thing against the city, they were a fecond timeobliged to retreat.

Junction of the Mahammedans.

In the mean time news arrived, that the Mahrattor chiefs. were advancing with another very numerous army from the Decan, with a professed defign to re-establish the ancient Hindoo government. Bilfwals Raw, Baow, and Ibrahim Chan Ghardi, commanded this force, which, independent of the army of Mahrattors, whom Abdalla had already defeated, confifted of one hundred thousand horse. The Mahrattors had now entered the territories of the Jates, and fummoned Raja Sourage Mull to join them. Though Sourage Mull, as a Hindoo, wished for the extirpation of Mahommedifm in India, he was too jealous of the power of the Mahrattors, to obey their orders. Enraged at his obstinacy, they carried fire and fword through his dominions, and compelled him at last to join them with fifty thousand men.

The

ALLUMGIRE II.

The Mahrattors now confifted of two hundred thousand horse, A. D. 1761. and the Mahommedans, whom Ahmet Abdalla commanded in chief, of near one hundred and fifty thousand. The eyes of all India were now turned towards the event of a war, upon which depended, whether the fupreme power fhould remain with the Mahommedans, or revert again to the Hindoos. Upon the approach of the Mahrattors, Abdalla evacuated Delhi, and, having croffed the Jumna, encamped on the oppofite bank.

The Mahrattors immediately entered the city, and filled every Delhi pilquarter of it with devastation and death. Not content with robbing the miferable remains of Abdalla's cruelty of every thing they poffeffed, they ftripped all the males and females quite naked, and wantonly whipped them before them along the freets. Many now prayed for death, as the greatest bleffing, and thanked the hand which inflicted the wound .--- Famine begun to rage among the unfortunate citizens to fuch a degree, that men fled from their dearest friends, as from beasts of prey, for fear of being devoured. Many women devoured their own children, while fome mothers, of more humanity, were feen dead in the Areets, with infants fill fucking at their breafts .--- But let us now draw a veil over this scene of horror.

Ghazi ul Dien found, by this time, that Abdalla was become The power of? his enemy, and inclined to the interefts of Nigib ul Dowla. He clines. therefore endeavored to make up matters with the Mahrattors, but his propofals were rejected. He then turned himfelf to the Raja of the Jates, who was in the field an unwilling auxiliary to the Mahrattors, and perfuaded him to defert their caufe, and retire to his own country, whither he himfelf accompanied him. Tranfactions in Delbi. The Mahrattors, when they entered Delhi, confined Shaw Jehan, who had borne the title of royalty for a few weeks; and, to quiet the minds of fome Mahommedan omrahs, who aided them, raifed to the throne Jewan Bucht, the eldeft fon of prince Ali Gohar, who had by this time affumed the title of Shaw Allum in Behar. But this young prince, had he even abilities to reign, had now no fubjects left to command; for he may be confidered as the image of a king, fet up by way of infult in the midft of the ruins of his capital.

Abdalla's

Abdalla being informed of the defertion of the Jates, was extremely defirous of repaffing the Jumna, and to come to battle with the Mahrattors. He, for this purpose, marched up along the bank opposite to the enemy, to Kungipurra, a place of fome ftrength, poffeffed by Nizabat Chan, an independent Rohilla chief. The Perfian fummoned him to furrender, which he refused, and the place was confequently taken by affault, and the garrifon and inhabitants put to the fword .--- The Mahrattors, at the fame time, marched up upon the fide of Delhi, and, too confident of their own strength, permitted Abdalla, without opposition, to cross the Jumna, by the ford of Ramra: but observing him more bold in his motions than they expected, they became fomewhat afraid, and intrenched themfelves at Karnâl, in the very fame ground which was occupied formerly by Mahommed, while Abdalla chofe the more fortunate fituation of Nadir Shaw.

SHAW ALLUM.

Both armies lay in their entrenchments, for twelve days, fkirmishing at times with finall parties. Abdalla, in the mean time, found means to cut off fome Mahrattor convoys, with provisions, and, by the vigilance and activity of his Durannies, to prevent all fupplies from coming to the enemy's camp .--- As famine began to rage among the Mahratiors, they were necefitated to march out of their lines, upon the 20th of the fecond. Jemmad, 1174, and to offer battle to Abdalla, which he immediately accepted. The first shock was extremely violent: the Mahrattors advanced with great refolution, and charged Abdalla fword. in hand with fuch vigor, that he was upon the point of being driven off the field, when Suja ul Dowlat, well known to the British in India, and Ahmed Chan Bunguish, the Patan chief of Doab, fell upon the flank of the Mahrattors, with ten thousand horfe .---- This circumstance immediately turned the fcale of victory. Abdalla recovered from his confusion, renewed the charge, and drove back the enemy. Should we credit common. report, fifty thousand Mahrattors fell in this action, and in the purfuit : but be that as it will, the battle was extremly bloody, for all the generals of the vanquished, except Malhar Raw, who fled upon the first charge, were flain.

Abdalla, after having purfued the Mahrattors for the space of Writes to the three days returned to Delhi. He wrote from thence letters to Gohar. prince Ali Gohar, who had proclaimed himfelf king in the province of Behar, under the title of Shaw Allum, requesting him to return to Delhi, and to take upon him the management of the affairs of government. Shaw Allum was too prudent to trust himself in the hands of Abdalla, and therefore that prince, whose affairs on the fide of Persia required his presence, confirmed Jewan Bucht * upon the throne of Delhi, under the tuition of

They feized upon Camgar Chan, Zemindâr of Ferochagur, and appropriated to themfelves his wealth and territory. The minifter, upon this, took the field. The Jates advanced againft him, with a great army, under the conduct of their chief, Raja Sourage Mull. The Jates being much fuperior to the force of Nigib ul Dowla, became confident of fuccefs; fo that, when the armies approached within a few miles of one another, near Secundra, the Raja went carelefsly out, with fome of his officers, upon a hunting party. Nigib ul Dowla was not capable to cope with the Jates and their auxiliaries in the field. He fhut himfelf up in the city, where he was befieged for three months, and at last reduced to great diftress. However, a handsome present to Malhar Raw faved him upon this critical occasion. The Jates, finding themfelves betrayed by their mercenaries, were obliged to patch up a peace, and retire into their own country. These transactions happened in the year 1175 of the Higera. Nigib ul Dowla has been fince frequently attacked by the Jates to the eaft, and the Seiks to the weft, but he still maintains his ground with great refolution and ability.

But to return to the adventures of the prince Ali Gohar, Actions of the who, under the title of emperor, now reigns in the finall pro- Gohar. vince of Allahabad: we have already observed, that he, after parting with the Mahrattors, threw himfelf upon Nigib ul Dowla at Secundra. He could not, however, prevail upon that omrah to take up arms in his favor. He, therefore, left Secundra, with a small retinue of fervants, who lived at their own expence, in hopes of better days, with their prince. With thefe he arrived at Lucknow, one of the principal cities of the province of Oud, where Suja ul Dowlat kept then his court. Suja ul Dowlat received the king with feeming great refpect, and paid him royal honors; but this was only the false politeness of an Indian court; which is always lefs deficient in ceremony than in faith. It was not the interest of Suja ul Dowlat, who, by the villainies of his father, the infamous Seifdar Jung, had become an independent prince, to revive the power of the empire; he therefore declined all connection with the affairs of Ali Gohar. He, however, Ccc made Ali Gohar, in this diffreffed fituation, turned towards Allahabad. Mahommed Kuli Chan, at that time, poffeffed that city and province. Mahommed received the prince with friendthip as well as refpect; for being a man of an enterprizing genius, he entertained great hopes of railing himfelf with the fortunes of the Shaw Zadda *. After maturely deliberating upon the plan of their future operations, it was refolved, that, instead. of relieving the unfortunate Allumgire from the tyranny of Gazi at Delhi, they should endeavour to posses themselves of the provinces of Bengal and Behar, the revenues of which might enable them to support a sufficient army to reftore the power of the empire. Though the Shaw Zadda was the undoubted heir of the empire, yet, to take away every pretence of right from Jaffier Ali Chan, whom the British, on account of his villainies, had railed to the government of Bengal, he obtained a private. grant of the fubathips of the three provinces from his father at Delhi.

Every thing heing now concerted, public orders were iffued to the neighbouring rajas and fogedars, to repair to the ftandard of the Shaw Zadda; while Mahommed Kuli Chan raifed all the troops of Allahabad. Camgar Chan, one of the principal fogedars of Behar, Pulwan Singh, raja of Budgepoor, Bulbidder, raja of Amati, and many other, both Hindoo and Mahomedan chiefs, obeyed the fummons, and joined the prince. Soldiers of fortune, in the mean time, flocked to him from all quarters, for that Ali Gohar found himfelf foon at the head of fixty thousand men.

In the month of the fecond Ribbi of the year 1173, the Shaw Zadda marched from Allahabad towards Bengal. The particulars of this war are well known. Let it fuffice to mention here, that the prince was unfuccefsful in all his attempts upon Bengal; and was, at laft, obliged to furrender himfelf to the commander of the British forces, at Geiah in Behar. He received intelligence, foon after, of the affaffination of his father at Delhi. He was accordingly proclaimed emperor at Patna; but nothing being done for him, by the British, the unfortunate prince found himfelf obliged to throw himfelf into the hands of Suja ul Dowlat, who, in the absence of Kuli Chan, had seized upon the province of Allahabad. The villainy of Suja ul Dowlat did not reft there: he invited Kuli to a conference, and basely affaffinated him.

Suja ul Dowlat, having poffessed himself of the king's person, Seized by Suja ul Dowclofely confined him. He, at the fame time, mocked the un- lat. happy man with a farce of royalty, and obliged him to ratify all grants and commissions, which might ferve his own purposes. # THE PRESENT STATE OF HINDOSTAN.

HE short sketch which we have given in the preced- A. D. 1764. ing History of Hindostan, may ferve to throw light on the decline of the great empire of the Moguls in that part of the world. We faw it gradually fhrinking into itfelf, till the race of Timur are, at last, confined within the narrow limits of an infignificant province. It must, however, be allowed, that the uncommon misfortunes of that family proceeded no lefs from their own weaknefs than from the villainy of their fervants. Had a man of parts fucceeded the debility of Mahommed's government, the ancient glory of the empire might have been still restored. The revolted fubas were not, then, well eftablished in their independance; and the gallant refistance which Abdalla met with, in the reign of Ahmed, shewed that the Moguls could fill defend themfelves from foreign invations.

This, like other great flates, fell into pieces, more by do- Fallen to meftic factions than by foreign arms. Even the ministers of the metic facunfortunate Mahommed were men of parts; those who managed the affairs of Ahmed were possessed of great abilities; and, in the reign of Allumgire Sani, young Ghazi difplayed an uncommon and enterprizing genius. But virtue had fled from the land : no principle of honor, patriotifm, or loyalty, remained; great abilities produced nothing but great crimes; and the eyes of individuals being wholly intent upon private advantage, the affairs of the public fell into ruin and confusion.

As from the ruins of the extensive empire of the Moguls, Different many dependent governments have flarted up of late years, it of its ruins may may not be improper in this place, to take a curfory view of the prefent flate of Hindoftan. To begin with the northern provinces. We have already obferved, that Candahar, Cabul, Ghizni, Pifhawir, with a part of Moultan and Sind, are under the dominion of Ahmet Abdalla. That prince poffeffes alfo, upon the fide of Perfia, the greateft part of Choraffân and Seiftan, and all Bamia, on that of Tartary. Abdalla, in fhort, reigns over almoft all the countries which formed the empire of Ghizni, before it defcended from the mountains of Afganiftân to Lahore and Delhi. It is highly probable that, as Kerim Chan has fettled the weftern Perfian, he may foon extend the empire to its ancient boundaries towards the eaft, and drive Abdalla into Hindoftan; fo that a third dynafty of kings of India may arife from among the Afgans.

Achmet Abdalla. The revenues of Abdalla are very confiderable, amounting to about three crores of roupees. But as he is always in the field, and maintains an army of 100,000 horfe, to defend himfelf from the Perfians and Tartars, he is in great diffrefs for money. This circumftance obliges him, not only to opprefs his own fubjects, but alfo to carry his depredations to foreign countries. During the competition of the feven confpirators for the throne of Perfia, Abdalla had little to fear from that quarter. But as Kerim Chan has eftablifhed himfelf, by the defeat and death of his rivals, it is extremely probable, that Abdalla will foon feel, as we have already obferved, the weight of his arms, as Chorraffân and Seiftan are properly provinces of the Perfian empire.

His political ficuation.

However, Abdalla is, at prefent at peace with Kerim, and has taken that favorable opportunity for invading Hindoftan. He had, in April 1767, defeated the Seiks in three different actions.

SHAW ALLUM.

actions, and advanced to Sirhind, about forty crores from Delhi, with an army of fifty thousand horse. It is supposed that Nigib ul Dowla, who, in the name of the present emperor's son, manages the affairs of Delhi, had, as he himfelf was hard preffed by the Seiks and Jates, called in Abdalla, to take upon him the government. Nigib ul Dowla, by our best intelligence, marched out of the city to meet his ally, with forty thousand men. The armies lay in fight of one another, and they were bufy in negotiation, and in fettling a plan for their future operations. Abdalla, in the mean time wrote circular letters to all the princes of India, commanding them to acknowledge him. KING OF KINGS, and demanding a tribute. Suja ul Dowlat, in particular, had received a very sharp letter from him, upbraiding him for his alliance with INFIDELS, and demanding the imperial revenues, which that fuba had converted to his own use for fome years back.

Such was the fituation of the affairs of Abdalla, by our His character. last accounts from Delhi. This prince is brave and active, but he is now in the decline of life. His perfon is tall and robuft, and inclinable to being fat. His face is remarkably broad, his beard very black, and his complexion moderately fair. His appearance, upon the whole, is majeflic, and expressive of an uncommon dignity and firength of mind. Though he is not fofierce and cruel as Nadir Shaw, he fupports his authority with no lefs rigor, and he is by no means lefs brave than that extraordinary monarch. He, in short, is the most likely perfon now" in India, to reftore the ancient power of the empire, should he affume title of king of Delhi.

The SEIKS border upon the Indian dominions of Abdalla. The Seike, That nation, it is faid, take their name of SEIKS, which fignifies fies DISCIPLES, from their being followers of a certain philofopher of Thibet, who taught the idea of a commonwealth, and the pure doctrine of Deifin, without any mixture of either the Mahommedan or Hindoo fuperflitions. They made their first appearance about the commencement of this century, in the reign of Bahadar Shaw, but were rather reckoned then a particular fect than a nation. Since the empire began to decline, they have prodigioufly increafed their numbers, by admitting profelytes of all religions, without any other ceremony than an oath, which they tender to them, to oppofe monarchy.

The conflitution of their government.

The Seiks are, at prefent, divided into feveral ftates, which in their internal government are perfectly independent of one another, but they form a powerful alliance against their neighbors. When they are threatened with invafions, an affembly of the states is called, and a general chosen by them, to lead their respective quotas of militia into the field; but, as soon as peace is reftored, the power of this kind of dictator ceafes, and he returns, in a private capacity, to his own community. The Seiks are now in poffeffion of the whole province of Punjab, the greatest part of Moultan and Sind, both the banks of the Indus from Cashmire to Tatta, and all the country towards Delhi, from Lahore to Sirhind. They have, of late years, been a great check upon the arms of Abdalla; and, though in the courfe of the last year they have been unfuccessful against that prince in three actions, they are, by no means fubdued, but continue a fevere clog upon his ambitious views in India.

Their chiefs and force. The chief who leads at prefent the army of the Seiks, is Jeffarit Singh; there is also one Nitteh Singh, who is in great efteem among them. They can, upon an emergency, muster 60000 good horfe; but, though in India they are efteemed brave brave, they chufe rather to carry on their wars by furprize and firatagem, than by regular operations in the field. By their principles of religion and government, as well as on account of national injuries, they are inveterate enemies to Abdalla, and to the Rohilla powers.

To the east of the dominions of the republic of the Seiks lie Rohiffas; the countries which are possefield by the Rohilla Afgans. Nigib ul Dowla, whose history is comprehended in the preceding fections, is, from his power, as well as from the strength of his councils and his own bravery, reckoned their prince. He possefiels the city of Delhi, in the name of the family of Timur, together with a considerable territory around it, on both the banks of the Jumna, and his revenue amounts to one crore of roupees. He publickly acknowledged the unfortunate Shaw Allum, atAllahabad, king, and allows a pension to his fon Jewan Bucht, who, without any power maintains a kind of regal dignity at Delhi.

Nigib ul Dowla has been known, when hard prefied by his hoftile neighbours, to raife 60000 horfe; but his revenues are not fufficient to fupport one tenth part of that number. He continues to take the field under the name of captain-general of the Mogul empire; and though he has not the power, or perhaps the inclination to affift the king, he keeps up a friendly correspondence with him, and, without any neceffity, profess obedience and a shew of loyalty.

Befides Nigib ul Dowla, there are chiefs of the Rohilla race, who are perfectly independent; but when danger preffes, they unite with him their forces. The most respectable of these chiefs is Hasiz Rhimut, who posses a considerable district between the rivers. The next to him, in power, is Doondi Chan; and D d d with Nigib ul Dowla their chief.

Other Rohilla chiefs.

with him we may number Mutta Huffein, Jacob Ali Chan, Fatte Chan Zurein, and others of lefs note, who command independent tribes beyond the Ganges to the north of Delhi.

Their force.

The whole power of the Rohillas may amount to 100,000 horfe, and an equal number of infantry, upon an emergency; but thefe are fo wretchedly appointed and ill paid, that they furnish more of ridicule, than they can impress of terror in the field. Their infantry are armed with rockets, pointed with iron,, which they discharge in vollies among cavalry, which frighten more with their noise and uncommon appearance, than by the execution which they make. The Rohillas are remarkable for nothing more than their natural antipathy to the Mahrattors; which might be turned to advantage by the British in their future views upon Hindostan: but the truth is, that the Hindoos and Mahommedans so equally ballance one another in that country, that by supporting one, we may, with great facility, command. both.

Principality of Ferochabad. There is a finall government of the Patans to the eaft of the Rohilla tribes. Their diffrict is bounded by the dominions of the prefent king, by those of Sujah ul Dowlat, and by the territories of the Jates. The capital of this petty principality is Ferochabad, which is fituated upon the banks of the Ganges, a few erores above the ruins of the celebrated city of Kinnoge. Ahmed Chan Bunguish, who made a great figure against Seifdar Jung, the father of Suja ul Dowlat, rules over this district. Ahmed is more distinguished by his abilities and perfonal bravery, than by the extent of his power. His revenues do not exceed fifty lacks; but he always keeps a standing force of two or three thousand good horse, which he pays well; and, upon an emergency, he raises all his vassals, who consist of about 20000 men. His country country is full of forts; and he has, confequently been hitherto able to defend himfelf against the Mahrattors, Jates, and Suja ul Dowlat, who have respectively invaded his dominions.

The city of Agra, and a very confiderable tract of country The Jates. round it, extending along the Jumna, from forty crores below that city to within five of Delhi, and ftretching back to Gualier and Barampulla, are now in the hands of a Hindoo nation, called the Jates. The raja, who commands the Jates, is defeended of the ancient race of the Jits, who poffeffed the banks of the Indus, as far back as the reign of Mahmood of Ghizni. From their prince, the whole body of the Jates, though made up of many diftinct tribes and fects, take their name; but others, with lefs probability, trace it to JATE, which in the Hindoo language fignifies a labourer.

The Jates made no figure in the Mogul empire, as a nation, Their origin, till the reign of Allumgire, commonly known in Europe by the name of Aurungzebe. In that monarch's expedition to the Decan, they were first heard of as a gang of banditti, under an intrepid fellow, called Chura Mun. They were then fo daring as to harrafs the rear of the imperial army. After the death of Allumgire, the Jates took advantage of the growing imbecility of the empire, and fortifying themfelves among the hills of Narvar, fpread their depredations to the gates of Agra. Mokun Singh, who, after the death of Chura Mun, commanded the Jates; took upon himfelf the title of Raja. Their power increafed under Bodun Singh and Sourage Mull, which last was dignified with titles from the emperor.

Dddz

Joahir

Prefent state.

Joahir Singh, the fon of Sourage Mull, now reigns over the Jates, and is a very weak prince. His revenues do not exceed two crores of roupees; his dominions, like the reft of India, being harraffed by the Mahrattors. He may, upon fome occafions, be able to bring into the field fixty or feventy thoufand men, but he cannot keep long in pay one third of that number. The dominions of the Jates abound with flrong fortreffes, fuch as Dieg, Cumbere, and Aliver; in one of which their prince frequently refides, though he fpends the most part of his time at Agra.

Raja of Joinagur. To the fouth-weft of the Jates, Mudoo Singh, an Indian raja, poffeffes a very confiderable territory, and refides for the moft part at Joinagur. He is the fon of Joy Singh, a prince famous for his knowledge in aftronomy, and other mathematical fciences. He entertained above a thoufand learned brahmins for fome years, in reftifying the kalendar, and in making new tables for the calculation of eclipfes, and for determining the longitude and declination of the ftars.—The revenues of Mudoo Singh are not very confiderable, being reckoned only eighty lacks; his dominions being woody, mountainous, and confequently ill cultivated. He can, however, raife forty thoufand men; and he himfelf is. effeemed a good foldier.

Marwar.

Bordering upon Mudoo Singb, upon the frontiers of the Decan, is the extensive country of Marwar, ruled at prefent, by Bija Singh, the fon of Bucht Singh, and grandson of Jeffawind Singh. Marwar, when the empire was in a flourishing condition, yielded annually five crores of roupees: at prefent its revenues do not amount to half that fum, on account of the incession depredations. of the Mahrattors, its next neighbours.

The

The next Hindoo government to Marwar, is that of Odipour. Odipour; The raja of this country is diffinguished by the name of Rana. That prince, more from his nobility of family than from his power, assumes a superiority over all the rajas of Hindostan. His dominions were formerly very extensive, but, of late years, they have been circumscribed within narrower bounds. His territories abound with mountains and forefts, and are almost furrounded by the kingdoms of Malava and Guzerat. His revenues are inconfiderable, and he cannot bring into the field above fifteen thousand men .--- In the vallies between the mountains of Odipour, there are many petty independent rajas; Bundi, Cottu, Rupnagur, Jeffelmere, and Bianere, being governed by their respective princes, each of whom can muster fix or eight thoufand men.

The Mahrattors are the most confiderable Hindoo power in Mahrattors. Hindostan. The principal feat of their government is Sattarah, and fometimes Puna, on the coaft towards Bombay. Though the genuine Mahrattors all over India do not exceed 60000 men, vet, from their fuperior bravery and fuccefs in depredation, thousands of all tribes enlist themselves under their banners. Thefe, instead of pay, receive a certain proportion of the plunder. By this means an army of Mahrattors increases like a river, the farther it advances; fo that it is no uncommon thing for a force of ten or twelve thousand genuine Mahrattors to grow into 100,000, before they arrive in the place which they defline to plunder. to address of the second of the same of the second of the

The prefent chief of the Mahrattors is Ragenot Raw, the Their chiefs fon of Bagiraw. He possesses one half of Guzerat, and all the territories between that province and the Decan. He has, of late years, extended his conquests to all the provinces of Malava, and

and to a part of Allahabad; having reduced Himmut Singh, raja of Gualier, Anarid Singh, raja of Badawir, Anarid Singh, of Chunderi, and the princes of Dittea, Orcha, Elichpoor, Bandere, and Jaffey; all of whom have become tributary to the Mahrattors. They have, moreover, poffeffed themfelves of Oriffa, which ought, in propriety, to be annexed to the fubafhip of Bengal, according to the late grant of the king to the Britifh. Thus the dominions of the Mrhrattors extend quite acrofs the peninfula of India, from the bay of Bengal to the gulph of Cambait or Cambay.

Their revenucs. The amount of the revenues of the Mahrattors cannot eafily be afcertained. They muft, however, be very confiderable. They fubfift their armies by depredations on their neighbors, and are become the terror of the Eaft, more on account of their barbarity than their valour. They never want a pretence for hoftilities. They demand the Chout, or fourth part of the revenues of any province; and, in cafe of a refufal, they invade, plunder, and lay wafte the country. Their horfes being very hardy, their incurfions are fudden, unexpected, and dreadful. They generally appoint a place of rendezvous, and their invafions are carried on by detached parties. Should a confiderable force at any time oppofe them, they decline coming to action; and, as they invigorate their hardy horfes with opium, their flight, like their incurfions, is very expeditious.

Forces.

The armies of the Mahrattors do not, like the troops of other Indian powers, incumber themfelves with bazars or markets. They truft for their fubfiftence to the countries through which they march. They are armed with firelocks, fome with matchlock guns, and others with bows, fpears, javelins, fwords and daggers. They have, within three years back, made fome advances towards towards forming a disciplined army of infantry. They have, accordingly, at present, ten or twelve battalions of Seapoys, uniformly cloathed and armed .--- All the powers of India being now fenfible of the advantages which the British have gained by disciplined infantry, turn their thoughts to a similar regulation in their armies, and to improve their artillery, which was formerly too unweildy and ill-mounted, to be of any fervice in the field.

To the east of Malava, and to the fouth of Allahabad, is the Bundelcund. country of Bundelcund, governed by Hindoput. His territories are of a confiderable extent and very fertile, and he moreover draws great wealth from his diamond mines of Hieragur and Punagur. He also claims a right to the mines of Sommelpour, but another raja poffeffes them at prefent .--- The annual revenues of Hindoput amount to near two crores of roupees, including the profits arifing from his mines. These he farms out to merchantadventurers, who purchase a certain number of superficial feet: of ground, and they are permitted to dig down perpendicularly as far as they pleafe. Diamonds beyond a certain weight are the property of the prince, who has infpectors, to fuperintend. the works.

The raja of Bundelcund possefies the impregnable fortress of Its raja tribu-Callinger, and feveral other confiderable ftrong holds. He has, Mahrattors. notwithstanding, been obliged to compound for a certain tribute with the Mahrattors, who generally paid him an annual vifit. Between Bundelcund and Cattack, in Oriffa, lie the rajaships of Patna and Sommelpour, which are not very confiderable; the country being mountainous, woody, and unhealthy, and the inhabitants barbarous in every respect.

Part:

Shaw Allum the prefent * Mogul.

Part of the province of Allahabad is now poffefied by SHAW ALLUM, by birthright and title, though nothing lefs fo in power, emperor of Hindostan. He keeps the poor refemblance of a court at Allahabad, where a few ruined omrahs, in hopes of better days to their prince, having expended their fortunes in his fervice, fill exift the ragged penfioners of his poverty, and burthen his gratitude with their presence. The districts of Korah and Allahabad, in the king's poffession, are rated at thirty lacks, which is one half more than they are able to bear. Inftead of gaining by this bad policy, that prince, unfortunate in many respects, has the mortification to fee his poor fubjects opprefied by those who farm the revenue, while he himself is obliged to compound with the farmers for half the ftipulated fum. Befides the revenue arifing from Allahabad and Korah, which we may at a medium eftimate at twelve lacks, the British pay to the king twenty-fix lacks out of the revenues of Bengal; which is all Shaw Allum possefies to support the dignity of the imperial house of Timur .--- It may not, perhaps, be unacceptable to the public, to delineate, in this place, the character of that unfortunate prince.

His character.

SHAW ALLUM is robuilt in his perfon, and about fix feet high. His complexion is rather darker than that which was common to the race of Timur, and his countenance is exprefive of the melancholy which naturally arofe from his many misfortunes. He poffeffes perfonal courage; but it is of the paffive kind, and may be rather called fortitude to bear adverfity, than that daring boldnefs which loves to face danger.---He has been fo often difinounted in the courfe of ambition, that he now fears to give it the rein; and feems lefs defirous to make any efforts to retrieve the power of his family, than to live quietly under the the fhadow of its eclipfed majefty .- His clemency borders upon weaknefs, and his good-nature has totally fubverted his authority. He is daily induced, by importunity, to iffue out orders which he takes no means to enforce, and which, he is certain, will not be obeyed. From this blemish in the character of Shaw Allum, arofe the half of his misfortunes; for the great fecret of eftablishing authority, is to give no orders which cannot be inforced, and rather to fuffer fmall injuries, than fhew refentment, without the power of punishing.

His generofity is more than equal to his abilities, and too He is too much addicted to women, and often ill bestowed. takes more pains to maintain his Haram, than to fupport an army .- But though we cannot call him a great prince, we must allow him to be a good man. His virtues are many; but they are those of private life, which never appear with luftre upon a throne. His judgment is by no means weak; but his paffions are not ftrong : the eafinefs of his temper is therefore moulded like wax by every hand; and he always gives up his own better opinion for those of men of inferior parts .- He is affable in his conversation, but feldom descends to pleafantry. Upon the whole, though Shaw Allum is by no means qualified to reftore a loft empire, he might have maintained it with dignity in profperous times, and transmitted his name, as a virtuous prince, to posterity. It is with great regret that the author, from his regard to truth, cannot fpeak more favourably of a prince, to whom his gratitude and attachment are due, for repeated teftimonies of his efteem and friendship.

The territories of Suja ul Dowlat, who poffeffes the province Suja ul Dowof Oud, border upon those of the king. His revenues amount to near two crores of roupees, out of which he pays nothing to Fee the emperor, though he pretends to recognize his title as his fovereign. Since his defeat at Buxar, Suja ul Dowlat attends very much to the difcipline of his army, and the proper regulation of his finances. He has already formed ten battalions of Seapoys, and has made great improvements in his artillery. When the news of Abdalla's late invafion came, he levied twelve thoufand horfe, upon a better footing than is generally practifed in Hindoftan. He is now the ally of the Britith in India, and as his revenues will never enable him to fupport himfelf in the field againft them, it is probable his principle of fear, for he has none of honour or gratitude, will make him fland to the letter of the treaty.

His character.

Suja ul Dowlat is extremely handfome in his perfon; about five feet eleven inches in height, and fo nervous and ftrong, that, with one ftroke of the fabre, he can cut off the head of a buffalo. He is active, paffionate, ambitious ; his penetrating eye feems, at first fight, to promife uncommon acuteness and fire of mind: but his genius is too volatile for depth of thought; and he is confequently more fit for the manly exercises of the field, than for deliberation in the clofet .- Till of late he gave little attention to bufinefs. He was up before the fun, mounted his horfe, rushed into the forest, and hunted down tigers or deer till the noon of day. He then returned, plunged into the cold bath, and fpent his afternoons in the Haram among his women .--Such was the bias of Suja ul Dowlat's mind till the late war. Ambitious without true policy, and intoxicated with the paffions of youth, he began a wild career, in which he was foon checked. Stung with the lofs of reputation, his paffions have taken another courfe. His activity is employed in difciplining his army, and he now fpends more time at the comptoir of his finances, than in dallying with the ladies of the feraglio. His authority therefore, fore, is effablished, his revenues increased, and his army on a respectable footing. But, with all his splendid qualities, he is cruel, treacherous, unprincipled, deceitful : carrying a specious appearance, purposely to betray, and when he embraces with one hand, will stab with the other to the heart. Together with being heir to the fruits of his father's crimes, he inherits all his latent baseness of mind; for, if we except perfonal courage, he possibles not one virtue more than Seifdar Jung.

The province of Oud is fituated to the north-eaft of the Ganges, bordering upon Behar, from which it is, on the one fide, divided by the river Deo, or Gagera, and on the other by the Carumnaffa. The country is level, well cultivated and watered. It is divided, on the north, by a chain of mountains from Thibet. In the vallies, which interfect that immenfe ridge of hills, there are feveral independent rajas, too inconfiderable to be formidable to Suja ul Dowlat.

The provinces of Bengal and Behar are poffeffed by the British Bengal. East-India company, in reality, by the right of arms, though, in appearance, by a grant from the prefent emperor. This is not a proper place to enter into particulars concerning those provinces: it may fuffice to obferve, that Bengal and Behar, including what is called the company's lands and duties upon merchandize, yielded in April, 1766, 33,025,968 Sicca roupees. The expences of government, the tribute to the king, and a penfion to a nabob, fet up on account of the villanies of his father, amounted to 22,450,000 roupees, and confequently the balance in favour of the company was 10,575,968 roupees, or 1,321,994 l. 15s. of our money .- The British force in Bengal confifts of three battalions of Europeans, and thirty of Seapoys, regularly armed, disciplined, and uniformly cloathed; so that we Eec 2 we are much fuperior, even upon that establishment, to any other power at prefent in Hindostan.

Nabob of Arcot.

In the Decan the British are almost as powerful as in Bengal. We fupport Mahommed Ali, as nabob of the Carnatic, and he defrays the expence of our army, in defence of his own country. There is, in a manner, no feparate intereft, between the nabob and the company. It is from him they derive their confequence in the Carnatic, and it is, by their force. he is maintained in his government. Mahommed, till of late, kept in pay a body of troops, which, from their expence and want of difcipline, he has been prevailed upon to reduce to a fmall number. His nabobihip being guarantied to him, by the late definitive treaty between Great Britain and France, he poffeffes a greater fecurity of power than any other prince in Afia. The character of Mahommed has recommended him fo much to the prefent Mogul, that that prince has given him a perpetual grant of the government of that immenfe country, extending from the river Chriftna to cape Comorin.

His character.

Mahommed Ali Chan is five feet ten inches high; well proportioned and of an engaging afpect. His eye is full, lively and penetrating; his features are expressive of sensibility and a noble disposition of mind. His manner attaches the stranger to him; and commands the friend. The first rarely sees him, without feeling an immediate interest in his welfare; and the latter has never been known to defert him. Calm, affable, and full of dignity, he has improved the elevated passions of the Afiatic, with what is amiable in the character of the European. The duplicity of the east is lost in the good heart of Mahommed. He is possessing the ambition, without any one of those vices, which too frequently attend that passion; and his policy is never unworthy unworthy of the magnanimity of a virtuous prince.---" A great "man," fays Mahommed Ali, "may conceal his fentiments, but ought never to deceive. It was my fortune to place the "way of rectitude before me, in my youth, and I never deviated into the paths of deception. I met the Britifh with that opennefs, which they love; and it is my honor, as well as fecurity, to be the ally of a nation composed of princes." This was his declaration, at the conclusion of the late war, when he was put in peaceable possefition of the Carnatic; and these were his fentiments when, at the head of his father's army, he rejected the offers of France, and faved the very being of the company, by raising the fiege of Fort St. David.

Mahommed has frequently experienced the fucceffive extremes of fortunes; and that circumstance has manifestly affected his fpirits. A fimilar folicitude of fituation, with other nabobs, who have fallen facrifices to their own ambition or the iniquitous avarice of European, has imprefied an affecting melancholy on his mind. His joy is confequently, at times, the more exquifite; and the appearance of a friend, in whom he could confide in his diftrefs, has been known to overwhelm him more than the lofs of a battle. The greatest encomium upon his character, is his being able to have ftruggled, with fuccefs, during the fpace of eighteen years against the avaricious and revengeful passions of Europeans, without losing his dominions, or forfeiting his faith to the British nation .- Mahommed has five fons. They are instructed in the languages and manners of Europe; and from their natural genius and education they promife, one day, to make a figure in India.

The author of this hiftory is indebted, for the above character of Mahommed, to a perfon, who had a perfect view of the original.

original. That prince is fo well known and fo much effected in Europe, that the curfory mention made of him, was a great defect in the first edition. The author, though no firanger to Mahommed's merit and fituation, was not perfectly informed; and he chofe to pafs flightly over a character, which he could not delineate either from perfonal knowledge or certain intelligence from others. The Carnatic has lately been an important fcene of war; and the circumftance of the nabob of Arcot being the first Afiatic prince, who had his dominions guarantied to him in Europe, renders him an object of public attention, exclusive of his unfullied reputation, for honor and fidelity to the British nation.

Nizam.

The power of the Nizam, who refides at Hydrabad, though he poffeffes all the province of Golconda, is, of late, very much circumfcribed. He, however, flill maintains an army of 60 or 70,000 men; but without difcipline, and ill paid, they are by no means formidable. He, fome time ago, entered into a treaty with the Britifh, but he has of late fhewn no difpolition to adhere to it long.

Hyder-Naig, now known by the name of Hyder Ali. Hyder-Naig, a foldier of fortune, who, by his perfonal merit, raifed himfelf from a low flation to the fovereignty of almost all the coaft of Malabar, has by his abilities in the cabinet, as well as by his valour in the field, rendered himfelf extremely formidable to the British in Hindostan. The character which the author received of him in India enabled him to foretel, in the preceding edition, the figure which he has fince made; though no man could forefee the difpirited politics of our councils on the coaft. After managing the war with uncommon abilities, Hyder, by a stroke of generalship, obtained a peace, which our manifest fuperiority had no excuse to grant. As the last desperate push of his fortunes, he turned the rear of our armies, and presented himfelf himself before Madrafs. We were alarmed, as if his horse had wings to fly over our walls. We complied with his infolent demands; and our army, which was in full march after him, was ordered not to advance a ftep. Friendship was made with the lion for bravely ftruggling when he found himfelf entangled in the toils.

A current of many victories will not be able to wash away the flain which this treaty has affixed to the British character in India. The peace however which we obtained will not be lafting. Hyder, who has fome title to the name of Ali, or the fublime, which he has affumed, has already turned his arms against the Mahrattors; and, by the laft advices from Puna, he has worfted thefe Marauders in feveral engagements. They are, however, on account of their numbers and their predatory manner of war, very formidable to Hyder; and, in fpite of all his efforts, they wasted his dominion when they durft not meet him face to face on the field. Their force, according to the beft accounts, confifts of 60,000 horfe, 65,000 foot, 10,000 for the use of the artillery, and 400 elephants. If the sort that years are not sold on the sold in the the Minimum and an School and the Island and and the

The low flate of Hyder-Ali's finances, and the ravages committed in his dominions, induced him in January 1770 to offer even to purchafe a peace at the enormous expence of two millions five hundred thousand pounds of our money. This fum was rejected by Madeo-Raw, the chief of the Mahrattor ariftocracy, who absolutely refused to close with any terms, till Hyder-Ali should evacuate all his conquefts on the coaft of Malabar. Hyder would not comply with these exorbitant demands, and, in the mean time, took his measures fo well, that he has hemmed in, by the last accounts, the immense army of the Mahrattors in a fweep. of the river Tungbudra: In

In the month of March 1770, the Mahrattor army was in this difastrous fituation. They had fcarce a month left to determine their fate, as their provisions were gradually decreasing, and the rains fwelling the rivers apace. Hyder, in the mean time, by his emissaries, fomented divisions in their camp. There arofe great diffentions among their chiefs, as is generally the cafe in every nation when the affairs of the public are in an untoward fituation. The common foldiers in particular, together with many leaders, remonstrated against the confinement of Raja-Baw, the uncle of the commanding Prince. Hyder by his public declarations abets the faction ; he exalts to the fkies the abilities of Raja-Baw, and pretends to fear his enlargement. This piece of political art and refinement has had its effect; and if it does not occasion a revolution in the Mahrattor state, it will, at leaft, bring Hyder with reputation out of a very deftructive war with those Marauders.

Nor does Hyder-Ali confine his thoughts to the trophies of the field. He has extended his ambition with fuccefs to the cabinets of the neighbouring powers. By intrigues in the court of the Nizam he has raifed his brother to the command of that prince's armies; fo that a revolution in Golconda feems to roll within his mind.

His character.

Hyder-Ali is an extraordinary character, even in a country where men have an ample field for the exertion of great talents. With all the vigour of his councils he can neither read or write; but these qualifications are not effential to a military genius, nor can learning give firength of mind. He is possefield of a furprifing memory, deep penetration, quickness of resolution, great perfeverance, conduct aided by personal courage, andthat inexorable temper of mind, whether from policy or disposition, that never forgives a crime. In his Durbar, where he fmokes his HUCCA, he pronounces fentence of death by waving his hand; or if he uses words upon the occasion, they are only these --- TAKE HIM AWAY. He thinks no more of the fubject, but proceeds coolly to other bufinefs. Notwithflanding this fummary kind of barbarous justice, his decisions are generally equitable : he is feared, obeyed, and beloved.

If men are juftly faid to be conquered first in their own imagi- Obfervations, nations, they are certainly kept in fubjection by the means which The circumftance which threw the reduced them to obedience. difcipline of Europe into our hands, enabled us to fubdue the Indians with their own domestic force; and they ascribed to our abilities, what was the refult of accident. Had our address in the cabinet continued to us the reputation which our arms had acquired in the field, the observations which the first edition of this work conveyed concerning the conquest of India, could not be deemed either visionary or impracticable. The charm is now broke; Hyder-Ali has difcovered that we are not invincible; and that knowledge is of itfelf fufficient to circumfcribe our power. It cannot however be altogether out of place to continue to the public the opinions which the author had formed to himfelf in the year 1767, from an accurate furvey of the political flate of India, at that period.

Thus have we, in a few words, endeavoured to give a general General reidea of the prefent state of Hindostan. The reflexions which sterions. naturally arife from the fubject, might fwell this work into a volume. It is apparent, however, from what has been faid, that the immense regions of Hindostan might be all reduced by a handful of regular troops .--- Ten thousand European infantry, together with the Seapoys in the company's fervice, are not only Fff fufficient to conquer all India, but, with proper policy, to maintain it, for ages, as an appendage of the British crown.—This position may, at first fight, appear a paradox, to people unacquainted with the genius and disposition of the inhabitants of Hindostan; but to those who have considered both with attention, the thing seems not only practicable, but easy.

That flavery and opprefion, which the Indians fuffer from their native princes, make the juffice and regularity of a Britifh government appear to them in the moft favourable light. The great men in the country have no more idea of patriotifin, than the meaneft flaves; and the people can have no attachment to chiefs whom they regard as tyrants. Soldiers of fortune are fo numerous in India, that they comprehend one fourth of the inhabitants of that extensive country. They are never paid one third of the flipulated fum, by the princes of Hindoftan, which renders them mutinous and difcontented; but they would moft certainly approve themfelves obedient, faithful, and brave, in the fervice of a power who fhould pay them regularly.

In a country like India, where all religions are tolerated, the people can have no objection to the Britifh, on account of theirs. The army might be composed of an equal number of Mahommedans and Hindoos, who would be a check upon one another, while a fmall body of Europeans would be a fufficient check upon both. The battalions ought to be commanded altogether by European officers, who, if they do their duty properly, and behave with juffice to their men, may attach them to their perfons, with ftronger ties than any troops born in Europe. But if juffice is not obferved to foldiers, human nature, in this, as in all countries, will and muft revolt againft opprefion.

At prefent, the black officers of the Seapoys must rife from the ranks. This is found policy, and ought to be continued. Men of family and influence are deterred, by this circumstance, from entering into the fervice. These officers are, therefore, entirely our creatures, and will never defert a people, among whom alone they can have any power; for no acquired discipline will give weight to a mean man, fufficient to bring to the field an army of Indians.

The advantages of a conqueft of Hindoftan to this country are obvious. It would pay as much of the national debt, as government should pleafe to discharge. Should the influx of wealth raife the price of the neceffaries and conveniences of life, the poor, on the other hand, by being eafed of most of their taxes, would be more able to purchase them .- But, fay fome grave moralist, how can fuch a fcheme be reconciled to justice and humanity ?- This is an objection of no weight .- Hindoftan is, at prefent, torn to pieces by factions. All laws, divine and human, are trampled under foot .- Inftead of one tyrant, as in the times of the empire, the country now groans under thoufands; and the voice of the opprefied multitude reaches heaven. It would, therefore, be promoting the caufe of juffice and humanity, to pull those petty tyrants from the height to which their villanies have raifed them, and to give to fo many millions of mankind, a government founded upon the principles of virtue and juffice.- The tafk is no lefs glorious than it is practicable; for it might be accomplished with half the blood which is often expended, in Europe, upon an ideal fystem of a balance of power, and in commercial wars, which must be attended with little eclat, as they are deftitute of firiking and beneficial confequences.

This Day is published, in Ten Volumes Swo, Price 21. 125. 6d. Jewed, or Three Guineas bound and lettered, Dedicated, by Permiffion, to the Right Hon. Arthur O.flow, Elq; late Speaker of the House of Commons; recommended by him from the Chair; encouraged by the present Speaker, and many of the Members of the late and present Parliament, DEBATES in the HOUSE of COMMONS, from 1667 to 1694, never before printed; comprehending Fifty Times more of the fecret Deliberations of the Houfe, than all the Accounts of Debates for the fame Time, that have yet appeared. Collected by the HON. ANCHITEL GREY, Efq; who was Thirty Years Member for Derby, and Chairman of feveral Committees.

To the P U B L I C.

The Importance of these Debates may be easily conjectured by the Dates from 1667 to 1694; a Period of Time remarkable for the Multitude of Schemes which were formed, the Variety of Events produced, the Diversity of Interests which prevailed; the Struggles between Prerogative and Privilege, the Outeries of Abhorence and Profecution, Efforts against Popery and Arbitrary Power, the Number of Plots and Confpiracies, either real or imaginary; Impeachments of Ministers, Attempts to set aside the Heir of the Crown, the Expulsion of a King, and the Re-establishment of the Confliction.

An authentic Reprefentation, therefore, of the Part which the Houfe of Commons bare in those momentous Affairs, must naturally fix the Attention, and raife the Expectation, of every Man of Fortune in the Kingdom, who defires to view the Gradations of these memorable Events, to trace Revolutions to their Caules, and to know to what Names the Nation is indebted for its Honour and its Liberty; Informations that cannot be eafily obtained, but from this Collection; in which the Names of the Speakers are at length, and the Reader is led forward from Day to Day, and from Quefition to Quefition, and enjoys the View of all the Variations of that uncertain Time; observes the Birth, the Progress, the Maturity of Defigns, sees the Colours of Party change before him, and Patriotism fink in one Year, and rise in another-

Several Notes also are added, to illustrate the above Collection, from the Hiftory of the Times, giving fome Account of the principal Speakers.

AVING purchased the remaining Copies of that most elegant and magnificent Work, the

FABLES DE LA FONTAINE,

Printed at Paris, in four Vol. Folio,

They now propose them to the Public st only eight Guineas in Sheets, being Half the original Price. This Edition, which cost the Artifls near twenty

This Edition, which coft the Artifis near twenty Years Labour, and the Proprietors upwards of 14,000 l. Sterling, is undoubtedly one of the moft fuperb Monuments ever erected to the Memory of an Author.

To the Beauty this Work derives from the Printing-Prefs, is alfo added the capital Embellifhment of no lefs than Two Hundred and Seventy-Six Copper-Plates the Defigns applicable to the Subjects, drawn after Nature, by Oudry, one of the moft celebrated Painters France ever produced for delineating the Animal Creation. The Engravings by the moft expert Artifls in their feveral Departments, under the Direction of the celebrated M. Cochin ; who revised and superintended the whole.

La Fontaine's Life is prefixed, containing many Anecdotes of that exquisite Fabulist, not to be met with elsewhere.

* It is proposed to keep open the Subscription, at the above low Price, till the first Day of June next, after which, if any Copies should remain, the Price will be confiderably advanced. Such Ladies and Gentlemen who are defirous of being possessed of this magnificent Work, are requested to favour the Proprietors with their Commands.
